NEW YORK TO ASHEVILLE.

A reduced railroad rate of $23.72 for the round trip has now been secured from New York to Asheville. No certificates are necessary; through round trip tickets to destination will be issued at the figure named, $23.72. Sleeping car berth from Washington to Asheville costs $3.

The New York delegation will leave on Monday, August 18, by the 10:10 a. m. train, via Pennsylvania Railroad. This will enable the eastern delegates to join those from Philadelphia and other points en route to Washington, at which city a special train will be made up arriving in Asheville about 5:30 a. m., Tuesday, August 19.

No more favorable rate concession has ever before been granted to S. A. F. delegates than that given by the Southern Railway Company, and a large eastern representation should result.

Delegates intending to travel with the New York party should at once notify any one of the Florists' Club's transportation committee, which is composed of Messrs. Alex. Wallace, Box 1697, New York; A. H. Langjahr, 19 Boerum Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Theodore J. Lang, 670 Sixth avenue, Manhattan.

CINDERS FOR PROPAGATING.

Cinders as a propagating medium for chrysanthemums have proven a great success. The same cinders have been used four times in succession, the last batch being now well rooted. There has been absolutely no fungus from first to last in the cinders, while mums propagated in sand at the same time and under the same circumstances were destroyed by fungus to the extent of 25 per cent.

I believe that carnations could be rooted in finely sifted coal cinders and the fungus entirely eliminated. While I have had some experience in that line I shall try it largely this coming year, and do not expect to lose a single cutting from fungus. J. H. V.

JOLIET, ILL.—The new rose houses of the Chicago Carnation Co. are all planted and the stock is doing well. Housing of carnations has now begun in earnest. While a few plants have been lost in the lower part of the field the percentage is very small and on the average stock is better than they have ever had it before.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

A few days' sojourn in this most interesting city gave the writer an opportunity to make the acquaintance of the florists, who are endowed with an abundance of hospitality, and who apparently are doing a good business. Trade has slackened up some since July 1st, yet seldom a day passes without bringing an order for funeral work, and all stores keep open until 8 p. m.

Not unlike some other sections of the Western country where there is a shortage of rain during the summer months, vegetation is made to thrive by the irrigation process, and outdoor flowers are in ample supply and of the first quality. Carnations are grown under glass all summer, and we marvel at the quantity, length of stem and size of blooms. The cool nights are a boon to the florists, and, indeed, if the same stock could be shipped successfully to an Eastern market it would fetch $3 per 100 at wholesale.

Rose culture is a failure here, due principally to the lack of moisture in the climate, and the trade depends entirely on Council Bluffs for its rose supply. Think of shipping roses twelve hundred miles in the month of July, which Mr. Wilcox is doing, the same retailing at $1.50 per dozen in this market.

An item of news which may interest florists who are located in the mining districts is the surprisingly large trade done here in metal work with the nearby mining camps. We find every store well supplied with this material, and the profits derived therefrom are enormous.

The Salt Lake Floral Company are building six new houses, and when completed they will have a fine range of 75,000 feet of glass. J. H. Mitchell, formerly of Butte, Montana, a greenhouse architect of considerable ability, has charge of the entire plant.

The Huddart Floral Company are renovating their store and fixing up generally. Mr. Huddart took an active part in organizing a florists' club, and is laboring hard to interest the florists in giving a chrysanthemum show next fall.

The B. C. Morris Floral Company are also making extensive improvements and will build two new houses this summer. Thomas Holiday, who is one of the members of the firm, and who has assumed the entire management of the firm's interests, is a good business man and a real good fellow.

It is seldom one sees a more attractive little store than that owned by R. E. Evans. It is complete in every detail. Mr. Evans does a large retail business and looks more like an English statesman than a florist.

Ralph Rieben has started early in life with 4,000 feet of glass and will grow cut flowers and plants for Mount Olivet Cemetery trade.

Salt Lake City, or "Zion," as it is called by the Mormons, is situated in a fertile valley at the foot of the Wasatch Mountains. Its streets are wide and well shaded with poplars and maples. The places of interest which attract visitors are the Mormon Temple and Tabernacle, two imposing structures, and Amelia Palace, built by Brigham Young for his favorite wife, for whom it was named.

Truck gardening in the valley is practically controlled by the Japs and the Chinese. H. J. M.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I have a boiler with 17 3-inch flues 5 ft. long. Would that be sufficient to heat a house 16x80 ft. to 60 degrees and a violet pit 4 ft. wide and the length of the house, down here in Texas where the thermometer very seldom registers as low as zero and some winters the coldest weather is only a slight freeze?

I intend using about 350 feet of 3-inch pipe in main house and 160 ft. of 1½-inch pipe in violet bed. Is that about right? Would my boiler heat any more than above space? There would be about 2,000 ft. of glass exposed. Will heat with water.

TEXAS.

Replying to "Texas" he, unfortunately, does not state the grate area contained in the boiler, but assuming that the grate is in proportion to the amount of flue surface he quotes, the boiler will have capacity to heat the house he describes comfortably. The 16-ft. wide house should have not less than five lines of 3-inch pipes, in fact, it would be safer to put six lines, putting three lines under each of the side benches, one flow and two returns; this will be liberal surface for the ordinary mild winter in that latitude, and will be sufficient to maintain the desired temperature in a sudden severe cold snap with a little stronger firing. The amount of pipe contemplated in the violet bed will give the desired results.

HENRY W. GIBBONS.

New York.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Trade in general is quiet here with the exception of an odd funeral design. Good carnations are very scarce and asters are being used as a substitute.

Mr. Collis, of Chicopee Falls, is going to erect a new carnation house, 18x110 feet.

Albert A. Smith, of Ludlow, will add an extension of 70 feet to his carnation house.

Holyoke as well as Springfield anticipates an abundance of carnations for the coming season, owing to the many new houses that are being built in the surrounding towns. INO.

BEGONIA LORRAINE.

Replying to T. D. B., the blooms need not be picked off the young plants. You will find several comprehensive articles on the culture of this begonia in previous issues of the REVIEW.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Business, from the retailer's standpoint at least, is down to the ordinary summer volume. This means that aside from the occasional batch of funeral work business is "nit." Sweet peas, which sold well earlier in the season, are a glut and your correspondent knows of at least one case where they were retailed at three bunches for a dime. Asters are in and of good quality, but don't seem to go with the spirit exhibited in former years. Some roses have made their appearance, cut from this year's planting, but they are of a very poor order, and the market would be better off without them.

Your former correspondent, Harry Millatt, has left us for Seattle, Wash. Harry writes us on the way that he is enjoying the trip and will stop over at Salt Lake City a few days.

Relatives of Arthur Newell have received word that he arrived safely on the other side of the water, a few pounds lighter, but Arthur can spare that.

Ben Humiston passed through here on his way to Chicago, after having been for some time with Geo. M. Kellogg, at Pleasant Hill, Mo. Ben is an exceptionally good rose grower, and we wish him success in his new field.

John H. Vesey.

Marion, Ind.—Gunnar Teilmann is cutting a fine crop of Queen of the Market asters which he is shipping to E. C. Amling, Chicago. J. W. Bernard has built a fine office and is rebuilding three of his houses. F. W. Herleman has added a propagating house. Gunnar Teilmann has built a $400 shed and office and is rebuilding two houses. Chrysanthemums are all planted and are looking fine. Carnations in the field never looked better. Preparations to house them will begin at once.

Clarksville, Tenn.—James Morton, the florist, made an assignment July 21, naming Quint C. Atkinson assignee. The liabilities are $4,675.12, with assets consisting of his garden and equipments, upon which are mortgages to the amount of $3,500, and accounts amounting to $424.60. The failure is attributed to the hail storm of a year ago, which devastated the garden and greenhouses and caused Mr. Morton to fall behind with his out-of-town creditors.

Jamestown, N. Y.—The Lake View Rose Gardens and the Walter Mott Seed & Bulb Co., are making extensive and very attractive exhibits at the Celoron Chamber of Commerce Exposition, in which all the leading manufacturers and merchants of the city are represented. The seed company has lately made some very attractive window displays at the store that have been warmly praised by the local press.

Referring to his adv. in the Review, Mr. A. C. Oelschig, Savannah, Ga., writes: "Results proved very satisfactory. All we could do to fill orders."

The regular exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be held Nov. 11th to 15th, in the Art Institute, Chicago, in connection with the annual fall show of the Horticultural Society of Chicago. Copies of the premium list may be had by addressing the secretary, Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Pa., or E. A. Kanst, 5700 Cottage Grove ave., Chicago.

Dayton, O.—The Miami Floral Co. is erecting three 200-ft. houses on South Broadway for fancy carnations, the demand for these flowers having greatly expanded. Mr. E. C. Bissell is the practical man in charge and on that account it is safe to predict success. The new company is composed of Messrs. Wm. Kilfaber, Chas. E. Pease and W. G. Matthews. The latter is also proprietor of the Dayton Floral Co. They have 17½ acres of excellent land and the buildings are thoroughly modern.

Macon, Ga.—The twenty-sixth annual session and exhibition of the Georgia State Horticultural Society will be held here Aug. 6th and 7th. A very interesting and instructive program is announced. A rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip to this city on the certificate plan has been granted by the railroads from all points in Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and South Carolina. Copies of the program and other information may be had by addressing the secretary, Mr. L. A. Berckmans, Augusta, Ga.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

REALIZING the large and growing demand for high grade glass structures for horticultural purposes, the undersigned have organized a stock company, to design, manufacture and construct such buildings and to supply the materials which enter into their construction. We have secured property on West Side Avenue, Jersey City, N. J., near the West Side Avenue Station of the Newark branch of the Central R. R. of N. J., which is admirably suited for manufacturing purposes. Our factories are new and equipped with machinery of the most approved type. We are in a position to manufacture and build a large amount of work of a high grade, quickly, thoroughly and economically. Mr. Lincoln Pierson has been Secretary of the Lord & Burnham Co. for the past twelve years, having had charge of the Architectural and Sales department of that company. Mr. William Sefton has been Superintendent of Hitchings & Co. for the past six years, having had charge of their Manufacturing and Construction department. During this period both have had a large and varied experience, having been responsible for the designing and construction of many of the largest and most notable glass structures in this country, including both park, private and commercial work. We have purchased the Paul M. Pierson patents, and have other patents pending which will enable us to erect a very much better appearing and more durable structure than any of the existing types of houses now on the market. While we can build a better house than any of the old companies, we can also build any of the existing types equally as well and as cheaply. To all contemplating the erection of such buildings, we beg to be allowed to submit for consideration, plans, specifications and estimates of cost for their complete erection or for any of the materials needed therein. Our best services are at your command.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Window Boxes and Vases.

The majority of the window boxes and garden vases that are filled with geraniums specially grown for market or auction trade have been flat failures, as far as we have seen, this summer. Many of those outside the principal hotels and restaurants have had to be refilled with such plants as aspidistras, Aucuba japonica, Ficus elastica and mixtures of small palms, ferns and foliage plants, which have all done remarkably well and consequently are doing much to encourage a more extensive use of them. Growers of geraniums and other soft-wooded bedding plants adopt extreme measures in order to get their plants in condition for the early market. The consequence is that after what we may call the market blooms are off the plants take too long to recuperate. The vitality of soft-wooded plants is not such as can long withstand the fertilizers used and it might be well for retailers to see that ultra artificial methods are not employed to produce fleeting beauty where it is needed to last a reasonable length of time. A distinction should and must be made between the street fakirs or peddlers and legitimate store trade. One is responsible, the other is not.

Some very pretty window screen boxes can be made entirely of ivy and Euonymus radicans var. A low trellis is used in the back to train as desired. There has been more ivy used this year than in almost any other two years. It has done well and will suffice when the time comes to plant coniferæ. Speaking of coniferæ reminds us that some very beautiful effects can be produced by planting beds containing a variety of very small evergreens. This style of bedding out is becoming very popular, for it has a permanent summer and winter attractiveness about it that appeals to a great many. Some very notable examples of this style are to be seen at Newport, R. I.

Cobæa scandens is being much used for screen work, and looks very pretty with its white and blue bell flowers. Thousands upon thousands of the California privet are being used for partition screens. It makes a cheap, rapid and most effective screen. More of it might be used thus all over the country, particularly out west. The city florist's store is a dull, sleepy place during midsummer months' hot days, but green foliage always looks cool and refreshing. For this and greater business reasons your windows, even if business be extremely poor, should be kept attractive. A few clean plants, an occasional vase of flowers, and change the design every few days.

Preparing for Christmas.

These need not be dull days. You can be busy preparing for Christmas. It is better to stem up your immortelles and make up your Christmas bells now, even just a little at a time, than be working at it all nights during December, after putting in long, hard days. There will be a big demand for neatly made red immortelle bells next Christmas, and you can get your material ready now, and you can make them up nicer with plenty of time. Cover them with tissue paper and pack them away in some clean, dry place.

Newport.

Newport, R. I., is now the busiest place in the United States from a retailer's standpoint. It's a good place for those who want to get posted on summer flowers and styles to spend a few days or a season. Pity it seems to us that a great floral fete couldn't be organized there. Those who can should not miss seeing the Saratoga carnival next month; it is worth seeing. The only disagreeable feature about it is that the local, and outside florists, also, do the work too cheap, in some instances for almost nothing, in order to keep it from a rival. Rivalry in trade doesn't necessitate doing work for nothing. They who do it injure themselves and the trade, and breed impecuniosity among flower buyers.

There promises to be a good time and some very useful information, as usual, in connection with the S. A. F. convention. Some of the supply dealers have returned from Europe with the latest in designs. It is to be hoped that a goodly crowd of retailers will attend, and not only be there, but take part in whatever discussions may arise pertaining to the retail trade. At future conventions we hope to see practical lessons given in decorative art and color combinations, something that will instruct the eye as well as the ear.

Funeral Designs.

A recent visit to all the principal stores of New York was almost fruitless as far as information for this department is concerned. There is very little doing beyond funeral work, and there is absolutely nothing new. Galax leaves and purple asters are the principal funeral design materials recommended, and there is more money in it than aught else, providing you get a chance. Asters are more plentiful and of better quality than seen here before. They constitute a leading flower to keep in stock. It is wise to always have a goodly share because you are then always ready to put up a design on short notice, and that is frequently the case in hot weather. There are many beautiful types of asters never seen on our markets which it would be well to get acquainted with. Most growers go in for cheap seed, which cannot but produce poor flowers. The aster is an important flower, deserving of the highest development for summer and winter use, both as pot plant and cut flower.

Annuals.

This brings us to that important class of flowers classed as annuals, which are now in full glory, and a great many of them are very useful for cutting. Zinnias are extra fine for general decorative purposes, but especially for bizarre designs, such as we see at floral parades, because they last so well and then the colors are very brilliant, two most important characteristics of the commercial flower. Then there are African marigolds, both the lemon and the orange; they are very good for solid work. You can do some fine ribbon work with the above flowers. Then for indoor decorations balsams are beautiful, and poppies are grand. If you wish to please any Parisian or æsthetic eye let them see a nice, simple arrangement of white and yellow poppies, or the brilliant reds alone. True, such flowers are very delicate, but there is lots of beauty that is only skin deep, and it is generally most valued when it is most delicate. In this class are the nasturtiums, and how beautiful they are—nothing finer for the small dining table; they are general favorites for small vases in country homes. And then there are the antirrhinums and penstemons, and that pretty flower, Physostegia virginica, called the "obedient plant," because you can move the florets any way and they will stay so. This could be made an attraction for anyone who is on a marketing street. We can recommend Lobelia cardinalis rubra both for cut flower and colored foliage; it is fine for grouping.

Table Flowers.

You need not lack for table flowers where there are cannas to be had. They give the most brilliant, yet soft, effect and are lovely when arranged with delicate fonage. Hydrangea paniculata is coming in and will soon be very abundant. Don't despise it because it is plentiful, for it is one of our most useful flowers. It enables you to give poor people a better show for their money in the way of funeral designs, and it can be used for almost any occasion. Cattleyas are very scarce, in fact, all choice greenhouse flowers are to be had only in very small quantities. Allamandas are used considerably for table decoration. They are fine with adiantum. We use small privet for stemming them on.

Carnations are poor. It's a wonder to us that some of our extensive growers don't go in more for summer carnations. Marguerite carnation is a useful flower to small dealers. There is nothing that makes a prettier show at present than good single petunias, verbenas and phlox Drummondii; they are good for table work, too, if cut in the early morning.

We have often thought it queer that so many of our florists' places are so bare looking, inasmuch as they get little for their plants in late spring. Plants used to beautify one's own home are far more profitable than those sold under cost of production. Golden rod is now abundant on the hillsides; so are the rudbeckias, but we'll speak of them in our next. IVERA.

FLORAL PILLOW.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a pillow arranged by Mr. Robert Main, of Main & Fear, Gloversville, N. Y.

The links are made of Maceo carnations over a ground of white. Pale blue chiffon is used to add lightness and grace to the design.

We are inclined to think the design would have been better without the chiffon, though it may have looked all right in the original. The arrangement of the flowers seems excellent.

HOUSING CARNATIONS.

Working Under Adverse Conditions.

The first picture presented herewith shows a gang of men lifting carnation plants from a corner of one of the fields at the establishment of Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill. It well illustrates the great difficulties under which carnation growers in this section have labored this season. Only once during the season was it possible to work the ground, and the weeds got decidedly the best of the situation. This firm finished housing carnations Aug. 1st, the day the photograph was taken, and it is remarkable that the plants average as good as they do, in view of the field conditions this season. Anyone who has seen the well-tilled carnation fields of this firm in former years will appreciate what it meant to be unable to even get into the field to pull weeds, to say nothing of cultivating. The rainless days of last week were utilized to hurry all the remaining plants into the houses.

Lifting Carnation plants from the field.

Another drawback in planting this year was that it was impossible to mix the soil out of doors. As will be seen by the second picture, the soil was put in the bench, the bone meal sprinkled on top and mixed in with the spade on the bench. The view also shows the operation of planting in progress.

The third picture shows a gang of men emptying the soil from a rose house. The plank runway rests upon a set of long horses that can be quickly changed from one walk or house to another. The barrows are narrow iron ones, such as are used in handling iron ore. This has been found to be the best and most economical way of emptying and filling houses at this establishment.

In all the houses on the place the tile-bottomed bench is used and is considered much the most economical in the end. The construction of this bench can be seen at the left in the picture.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The preliminary premium list for the exhibition of the above society, to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y., next February, has been issued.

In addition to the usual classes for new varieties there are prizes of $12 and $6 for 100 blooms each of white, light pink, dark pink, scarlet, crimson, yellow variegated, white variegated and any other color. Then there are prizes of $6 and $3 for 50 blooms in same classification of colors as above, and again $3 and $1.50 in classes of 25 blooms each, same colors.

Three sets of special prizes are offered for collections of blooms arranged for effect, one calling for not more than 100 blooms of each variety, another for not more than 75 blooms of each, and the third for not more than 50 blooms of each. Undisseminated varieties not admitted.

The society's silver cup is offered for the best exhibit of 200 blooms, any variety, any color. Prizes of $15 and $10 are offered for collection, one bloom of each variety. The gold, silver and bronze Lawson medals are offered for the first, second and third best vases of 100 blooms, any variety, any color.

The Society of American Florists' silver and bronze medals are offered for the first and second best vases of 50 blooms of an undisseminated variety of American origin.

Copies of the advance list may be had by addressing Albert M. Herr, secretary, Lancaster, Pa.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The benches which are to be carried over another season, after being pruned, tied down and the eyes nicely started, should have a light, rich mulch to encourage the making of feeding roots. It is much better to put the mulch on lightly, say one inch thick, and renew frequently, than to run the risk of souring the soil by a heavy coating.

The new rose, Ivory, is one of those roses which, while in a young stage, is apt to give the grower a fit of the blues. From its puny appearance and habit of making weak, sprawling wood, it looks as if it would never amount to anything. By persistent cultivation and copious supplies of water during bright weather it soon assumes quite a different character, and shows signs of being almost as vigorous a grower as its parent, Golden Gate, and quite as free a bloomer. The bloom is a pure white, long and well pointed buds of a good size, the petals are of good substance, which gives it all the points to make it a good keeper and shipper. Thus far it bears out the standard of excellence given it by the disseminators, and if it stands up against hot weather, as they claim it does, it will indeed be an acquisition.

So many roses have been put on the market in recent years with such inflated credentials and which have proved such miserable failures that it is quite a pleasure to find one which does bear out its reputation. RIBES.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

IX.

Sundry Expenses.

Every business man keeps his goods and buildings insured against loss by fire. In this business great damage can be done in a few minutes by fire. Fire insurance is therefore all the more imperative. A great many good companies will not insure greenhouse property at all, others will take good risks, while still others will take all risks. The rate of premium depends a great deal upon the proximity of the buildings to fire protection in the larger cities. But the main things considered by underwriters in placing insurance are the general reputation of the insured and the condition of the premises at the time of placing the insurance.

A great many growers always have a pile of rubbish, old boxes, barrels, kindling wood, etc., dumped into a heterogeneous mass near the houses, which in dry weather would easily be ignited by a spark which would work a vast amount of damage in a few moments. Insurance under such conditions is considered (and rightly, too) very risky and if placed at all would be at a high rate of premium. If your place is kept neat and tidy, and rubbish is not allowed to accumulate, your chances of having a fire are reduced to the minimum and your premium for insurance will be correspondingly less.

It is almost impossible to insure growing plants against loss by fire, although I have known of such insurance being written. The Florists' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., which was attempted a few years ago, was a most laudable business proposition, but through indifference on the part of the trade (not of the promoters) it died an untimely death.

Insurance against loss by hail is almost as important as fire insurance, as no amount of precaution will prevent loss by hail, and while you may not be touched in ten years, some day a black and angry cloud may arise in ten minutes and wipe out two or three years' profits in the "twinkling of an eye." The Florists' Mutual Hail Association has been so well organized, losses have been so promptly met, and under careful management it has become so prosperous that no florist should hesitate for a moment in joining it and protecting himself against loss from this element.

The expense of insurance should be carefully kept from year to year. If at the end of twenty years you have not met with a loss you have the satisfaction of knowing that you have been protected all the time. If you have met with a loss the cost of your insurance will most likely have been returned to you several times over. Keep an accurate record of your insurance and do not let it expire without being renewed. How often we hear of fires occurring the day or week after insurance had ceased.

Another fixed expense in the business is the item of water. This is one of the great essentials in the business, and while in nature it is "as free as air," the cost of putting it where we want it is considerable. In the larger cities it is often cheaper to buy city water and have it placed on your premises under pressure than to sink a well and pump it with the wind. In my city the annual cost is about $2.25 for each thousand square feet of glass. (This includes water for boilers.)

As much depends upon location, each florist will have to be his own judge of what system of watering to employ. If possible secure enough pressure for at least one hose watering at the same time for each 10,000 square feet of glass. Make inquiries from your friends in the trade as to the relative cost of water and by comparing with your own solve the problem of which system is the cheapest. While the expense each year is not great, the aggregate for a series of ten or twenty years amounts to hundreds and thousands of dollars.

Lighting is another item which should not be overlooked. In the dark winter months, when night begins at 4 or 4:30, there is great necessity for good light in many of the houses, so that the men may not lose valuable time doing little or nothing. A few dollars' expense for lighting may save many dollars in labor. In the majority of places kerosene lamps and lanterns are used. While such light is better than none at all, it is too expensive for the benefits derived, especially in the larger places. Gas, unless you are in the "Natural Gas Belt," is also too expensive. Electricity, unless developed on the premises, is the most expensive of any light.

In large places, those with 50,000 square feet or more of glass, the cost of running a dynamo for lighting purposes will amount to little or nothing outside of the lubricating oil. The exhaust steam in most plants will do the work nicely. The cost of a dynamo varies from $100 to $500. The wiring and lamps from $25 to $100. The wear and tear on the machinery is 10 to 20 per cent each year, and new lamps will cost from $5 to $10 annually. The interest on your investment at 6 per cent should be added and you have the cost of your light from $25 to $150 per year. This is a fair estimate. The figures are not extravagant, the cost is not great and I honestly believe in most places will save several hundred dollars in labor besides being very convenient. Of course, the smaller places will have to devise other means of lighting. Acetylene is rapidly coming to the front as a cheap light and is worthy of consideration. Whatever your light is, let it so shine that your employes can work ten hours a day unhindered by darkness, and your profits will be increased in proportion to the extra expense incurred.

The expense of fertilizers and soil for your benches is worthy of serious consideration. They are both essential to the development of our products and a few dollars judiciously expended may yield hundreds in return. Each and every grower should be the best judge as to the best soil for his requirements. On this subject I am no expert and will offer no suggestions, but will leave that to specialists. If soil or sods from your own land are not available or desirable, do not hesitate in incurring extra expense to obtain them from some place where they are.

I know a grower who with but little experience grows fancy roses. It is not the result of chance or skill, but of soil. This he obtained from a nearby ungraded street for several years. When the street was graded and the soil from that source was no longer available, he purchased a tract of land alongside the street, for the sake of the soil, for, said he, "I must have that soil if I am to grow roses." The land cost him $600 or $700, but I think it was money wisely invested. He knew a good thing and kept it.

On another place I know an A1 all round grower of many years' experience who but recently engaged in business for himself. His first year's business was a dismal failure, because the soil wasn't right and he didn't know what elements were needed to make it right. This year he is hauling sods from three miles away, from a field where he knows it is all right by experience and where he not only has to pay for soil but also for hauling. At an expense of $200 to $300 he will realize $2,000 to $3,000 in profits where last season he met with a loss.

What is true of soil is also true of fertilizers. Many growers still consider well rotted cow manure the best fertilizer in existence. The best crop of roses or succession of crops, I might say, I ever knew was grown by an inexperienced man with a most liberal supply of the green and half-rotten article applied as a surface dressing. It wasn't appetizing to mortals, but was life and vigor to the roses. Some growers use bone meal and phosphates liberally, others consider nitrate of soda invaluable, while blood and bone, pure blood and other products of the abattoir are highly recommended by many. The use or disuse of any one of the hundreds of commercial fertilizers is not recommended by me, because what suits one soil may not another. But I would strongly urge each and every grower to ascertain what will bring him best results and not be afraid to expend a few dollars for good fertilizers, as the result in increased quality and quantity of blooms will justify the expense. The fancy stock grown by our best growers is not altogether the result of skill in cultivation. A careful study of all conditions of climate, soil, watering, air, light, heat, fertilizers, etc., go to make up that skill which after all is only good common sense and careful observation, which cannot be imparted in books or otherwise, but must be evolved from your own thinking cap.

The matter of insecticides and their application is worthy of serious consideration. As a rule tobacco stems are the least expensive, but where it is not practicable to use them some of the many preparations on the market should be used. I have known of serious injury to tender blossoms from fumigating with tobacco stems which were used to save expense. It is the old "penny wise and pound foolish" system of conducting business to curtail expense at the loss or ruin of production. By systematic records for each month and year of all your different items of expense and comparisons year by year you will form a pretty good idea of what is the best and most economical in the different lines.

Pots form quite an item of expense in each grower's establishment. Thousands of dollars are annually expended for these alone which might be saved. Having a place for everything and having everything in its place is of most beneficial importance when it comes to the potting shed, for here a careless, unsystematic man can daily break and destroy more than his wages amount to. Have a bin or rack in the potting shed for each size of pots you use, and insist on all pots being put in their proper place as soon as emptied. Broken pieces of pots are excellent for drainage and can be used up in that manner to good advantage, but do not purposely break them for that use.

The best pots are always the cheapest and should always be bought in preference to the inferior grades. I well remember a lot of pots that I purchased at one time on account of their being cheap. They were so soft and poorly burned that fully 25 per cent fell to pieces when handled and the balance lasted through one potting. Although the manufacturer made a liberal discount on the bill, I am confident that they cost in the end twice as much as good red ones. If you don't believe my remarks, buy 1,000 cheap ones and the same number of good ones and at the end of twelve months see how many or each you have left. That will prove the thing to you as it has to me. At the end of each fiscal year you should know what your pot bill has been, and each succeeding year you should endeavor to make it less.

Taxes are one of the permanent expense items which cannot be avoided and must be met. In some states and localities growing stock in the houses is taxed. This doesn't seem right, nor do I believe it would stand the test of law in any Supreme Court in the land. I think the matter should receive the attention of the Society of American Florists at its annual meeting. Each state is the master of its own tax laws and in each state where there is unjust discrimination against our craft the matter should be properly laid before the state board of equalization for proper adjustment. The evil, I think, is due more to local ignorance on the part of assessors than to general laws or customs, and where the injustice finds practice it should be eradicated.

If your real estate is assessed too high an effort to have it reduced may prove of benefit and will certainly cost nothing but the effort. A close record of your taxes and assessed valuation will at all times be interesting and show where your money goes. At the same time it will furnish a check on the assessors that may prove beneficial to you.

Your barn and team expense should be carefully tabulated. Your feed bill, harness bill, wagon repairs, shoeing, etc., should all be separately recorded, so that you may readily detect leakages wherever and whenever they occur. If you do not grow your own hay and oats you should have sufficient storage to enable you to buy when prices are low.

A word here in regard to help will not be amiss. A good, careful driver and barn man at $12 per week is far cheaper than two careless, ignorant ones at $6 each, or even one at $8 or $9. If your business is extensive you should have a barn man as well as a teamster. If your business only requires one horse, you should have one person attend to it. Good drivers are scarce, but when you find a good one do not pinch a dollar or two a week on his salary, for he will more than save it on your expenses.

There are numerous minor expenses in conducting a business which vary with the nature and location of it, such as telephone, telegrams, tools, labels, etc. They are each of small amount, but in the aggregate amount to hundreds of dollars. Each item should be scrutinized and a careful record kept for comparison from year to year.

I have not dwelt upon office expenses at all, as the services of a bookkeeper or stenographer would be included in the weekly payroll. Books, letter heads and office supplies will amount to quite a relative sum each year and should be scrutinized the same as other expenses. Postage will grow into dollars and dollars into hundreds before you are aware of it. Stamps should be in charge of the cashier and help not allowed to help themselves out of them.

Emptying the Old Soil From a Rose House.

THE EMBELLISHMENT OF A DWELLING.

My attention was called to an article in a contemporary over the initials "C. B. W." bearing the above title. As the dwelling, as he calls it, is one of the finest on our matchless Delaware avenue, and is the home of one of the sweetest women in North America, and the writer is responsible for the tubs of the several bays not being sunk in the ground and much else there, he can not help feeling some interest in the illustration and description being correct. If the gentleman's "Seasonable Notes" are as unreliable as his description and inferences, I pity those who follow; but, fortunately, I have never heard of anyone who read them.

Delaware avenue, Buffalo, has but one street or avenue in the country comparable to it, and that is Euclid avenue, Cleveland. I well remember the late lamented and much traveled Peter Henderson telling me one day in his own house the following: "Yes, Delaware avenue and Euclid avenue are the two most beautiful avenues in the country, and I don't know which is the more beautiful, but I think I like Delaware avenue the best." That's about twenty years ago, but I can remember every word, and so I can the words of any man when they are worth remembering; but twaddle, ambiguous jumble and a miserable attempt at fine writing I can't commit to memory.

Now, reader, don't think for a moment that we have not seen Commonwealth avenue, Boston; Prairie avenue, Chicago, or the world-famous Fifth avenue, New York. Perhaps there is as much wealth and lavish expenditure in one block of the latter as there is in a mile of Delaware avenue, but we are not discussing wealth—simply beauty. Euclid avenue, Cleveland, has larger mansions, more acreage to each residence, but is disfigured by stone walls and fences, and is not so continuous for any length. Now, Cleveland friends, don't be down on me. You have a glorious avenue, as well as a grand city.

The description of this beautiful home is poetical, but away off on facts. Instead of being "a very large house, built of red brick," it is a drab, or terra cotta, brick, a very subdued tint almost as far removed from red as the green grass. The camera was evidently much to the south or city side of the house. If the artist (?) had wished to give you an idea of this beautiful home he could have had a beautiful view of a long vista of lawn with but one simple tropical bed, some small groups of shrubbery, and in the distance an ivy-covered barn, or stable, built of the same material as the house, but so covered with ampelopsis that it is really picturesque. There is nothing but the branches of the elms on the avenue to hide the front view of the house.

"The unwarranted expense of placing two tubs of laurels on the lawn" was not so extravagant after all, and the proprietor can well afford it. They were purchased some ten years ago, and with good care and an occasional shift into a larger tub are two grand specimens. The little formality about them only enhances the beauty of the surrounding informality, and with due respect to "C. B. W.," they are in the right place. The only practical observation in the whole article was that the tubs should be sunk in the lawn. That is right.

Now, as to the use and abuse of this beautiful climber, Ampelopsis Veitchii, it is a matter of taste. Boston was the first city to plant it largely, hence the name, Boston ivy, and I have thought sometimes that it was used there to excess. It is never more beautiful than when some fifteen or twenty feet in height, sending out its young growth to graceful forms that no artist could imitate. A house densely covered with it is picturesque, provided the next house has none of it. Too much of it is sombre.

The information about its hardiness and A. Engelmanni is strange news. We don't know anything about Engelmanni, but we are convinced that "C. B. W." knows little about A. Veitchii. It is hardy in Milwaukee and has no equal where a vine is wanted to cover a wall without support. Some fifteen years ago they had an idea it was not hardy in Toronto, and there was scarcely a plant there. Now it is as common there as their national thistle. It is hardy in any city of the United States and will grow on north, south, east or west aspect. As for Celastrus scandens, it needs tying up to support it and is most at home on veranda pillars or a lattice-made arbor. It belongs to a different class, and why introduced into that classic article I can't see. I expected to get some valuable hints on the shrubs, etc., to embellish lawns, but can not find them.

Now, in conclusion, I would like to say that the beauty of our Delaware avenue is in its simple embellishment. A double line of elms or maples borders each side of the avenue outside the property line. The lawns are dotted here and there with trees. Few flower beds are seen from the street, and few vases disfigure the lawns; no fences and but few hedges, and those very low. From the street to the rear of the lots is well-kept lawn, no dividing fence, wall or hedge between neighbors. So it is a long strip of park with residences dotted in. Not one resident in twenty ever called in the services of a landscape gardener of the modern school. If he had, the street would have been spoiled, for, instead of broad expanse of lawn, restful and beautiful to our senses, the lots would have been cut up into roads, shrubbery ad libitum, herbaceous borders and everything else they could put in there for revenue only. "C. B. W." might have made an interesting article; he terribly fell down.

Am very much surprised that "C. B. W." speaks about water spouts and lightning rods. Milwaukee has plenty of spouts of all kinds, mostly used for something more nourishing than water, and I am sorry that the fallacy of the lightning rod has not yet reached the city "that Schlitz made famous."

PALM HOUSE AT A. N. PIERSON'S.

We publish this week an illustration of one of the palm houses in Plant No. 1 at A. N. Pierson's, Cromwell, Conn. The house measures 240x65 feet, is built of iron and is in every way up to date. It holds about 6,000 Kentia Belmoreana, in pots varying in size from four to ten inches. This is the largest of twenty-two houses devoted to palms and ferns. Two large and very attractive houses are filled entirely with Adiantum Farleyense, which is grown principally for the New York market. This department has been extended from year to year until now it is one of the most important on the place, and the sale of palms and ferns has become very heavy.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a new horizontal tubular boiler having a heating surface of 600 square feet. How many square feet of glass surface will it heat to 60 degrees at night? Houses in good condition, for carnations, hillside location, protected from north winds. J. L. M.

Penna.

Replying to J. L. M., the tubular boiler having about 600 feet of heating surface, if well-proportioned, will readily heat from 18,000 to 20,000 square feet of glass to a temperature of 60 degrees at night, provided one foot of radiating surface is used to every three feet of glass suface. MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Dahlias.

This should have been a good season for dahlias, for they delight in cool weather and lots of moisture. Under our hot suns the soil soon dries out and perhaps in a few days we will be praying for rain. If you want fine flowers and plenty of them, see that your dahlias get a good soaking at least once a week, and what is of as much importance, mulch round the plant for a distance of eighteen inches from the stem. People that grow acres cannot, perhaps, find time for watering and mulching and staking, but where the best results are wanted it pays to do it.

Hollyhocks.

We have been asked this summer several times for stalks of hollyhocks and we had to get them, for they were customers that could not be refused. Single flowers were just as much thought of as the double, but you would not think of sowing seed that would produce single flowers the first year. My experience is they they will come single quick enough if left growing 2 or 3 years in one spot. I don't blame people of good taste for liking the hollyhock. What is more stately and informal and really picturesque? The dahlia is the perfection of form and color, but too formal and not in it with the hollyhock as a decorative flower, either in the border or cut.

Every spring you see plenty advertised, and when you write for two or three hundred everybody is either sorry to say they are just sold out or you get horrible rubbish that was raised to sell and not to flower. Raise your own, and the middle or end of August is a good time to sow. Perhaps 500 miles south of this the young plants will do out in the open ground all winter; with us they won't, and when the young plants are large enough to transplant we put them in cold frames, where they can be protected with glass during winter. If the very best plants were wanted I would prefer to put the plants in 3-inch pots in a frame, and during the four coldest months keep them in a violet house. That has been my experience, and finer hollyhocks were never seen than those wintered that way and planted out as soon as the ground was dry in the spring. Buy the best strain of seed you can find and a good mixture of colors.

Pelargoniums.

It will soon be time to think of propagating the show pelargoniums. Perhaps about the end of the month is the right time. It does not make much difference where the old plants are now, either under glass or plunged outside. They have made a growth since flowering and now should be kept on the dry side. Unless you are well posted about these plants you will be afraid to cut them down as low as they require to make decent plants of the old ones. Too many growers just take off the green cuttings from the ends of the shoots. That will never do. The old plant, if you wish to grow it on, will be a long-legged, unsightly plant for the rest of its days. Cut down to within two or three inches of the soil. Dozens of eyes will break out where there was no visible eye. Keep the cut-down plants almost dust dry for three or four weeks. By that time they will be covered with young shoots. Then shake off every bit of soil, trim back the roots and put into pots two or three sizes smaller than they flowered in, and on they go for another year, and these one-year-old plants make grand specimens if well grown.

The end of the green shoot you have cut off and the second cut, even if it's a little hard, will root freely. Put them in the propagating sand, and after the first good watering keep them only moderately moist, and you will lose but few, although it will take a month or six weeks for them to root. It is, of course, the young plants that you mostly depend on for your market plants in May and June. There is something about the pelargonium—its flower, the odor of its leaves—that recalls almost the days of infancy, and gorgeous plants we have seen of them. Immense is the time and labor expended on them for the exhibitions of Great Britain. It seems we don't have that time here, and yet time and labor have been given to the chrysanthemum, and why not to the pelargonium?

Don't attempt to propagate the zonale geranium till the beginning of April; the hot days of August are most unfavorable. In fact, this month (if someone will plant your carnations) is most suited to attend conventions.

William Scott.

A GERANIUM TROUBLE.

My geraniums are troubled about the roots with wire worms. The plants are not in pots. They wilt right down. What can I do to save them? W. T. S.

Wire worms are seldom troublesome in the garden except on sod that has been lately turned up. I have seen them clean out a crop of carnations, and even small shrubs. It's a bad job. Make a barrel of weak tobacco water by pouring some boiling water on the stems, or dilute the Rose Leaf extract 150 times, and water around each geranium. It may not kill the wire worms, but they will leave for other parts. W. S.

SAGO PALMS.

A question is asked by a subscriber who signs himself "B" and who says that two of his customers complain that the young growths on their Sago palms are dying. They are kept in dwelling houses. Mr. "B" does not say whether he has visited the houses and looked into conditions under which these cycas are trying to grow.

The trouble may arise from several causes. Too much gas used, insufficient water, a close, hot, dry room, and perhaps other unfavorable conditions. Cycas revoluta, while not the worst of house plants, is by no means the best. Well established plants do fairly well wintered in a light, warm room, if thoroughly watered occasionally, but plants that have been established from imported roots within a year quickly lose all their leaves and should never be sold for such a purpose. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Rates to Asheville.

Members in western New York State and Pennsylvania will please note the following modification of arrangements regarding railroad fares to Asheville as heretofore announced:

The Trunk Line Association, comprising the railroads in the Middle States, east of Buffalo, Pittsburg, etc., will sell tickets to Asheville and return on the basis of one and one-third fare to Washington, plus one fare therefrom to Asheville, except that from Buffalo, Pittsburg and other Trunk Line termini on the west, via Washington, regular one-way fare via Washington will apply for round trip, charges from intermediate points on direct lines not to be higher. This gives all those attending the convention from or via Buffalo, Pittsburg and neighboring territory the concession of one fare for round trip, in common with Cleveland, Chicago and other Western centers.

These will be regular round-trip tickets, no certificates being required, limited to continuous passage in each direction. They will be sold, and good going, August 17, 18, 19, and one day earlier than these dates from Buffalo, Pittsburg and other western Trunk Line termini, with final return limit to Aug. 25, inclusive.

Plant Registration.

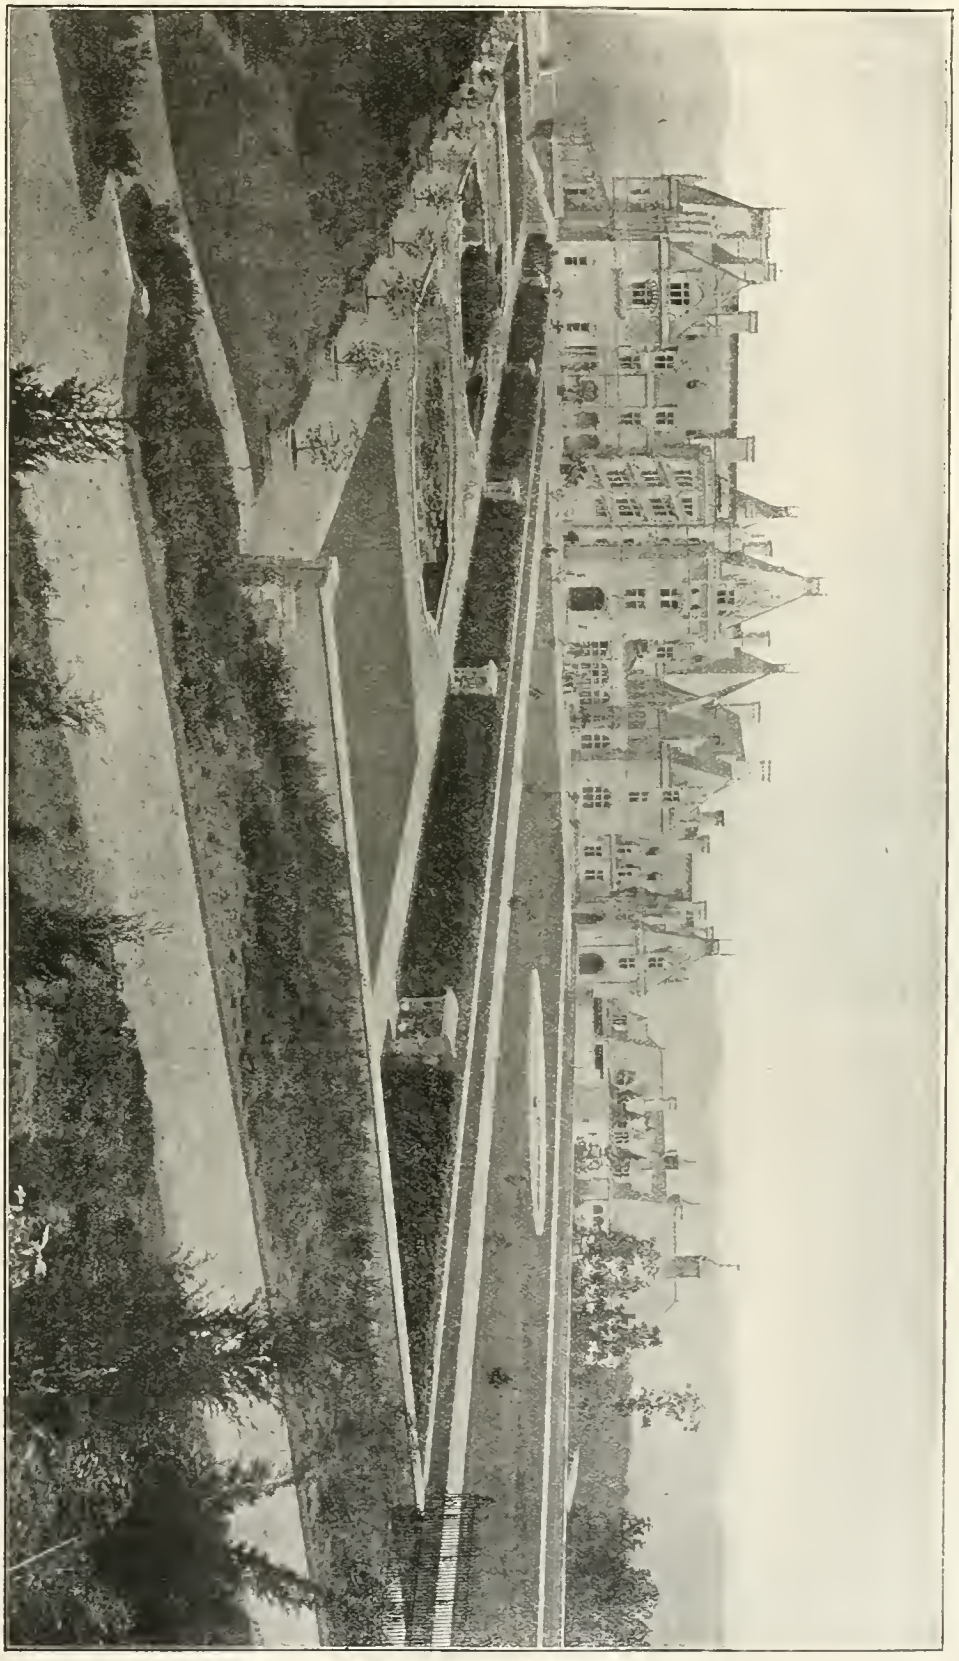
M. H. Walsh, Wood's Holl, Mass., registers climbing rose, Wedding Bells. A seedling from Crimson Rambler, flowering from June 1 to July 1. Flowers cherry pink, borne in large clusters on every shoot. Flowering shoots spineless.

H. T. Rose Princess (Margaret Dicksonx La France) 1898. Color flesh pink. Buds large, pointed. Stems strong and straight.

H. T. Rose Urania. Seedling from American Beauty, 1897. Color intense carmine. Vigorous, foliage large, stems stout. Free bloomer.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., register Cattleya Hardyana Mrs. Geo. Schlegel, xCattleya gigasxC. chrysotoxa; a natural hybrid from Colombia. Bulbs and foliage extra large and strong. Flowers, sepals and petals deep rose pink; lip over three inches across, very long, of intense purple color, heavily fringed and lacerated; throat golden yellow, spreading laterally into two unusually large blotches.

J. B. Trudo, Alderbend, N. Y., registers Carnation Miss Aimee (Mrs. Lawsonx Eldorado). Flower white, edges finely striped scarlet, clove scented, three to four inches across. Foliage glaucous, stems wiry, holding heavy bloom erect. Height, two feet.



BILTMORE.

Residence of Mr. Geo. W. Vanderbilt, Asheville, N. C. The estate contains many thousands of acres, and a drive through same will be a feature of the entertainment programme at the coming convention.

Carnation Miss Alice Roosevelt (Mrs. LawsonxEldorado). Color, white, dotted and splashed with carmine to center of each petal. Flower, 3½ to 4 inches across, full, edges fringed, clove fragrance. Foliage, glaucous. Stems stiff, two feet high.

PETROLEUM FOR FUEL.

Several inquiries recently received indicate that eastern growers are becoming alarmed over the continuation of the coal miners' strike and are casting about for a substitute for coal in case of necessity. Petroleum was in each case the alternative that occurred to the inquirers.

View Near Asheville, N. C.

In order to be able to answer these inquiries intelligently, we interviewed Messrs. Bassett & Washburn, who some years ago heated their large range at Hinsdale, Ill., with petroleum fuel, but later returned to coal. They say that with the crude oil at 70 to 90 cents a barrel, the oil has some advantages over coal, but that when the price gets above the dollar mark, it is too expensive to use. They found that from three to three and a half barrels of oil was equal in heating value to a ton of best grade steam coal costing about $3. They found Lima and Pennsylvania crude oil the cleanest and best for the purpose.

They ceased using it because the Standard Oil Co. stopped selling the crude oil. The company would extract the naptha and benzine and sell what was left as refined fuel oil and asked a higher price. This "refined" product was a thick, gummy substance very apt to clog up the pipes and burners and its price was prohibitive anyway. They still have their apparatus on hand, but would not recommend any one to install one. In fact the cost would make it out of the question for an ordinary grower to put one in as a temporary expedient at least.

While the burners themselves are not very expensive, there must be a storage tank of 500 bbls. capacity that must be at least 100 feet away from the fires. Then a standpipe must be provided to carry the oil to a height and then to the fire and this must have an accompanying steam pipe to warm the oil and mix steam with the oil in the burner. Two expensive pumps must be provided at the fire and there must be a tank wagon to convey the oil from the car to the storage tank unless the user has a switch track alongside of his tank. And there must be a costly pump to get the oil from the tank car to the tank wagon. Altogether an investment of about $1,000 must be provided for. With pure crude oil at 70 to 80 cents a barrel it would pay on a place of some size, but not under the present conditions of oil supply.

They have made their coal contract for the coming season at about the same figures as last year. Good smokeless coal is being offered now in Chicago at $2.75 to $3 per ton. They believe eastern growers who are nervous about the situation would do better to put in a supply of smokeless steam coal, being careful to keep it under cover, than to attempt to use oil.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

All the wholesalers who do a shipping business are fairly busy. Vacations are in order, which gives the reduced force a bit of hustling some days. New crop roses are generally rather short in stem, but have nice flowers. Asters are plentiful and easier in price; $1 per 100 buys pretty nice stuff, though a few bring more. Carnations can still be had of fair quality in limited numbers; the outdoor grown blooms are improving. Tuberoses and gladioli are good and plentiful. Kaiserins are the mainstay in roses.

A New Departure.

M. Rice & Co. have added a ribbon department to their florists' supply business. John Turnbull, late with S. S. Pennock, is in charge. Mr. Turnbull says that the firm will have a shade of ribbon to match the Liberty rose that will prove a feature in this line. The American Beauty ribbon, a sort of combination shade, is very pretty. These two shades are of great importance in a ribbon assortment, and the firm is confident they have a strong card. Mr. Rice is enthusiastic about the improved crepe paper he is now handling. It comes in two shades of color, making a harmonious finishing touch for the various blooming plants in which two colors predominate; for instance, the gay flowers and green foliage of the poinsettia can be enhanced by the same colors toned down in the crepe paper covering the pot.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

A small meeting, composed chiefly of growers believed to favor the plan of a cut-flower market, was held in the secretary's room at Horticultural Hall on Thursday evening of last week. Those present were: George Anderson, J. W. Colflesh, William K. Harris, Joseph Heacock, Edwin Lonsdale, Charles E. Meehan, Samuel S. Pennock, David Rust and J. W. Young. Mr. Harris acted as chairman; Mr. Rust as secretary. Mr. Heacock stated that a cut-flower market where buyers and sellers could meet at some central place would save much time; he believed all the growers would be for it. Several had spoken in favor of it of the retailers. Mr. Battles had favored the plan, offering to rent a stall in which to pack the flowers he had purchased.

View Near Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Pennock said the plan was a good one, and would save much bruising of flowers. Our city had outgrown the peddling system. Mr. Harris saw some good points in the plan, but he also liked certain features of the present method, which enabled him to sell many plants with his cut flowers. Mr. Meehan felt the same way about plants. He thought it would be well to carefully consider the needs of the uptown growers and have the plan meet their requirements. Mr. Anderson opposed the plan, but the bill passed first reading, so to speak, a committee of three (Joseph Heacock, Charles E. Meehan and Samuel S. Pennock) being appointed to find a suitable location and report to a meeting, to which all the growers will be invited, to be held this (Thursday) evening, August 7.

A Park Ramble.

Joseph Meehan led a party of fifteen members of the Germantown Horticultural Society, including several ladies, on a very interesting ramble last Saturday noon. The party met at Memorial Hall. They were joined at Horticultural Hall by Xavier E. E. Schmitt, who is in charge of that building and the adjacent grounds. From there the party proceeded to George's Hill by a circuitous route, Mr. Meehan pointing out and describing many rare and beautiful trees. The afternoon was perfect, the park looking its best, and the time was enlivened by plenty of animated discussions on questions of fact. Mr. Meehan's wonderful store of knowledge of trees and their habits was generously given and fully enjoyed. Among those present were: Joseph Heacock, Edwin C. Jellett, George Redles, Mr. Wurtzner, and others. Most of the party closed the trip with a ride in the picturesque park trolleys.

Notes.

Henry F. Michell has returned from Europe.

How will a market benefit the small grower? He will sell his flowers in far less time at just as good prices.

Myers & Samtman have planted their new range with 3,000 Edgelies and 1,000 or more Beauties.

Why should the small growers support a market? Because in unity lies strength.

Eugene Bernheimer has his new place at 11 South Sixteenth street in working order. He is receiving some nice field-grown flowers of a new red seedling carnation, described in this column last winter.

The club meeting held on Tuesday is the last before Asheville, only a short time ahead now. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Since my last letter trade in the cut flower line has not improved any, although there is still quite a bit of funeral work going on, which makes the call for white stuff very good. At the wholesale houses there is plenty of all kinds of stock, which looks fairly well for this time of the year when Old Sol puts his burning face close down to us.

We have had quite a lot of rain this summer, which has helped outdoor stuff a great deal, and hardy hydrangeas, gladioli, tuberose stalks and asters are looking fine.

Roses are coming somewhat better, and Perles and reds are coming in more freely, though most of them are wide open, which makes them unsalable. These with plenty of Brides and Maids in the market make business fairly good around the wholesale houses. The prices on stock remain as quoted in last week's issue.

Notes.

The echoes of our late picnic have about died out, and those who did not attend, after reading the account of it in the Review, were sorry they did not go. Some of those stay-at-homes should read Bro. Scott's letter in the last issue and keep it in mind for next year. If they will set aside one day in the year for pleasure we will let them work the other 364 days.

William Hucke, of Belleville, was a caller last week. Mr. Hucke reports that his carnation plants in the field are in fine shape and he expects to cut as fine a lot of blooms this fall as ever.

John Young and his family left last week for Atlantic City for a month's stay. John says he needs a rest after a very busy season.

James Young and son are spending a few weeks in New York City and will go to the convention from there and come home with the St. Louis delegation.

The Kalisch boys, of Delmar avenue, are visiting in Chicago and other points up north. They are off for a four weeks' trip.

George Augermuller is back at his post at Kuehn's after ten days' vacation, and now Eddie Gerlach is taking ten days. These boys are great workers with a great pull.

The Tesson family and the World's Fair Co. came to an understanding the past week, in which the World's Fair Co. leases the land it requires for $51,000 for a period of two years and six months, beginning September 1st. Robert will not have to move the greenhouses as Director Taylor wants to retain them for propagating purposes in connection with the landscape plan of the fair. This tract will be utilized as a site for the French village and a national display.

A group of growers at one of the wholesale houses were discussing the carnation notes in the different trade papers and it was conceded that the carnation notes of A. F. J. Baur in the Review were the best. His notes each week are very instructive, being just what they want to know. Ribes' Rose Notes were highly spoken of, as were Bro. Scott's Seasonable Hints and Ivera's The Retail Florist. All these are read with great interest each week.

Oscar C. Kuehn, who took the photograph of the picnic group, has a lot of them finished up and mounted, which are for sale by him at 25 cents each.

Mr. Kuehn wishes to compliment the Review on the splendid cut from his photo in the last issue.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting will be held next Thursday, August 14th, at Edwardsville, the home of the "Perle King." Mr. Ammann writes that the boys should meet at the east end of the bridge at 12 sharp, and take the stock yards car for Gross Park, there to connect with the Edwardsville car, which leaves Gross Park at 12:30, sharp, and arrives at Edwardsville at 2 p. m. Edwardsville cars leave Gross Park, East St. Louis, at the half hours from 6:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m. He would like to have the boys come in a body, as it will make the trip more enjoyable. As the election of officers will take place at this meeting, a large delegation is expected. Bro. Ammann, no doubt, has a great surprise in store for us, and none of the craft should fail to take the opportunity to visit as fine a place, for its size, as there is in this country. All are welcome, so note the date and hour.

Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Berning left Monday night for a month's stay in California.

Arthur Y. Ellison left Tuesday to visit his father and mother, who are spending the summer up north.

Base Ball.

The Berning and Tesson base ball teams fought a battle royal on last Sunday afternoon on the latter's grounds. The Berning team won by a score of 3 to 1. Only five innings were played, owing to the Tesson catcher becoming disabled. Will Sanders was captain of the Berning team and it was due to his wonderful coaching that the three runs were made. A return match will be played in the near future.

Bowling.

The night was too hot for the bowlers —only six were there. Kuehn's team won all three games from Beneke's team by close scores, which were as follows:

Kuehn's Team 1	2	3	Total.	Av.
Kuehn 166	159	174	499	166 1-3
Ellis 163	159	174	496	165 1-3
Weber 155	199	136	490	163 1-3
	484	517	484	1485	165
Beneke's Team.1	2	3	Total	Av.
Beneke 156	159	173	488	162 2-3
Miller 161	151	137	467	155 2-3
Sturtz 156	192	170	518	172 2-3
	473	510	489	1473	163 2-3

St. Louis will not be represented at the coming convention by a bowling team, as our best bowlers will be unable to make the trip. I look for a good attendance from here and will endeavor in the next issue to give a list of those who are going. J. J. B.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses and carnations are really scarce. Tea roses are quoted at from $2 up to $6, but these prices are very high considering the quality. Beauties are of very good quality for the season and are more plentiful than Brides and Maids. While the best Beauties bring $2.50 to $3, shorts are sold at very low figures, many going at $2 to $4 per 100, and very good blooms too. A good short Bride or Kaiserin will now bring more money in the market than a good short Beauty.

Carnations are not so short in supply as tea roses, but there is a marked shortage, especially in white. The best reach $2, though most of them go at $1 to $1.50 and large lots of "weeds" are jobbed off at most any old price. Blooms cut from out door plants are of course the best now, but there are comparatively few of these yet and the outlook is not over cheerful in view of the great damage done to field plants. We hear of one grower who planted out 40,000 plants and will have not more than 4,000 to house. It was low lying land and during the first heavy rains the plants were under water three days. They came out apparently all right, but a later dose of the same sort practically finished them.

Asters are coming in very freely now and the best sell well at $1 to $1.50 and a few extra fine ones reach $2, but there is a host of under grade blooms that it is hard to sell at any price. Auratum lilies and gladioli are in ample supply, but they move very slowly. Sweet peas have picked up a little in quality, as the result of several days of sunshine and normal summer weather.

Various Items.

The picnic committee of the Florists' Club, Messrs. E. Enders, Walter Kreitling and E. F. Winterson, announce everything in readiness for the annual outing, which will take place at Bergman's grove, next Tuesday, August 12th. The florists of Milwaukee have been invited to be present. A long list of valuable prizes has been secured and will be awarded to the winners in the various races and games. There will be a bowling contest for the ladies as well as for the men. The umpire of the ball game is having a special suit of armor made for the occasion. It is expected that both wholesalers and retailers will close their stores the afternoon of the great day.

Now is a good time to make up your mind definitely to attend the S. A. F. Convention at Asheville, N. C. The fare is only $20 for the round trip, sleeping car $5 each way. Special cars from Chicago to Cincinnati and special train from the Ohio city on. It will be a happy, jolly crowd and you will enjoy the trip as well as the convention. Tell E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, to reserve a berth for you in the special cars now.

Mr. G. H. Pieser, secretary of Kennicott Bros. Co., will after August 12th start for a two weeks' outing at Lakewood, Wis.

Mr. C. L. Washburn has returned from his outing at Athelstane, Wis. His wife remains there and she will now be joined by Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett.

E. H. Hunt has received his Harrisii bulbs and is now shipping out orders for same. The bulbs are of very good quality this year.

Dean O'Connell, with L. J. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo., has been spending a week in the city.

John S. Forster has sold his greenhouses at Evanston, where he was one of the pioneers in the business, and will soon start for California, stopping at Colorado Springs for a few weeks on the way.

F. W. Taylor, Chief of Bureau of Horticulture at the St. Louis Exposition, was a visitor last week.

Mr. Edgar Sanders was taken suddenly ill last Thursday afternoon and has since then been confined to his bed. A clot of blood on the left side of the head caused a paralysis of the right side of his body. At first the case seemed serious, but the doctor now gives hope that he may regain the use of his right side. In view of Mr. Sanders' advanced age, the report of his serious illness naturally alarmed his many friends in the trade, who will all be pleased to know that hope is entertained of his speedy recovery.

Mr. F. A. Baller, Bloomington, Ill., was a visitor this week.

HEATING AN EXTENSION.

We have a house 17x55, heated by ten runs of 2-inch pipe. To this house we are adding forty-five feet, making it one hundred feet in length. To heat this addition we are advised to not disturb the old piping, but to take a couple of flows and returns from and to the boiler, running on to the new addition, there branching out with the proper amount to heat the new part. Is this the better plan?

We think we will have to take out part of the old piping, else the new flows and returns will make the old part too warm. Please advise us as to the best plan of heating the additional space.

M. & Co.

Replying to M. & Co., the method of carrying the circulation to the farther house they suggest is entirely practical, but it would naturally have a tendency to make the old house warmer than heretofore. This can readily be obviated by putting valves in the old coils.

The method of extending the pipes into the new house, and arranging for independent control of the addition, is clearly shown in the accompanying figure, "A" being a tee or cross-valve which controls the circulation in the cross or connecting pipe from the flow to the returns; "B" being the gate-valve to control the circulation through the pipes in the extension. When valve "B" is open, valve "A" should be closed, and vice versa.

RETURNING CONDENSED WATER.

I am about to change my heating from hot water to steam, but cannot go into the ground more than a foot or two on account of lack of drainage. Would, in fact, like to put a new 50 H. P. tubular boiler on top of the ground. How can I return the condensed water to boiler?

Ohio.

Replying to Ohio, it is possible to return the condensed water to the boiler by means of a patent trap; this, however, would compel the florist to rely upon an automatic mechanism for the effective working of his heating apparatus, which would naturally entail considerable risk.

Another plan would be to carry a steam pressure at all times sufficient to operate a pump and pump the return water to the boiler from a receiving cistern; this, however, would entail continual additional fixed expense. Without question, the cheapest and best method would be to employ a competent mason to build a water-tight pit sufficiently deep to bring the maximum water line of the boiler below the circulating coils in the greenhouse; this is not an impossible operation, and, in the end, will prove the cheapest and most satisfactory.

New York. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING.

In reply to L. R. A., the size of the mains is ample for the work placed upon them. The trouble lies in too little radiating surface in the coils. For the house, 22 feet wide, assuming glass on the roofs only, there should be not less than nineteen lines of 1¼-inch pipe, or if glass on one side wall, twenty or twenty-one lines to insure a temperature of 60 degrees on coldest nights with easy firing. For the heating of an eleven-foot house, nine or ten lines would be required. The smokestack of his boiler should be about twenty-five to thirty feet, the height being governed somewhat by the geographical and other conditions surrounding it.

New York. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

DES MOINES, IA.—W. L. Morris has purchased five acres of ground on West Thirtieth street and will at once erect on same a range of houses containing 12,000 square feet of glass. Next season he will remove his old houses on Cottage Grove avenue to the new location.

THE SHOOTING CONTEST AT ASHEVILLE.

Thursday Afternoon, August 21.

INDIVIDUAL CONTESTS.

First Event—15 targets—1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes (high guns).

Second Event—25 targets—1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes (high guns).

The team to compete against that of Asheville will be selected according to the records made in the above two events.

TEAM MATCH.

Asheville vs. S. A. F. & O. H.—25 targets per man.

A memento of the win will be presented to each member of the winning team.

We will have the use of a very nice ground, regularly fitted up for this sport, equipped with Magan trap and set of expert traps, and we can assure every lover of the gun a pleasant afternoon's sport. We trust that all of the craft who are shooters will not only attend the coming convention, but will bring along their guns and shells and join in this outing.

ROBERT J. HALLIDAY,
A. B. CARTLEDGE,
Committee.

GREEN DAHLIAS.

Mr. John H. Vesey, Kansas City, Mo., sends us two small dahlia blooms that are entirely green. He says that a local grower has one plant in his field that has produced all green flowers and wishes to know if the case is unique. We have never seen green dahlia blooms before. Will dahlia growers please report any similar case to us?

NOBLESVILLE, IND.—R. Q. Farley has purchased the greenhouses of John Harold & Sons, of this city, and during the coming year will remove the plant to his farm and will build a modern uptown store. He has leased the greenhouses to Chalmar Harold, junior member of the old firm.

TACOMA, WASH.—P. H. Williams is putting up 10,000 feet of glass and will do a regular retail business beginning Sept. 1.

Trade Notes.

Funeral work kept stock pretty well cleaned up and the supply of good shipping stock was short of demand, especially in white stock. Asters relieved the shortage of carnations, and plenty of sweet peas, gladioli, Speciosum lilies and miscellaneous outdoor stuff helped out to some considerable extent. Smilax and Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are coming in plentifully. There will be a noticeable increase in the local supply the coming season.

Quite a few vegetable gardeners are putting in carnations and violets, and new additions are being made by Nic Zweifel, C. C. Pollworth Co., Wm. Edlefsen, Heitman & Baerman, Holton & Hunkel Co. and Carl Johannes.

Sigmund Hoppenroth, who for many years conducted a florist establishment in the Market Hall, is seriously ill.

Wm. Branch has gone out of business.

Fred Menger has left for Europe to visit relatives.

C. C. Pollworth has left for Austin, Minn., to attend the convention of the Northern Iowa Florists, which comprises the florists of Osage, Owatonna, Charles City, Mason City, Decorah, Cresco, Austin and other surrounding cities.

Incog.

HAMILTON, ONT.

Preparations for the fifth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, to be held here Sept. 3rd and 4th, are well under way. A delegates' guide book has been issued, giving a great deal of interesting information regarding the city, ways of reaching the various points of interest, etc.

Hamilton has a population of 55,000, has numerous good hotels, is a beautiful and healthful city and an ideal place for a convention. The Hamilton Gardeners' and Florists' Club is a live body, with officers as follows: Fred Turner, president; Jay C. Jenks, vice president; John Connon, treasurer; T. Lawson, secretary.

A floral fete and exhibition will be held in the Thistle Curling Rink during the convention, under the joint management of the Hamilton Horticultural Society and the Hamilton Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Prizes are offered in numerous classes for amateurs and some for professionals. There will also be a distinctively trade exhibit. Information regarding same may be had by addressing T. Lawson, secretary, 159 Robinson street.

PAEONIES IN TEXAS.

Replying to the inquiry from Texas in regard to pæonies, we find that they do not give very good satisfaction in this part of the south, owing to the extremely hot weather during the summer. Where they can be given an abundance of water we have noticed here in Dallas that in some of the yards they bloom very nicely in the spring, but they are not generally cultivated here.

Bellefontaine, O.—Poole & Purllant are excavating for a new boiler pit of largo size and are making other improvements. Their grounds are now very attractive and are visited by hosts of people.

BOILER AND CHIMNEY.

Does it make a difference in the draft of a boiler whether it is far from or near the chimney, and if so, what is the difference? I intended placing a boiler about thirty feet away and leading a nearly horizontal smoke-pipe to my present chimney, which is twenty-five feet high, but I was told I would get no draft at all, and that I would have to either move it or make the chimney higher. Is that right? G. K.
Mich.

Replying to G. K., it makes a great difference whether the boiler is near the chimney or far away from it. If it is desired to use a horizontal flue thirty feet from the boiler to the chimney, be should certainly increase the height of his chimney at least fifteen feet. Another question, however, suggests itself: the chimney having been built for the first boiler, has it sufficient capacity to care for the second boiler with the handicap of the long horizontal connecting flue? I am inclined to think it would be better to build a separate chimney, but cannot say definitely without knowing all the details of the case.
New York. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

PIPING.

When we connect the boiler in our new boiler pit with the greenhouse there will be a down-grade of fourteen inches in the length of the house, which is ninety-eight feet long, hot water to be used. Shall we have to run flow pipes on a dead level or can we run them along ridge, making the water travel up the grade of fourteen inches to highest point, which is ninety-eight feet north from top of boiler?
Ohio. P. & P.

Replying to P. & P., as I understand their description, there is a rise in the floor of the greenhouse of about fourteen inches from the boiler end to the far end, thus, if the boiler is deep enough to allow the flow pipes to enter the house under the benches, all flows and returns should follow the grade of the land, thus the flow will rise to the far end of the house and the returns will fall back to the boiler end; if, however, the cellar is not deep enough to allow the flow to enter the greenhouse below the bench, it may be carried at the ridge, either following the grade of the house or dropping, as desired; an expansion tank will have to be placed at a point above the highest part of the circulating pipes. It would be better, if possible, to run the flows and returns below the bench. HENRY W. GIBBONS.
New York.

PIPING.

How many lines of 2-inch pipes will it take to heat with water so as to hold at 60 degrees, where thermometer occasionally falls to 10 to 14 degrees below zero, a three-quarter span house, 18x112 inside of walls, 11½ feet to ridge, side walls 5½ feet high, of hollow tile, one row of 12x14 glass in side wall?
Ind. W. H. W.

Replying to W. H. W., I would advise him to use fourteen lines of 2-inch pipes in the house described, which will easily maintain 60 degrees on coldest nights.
New York. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Tarrytown Horticultural Society.

Meeting held July 31st, 1902, President Scott in the chair. Executive committee reported articles of incorporation complete, signed and certified, and the same was read. Six persons were elected to honorary membership and four to active membership. Mr. Grant Feetsall's name was by request changed from the honorary to the active list, and two new names were proposed for active membership.

The exhibits of the evening were: Collection of dahlias and Rubus sorbifolius, from L. A. Martin, of Greenwich; mignonette, from Francis Gibson, and lilies, from Thos. Cockburn. L. A. Martin was awarded honorable mention for dahlias and certificate of merit for Rubus sorbifolius.

An essay was read by W. H. Waite, superintendent of Greystone, Yonkers, on stove plants. Discussion followed, by Messrs. Mooney, McFarlane, Scott and Donold. A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Waite for his very able essay. L. A. Martin will read an essay on dahlias at the September meeting. The question of a day's outing for the club was referred to the executive committee.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

During the past month trade has been quiet. With the exception of funeral work there was little doing.

Roses are looking well and are in good condition to give a fair cut by the end of the month. Beauties are looking particularly strong. Carnations are coming in from the field in fine shape, there being no sign of rust or stem rot. Most of the growers were fortunate in having selected high ground for field culture. Benching is being pushed along vigorously and will be completed much earlier this year than formerly. The quantity planted will slightly exceed that of last season. The most of last year's introductions will get a trial.

The Dunkley Floral Company is having the inside of the houses repainted, which gives them quite a sprightly appearance.

G. Van Boehove & Bro. are busy constructing two new houses, one for a forcing house and the other for violets.

Miss Dora Brown, designer at Van Boehove's, has returned from a two weeks' vacation, which she spent at the home of her parents in Goshen, Ind.

John R. Van Boehove has been entertaining a party of friends at his cottage on Long Lake. They had a very enjoyable time, cruising about in his electro-vapor launch in quest of those big bass for which this lake is famed. They returned with well-browned faces, a fair catch and a brand new outfit of fish stories.

Michael Winandy has the Chicago Carnation Co.'s new plant nearly finished and is now putting up a greenhouse plant at Niles Center.

Jos. Labo has had his rose stock planted for some time and will soon be planting in his carnations; his carnations being on high well-drained land, have done remarkably well this season.

The Chicago Carnation Co. are now housing their carnations and are looking forward to what they believe will be the best season in years.

Among recent visitors were: Archie Spencer, Leonard Kill and wife, Mr. Zender and wife, all of Chicago; Mr. S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Wm. Blackman, Evansville, Ind.; Davis Bros., Morrison, Ill.; Jos. Bancroft, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Mr. Holland, Pontiac, Ill.

MR. THERON N. PARKER,
Parker-Bruen M'g Co.

Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the bill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.

Yours very truly,
A. L. THORNE.

LA FAYETTE IND., July 8, 1902.
THERON N. PARKER,
Harrison, N. J.

Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,

SEATTLE, WASH.

We are passing through a dull summer and there is nothing alarming to report from the "City on the 'Sound." The general order of the times is building, repairing and planting the houses with young stock. There is great activity in this line, as the florists are trying to keep pace with other lines of trade. July 4th saw the end of a most prosperous season, and an early revival of business is looked for when the "Elks" hold their carnival, from the 18th to the 30th of August. The retailers are making very creditable window displays of carnations and plenty of good outdoor stock. Light colored roses are the only scarce article in the market. The climate here is delightfully cool and "quite English, you know." Herbaceous stock and summer blooming plants thrive luxuriantly and our gardens are a paradise.

The Alaskan Steamship Company, now running excursions to Alaska, is advertising that country as an ideal summer resort, and a few of the florists now make the trip annually for a month's rest.

The Seattle Floral Company has outgrown its present location and is building 10,000 feet of glass at the corner of Clay and Danny streets.

C. Hofmeister, of the Washington Floral Company, reports a big sale for tomatoes and cucumbers, which he grows under glass and finds more profitable than cut flowers during the summer months.

John Holze, with unlimited ambition, will soon move right into the center of the residence district, Thirteenth and East Union streets, where he is building 12,000 feet of glass.

M. R. Galloway has rented part of a large drugstore at 904 Second avenue, formerly occupied by Mrs. McCoy, which he is fixing up neatly to attract the better trade. H. J. M.

LONDON, ONT.

The London Horticultural Association will hold its Sweet Pea or Mid-summer Show on Aug. 6th and 7th. As the season has been favorable to the growth of outdoor flowers, it is expected that this show will eclipse any of its predecessors.

The weather continues wet, and great damage is being done to the crops. A tornado swept over this part of the country July 27, doing much damage to trees and overthrowing barns and sheds, but so far we have not heard of any glass being destroyed.

Convention matters are now the general topic, and from present appearances the fifth annual convention will be a record breaker.

We are pleased to hear that a determined effort is being made to revive the trade paper, and hope that the efforts of the executive committee may prove successful. LOND.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

Summer Decorations.

Summer decorations are comparatively speaking inexpensive and more of them might be done were the particulars better known. Possibly because there is an abundance of summer beauty on all sides people are not so eager to indulge in elaborate interior decorations, yet we know from experience that many more decorations would be done were the florist equal to each particular occasion. There is a time and place for everything and often people are scared away from the store by superfluous or over-elaborate suggestions where something very simple is not only wanted but is best on all sides. A store man may consider himself extremely smart if he succeeds in extracting the very last dollar from a customer's pocket, but it isn't always the best policy, because it is only human nature to regret excess, and there is the inevitable rebound. The steady trade, even if it be smaller, is far more profitable than the spasmodic, because it is more secure and its possibilities are greater. There is, to be sure, a certain class of customers in every large city who having easy means of procuring money are indifferent as to how it goes; they are willing to pay high for what they purchase, but even they don't want to be "done up," and it is always the best to secure and hold the confidence of all. A business man can never afford to be indifferent; he may have a motive in pretending so betimes, but he soon wakes up.

This is a critical time of the year. People expect and can obtain lots for their money, yet it is often workmanship and not material that counts in estimation. Often a mass of common stock can only create indifferent appreciation, whereas, the arrangement and finish may call forth the highest praise. Avoid the former for it detracts from the latter. Green and gold are the two most abundant colors on Nature's mantle at the present time, and unlike most other colors they are not so despised on account of abundancy. They are fashionable because there is in them a splendid harmony of richness, and you can make no mistake in suggesting their use on all festive occasions. But it must be remembered that different events and dispositions call for different degrees of elaborateness, and it is always well to study the circumstances surrounding each affair. Satisfaction is a most desirable word to hear from your patron and it is easily accomplished, especially during the next few weeks.

There will be many weddings from now till frost-time, and the same materials will be available all that time. Of course it can be done—nothing should be impossible—but no decorator should give an estimate on any job without first visiting the house or scene of the proposed work, because often his very suggestions whilst on the spot not only create impressions but decide his future connections, and then again most people even for the simplest affair prefer to have you call and see what is best required. Therefore, every florist who aspires to please, and that is the foundation of all successes, should make himself or herself thoroughly conversant with the technicalities of artistic house decorations. Flowers and foliage are mostly always beautiful to some eyes, no matter how they are arranged, but no flower is so beautiful that one cannot emphasize its beauty by proper arrangement, and though the vast majority of people may be pleased when they see plenty for their money, yet the artistically critical army is growing immensely, and modern architecture is mainly responsible for this. Owners of modern built houses and the architects, who very often have all the say about what can be put in, like to see the florist acquainted with their particular fads or fancies and these should, wherever it is possible, be accentuated. Every room in a house requires a different style of treatment.

The houses that are being built at the present time will not permit of very lavish floral decorations, that is, in the old-fashioned way, with garlands or masses of common green. To even suggest such things would offend and justify a severe rebuke, but such places do afford a splendid opportunity to display quality of plants and refinement of flowers and art. In a great many instances only graceful plants and choicest flowers can be used, and they should be so placed as to bring out the full beauty of the surroundings and no attempt should be made to over-elaborate or introduce made-up designs or even hang up greens of any kind.

There are many occasions, to be sure, where people wish to hide inferiorly furnished walls and hail with delight any suggestion that will make the occasion seem specially elaborate, and for this you cannot do better than use plenty of pin oak foliage.

One thing to remember is that people have a great dread of having their place ruined by the florist driving nails. Modern equipments and ideas render it unnecessary to use many, if any, nails in even extensive decorations, and the florist who is careless in this respect injures not only his own trade but decorative art in general.

In the course of a few weeks we hope to be able to show practical illustrations of both simple and elaborate decorative work. In the meantime, we can only dwell upon the principles of art and a few hastily jotted down thoughts. Yellow flowers can be used extensively in all summer or autumn decorations (except for funerals). In the majority of cases they can be made the most prominent flower, and this not because they are superabundant, but because they have a peculiar expressive effect. Even in the case of church weddings they can form the main wall decoration, leaving the center aisle and altars for white flowers if desirable, but even they can be decorated with yellow. There is a strong poetic sentiment surrounding such flowers as solidago (golden rod), and Rudbeckia speciosa (yellow daisy), and though yellow is the least of church colors, still there are occasions when we must not be always thinking of death and the hereafter, and severe lines must be covered. Purple, the principal church color, and the cross, its cherished emblem, need not be even seen at a wedding festival. Golden rod may be the very commonest material, but its commonness does not affect its value when properly arranged, and you can make no mistake in suggesting its use in most summer work, even if you confine it to one room.

We always try to introduce one yellow and green room in our decorations, and at the present time it is the hallway, library or dining-room. The main entrance or hallway can always be made most attractive with such materials as oak leaves and rudbeckias. There are many lovely varieties of these and heleniums which make superb pictures at little cost. The only thing is to mass them in great loose clusters and have each kind of flower separate. In the drawing-rooms, or where there is delicate or expensive furnishings, coarse foliage or flowers are entirely out of place, but here you can use tamarix or asparagus or such grasses as Eulalia gracillima.

If doorways or walls need to be covered you can use very deep-cut oak foliage. We recommend it because it keeps and looks the best of all outdoor foliage. Such as grape vine, ampelopsis, honeysuckle or any such vines can be used for pendent effects. Great care should be used to either avoid or appropriately decorate pictures. A background of green foliage will the more effectively show off any picture, but it is against the laws of good taste to decorate a frame in a formal manner. Pictures illustrate many topics in life, and it is often the case that you can add a vast amount of beauty and intelligence to your work by showing that you understand what is appropriate. A vase or cluster of suitable flowers gives you more expression than frames or garlands of such as smilax.

If the subject be of harvest time introduce a little wheat, barley or oats as a background to poppies, cornflowers or some such flower identified with the season. If the painting be of roses then select the color in roses that will either match or harmonize with those in the picture. If it is an illustration of victory or of plenty then you can introduce a garland of flowers or a small wreath of bays, or both, and so on. Whatever the subject be in picture or statuary try to show that you understand, and in all possible cases use either graceful palms or foliage as a background to statuary. The same rule applies to vases. If it be of China or Japanese ware endeavor to employ either the flowers or the styles especially associated with those countries. Even whole rooms which are furnished in the different styles of the several artistic countries should be decorated with a view of conforming to that particular style.

When you decorate a library it is not necessary to struggle hard to hide everything in the room. A few good books always look well alongside a vase of mixed flowers. You can use mixed flowers in a library where you may not in another room, because they are appropriate to the different beauties on the shelves. Never entirely hide a bookcase. A few delicate vines, palms and vases of flowers are all that is necessary. In the matter of fine woodwork or pillars or any kind of furniture remember you are not employed to cover up; you are supposed to beautify, and therefore be careful your work is more artistic than that which you are covering. The hall stairway is generally a place where you can show your ability, but it is ridiculous to put all your ability and material there. House decorations should not be too abrupt. One room should lend its charm to the other and the whole conform to the requirements of the occasion.

You will soon have all the theaters opening for the season, and no entrance should be without its pretty decorating. Abundance of cheap materials can be had. Suggest some inexpensive design to the managers, for the public and future trade is benefitted by seeing flowers on such occasions. IVERA.

I like the pastoral scene in the background. It is part of western New York that is little cultivated, of which I think there is about 90 per cent. such land in the whole state. Near the big round bushy willow in the center of the landscape meanders a stream with the poetical name of "Murder Creek." No murder has occurred on its banks within a few weeks except the slaughter of frogs, of which there are bull, cow and the plain little everyday frog. When this little creek gets on the rampage it covers hundreds of acres with three feet of water, but it subsides and the water goes over Reappearance of the Aster Family.

REAPPEARANCE OF THE ASTER FAMILY.

Some weeks ago I had the pleasure to show you a group of somebodies or nobodies planting asters. That picture was taken without any design of being published. This one was. I think really it was the 18th of May when the man with the rake and his associates were putting in the little plants. We began cutting July 5 or 6. The variety is Farquhar's "Queen of the Earlies."

Now, where the aster garden has been sufficiently high to throw off the abnormal rainfall of June and July it has been an ideal season. Unfortunately, next to this lot on the left is a larger quantity of Victoria and Truffaut's pæony flowered, and more than half of them are simply drowned.

There are few crops, if worth growing at all, that need more thorough cultivation and proper conditions than this common annual. The soil should be dug or ploughed at least a foot deep, a liberal quantity of manure added every year, and if the season is dry they must be irrigated. The deeper the ground is dug or trenched the less will the want of water be felt. Cultivation is far more important than the varieties or strains. The camera was turned in the opposite direction this time but it's the same lot of asters. You can tell that by the man who never looks up from his work, and who that morning picked 700 off the bed. In fact we have many more than we could use.

CARNATION NOTES.

Syringing.

After planting in your carnations you must keep them syringed well for several days to keep them from wilting. A badly wilted carnation might just about as well be pulled up and thrown away. Just how often it is required must depend entirely on the weather and the conditions of the plants. A soft, quickly grown plant that had lots of rain outside will need more syringing than one that had little rain and is therefore better matured, and the latter will also take hold of the soil quicker.

We usually syringe early in the morning, and then about every hour and a half during the day if the sun is quite warm, and at the same time wetting down the walks and under the benches, etc. We find that the closest watching is required, from the third to the fifth day if the plants are the least bit soft. The first day or two they will stand up pretty well with the strength contained within themselves, but about the third day they need a little more help from the outside, and as the roots are not in shape to supply it you must do it with the spray. Don't spray them heavy enough to get the soil in a soggy condition, as it will sour and bring on stem-rot. Just spray enough to wet the foliage and depend on keeping the atmosphere moist by keeping the walks wet.

After the plants have taken hold a good plan is to sprinkle a little air-slaked lime over the soil and stir it in before giving a good watering; this will put the soil in good condition again. We always put up a few plants of each variety to plant in place of those dying from stem-rot or some other cause. If you don't need them there is not much lost, and they will take hold much better from pots than right from the field. Five per cent of what you plant on the benches ought to be enough unless you have a bad dose of stem-rot. Do this at once so that by the time the others have taken a good hold of the soil those in pots will be rooted through and in good shape to plant on the bench and able to grow right along with the others on even terms.

Let the shade come off the glass gradually when the plants have taken hold. If the weather is bright and hot a little shade will do no harm for a week or two, but do not let it remain too long. A rainy spell will soon remove it. Sometimes we are obliged to remove it with a brush, but not often, if we use the proper kind of shading material.

A. F. J. Baur.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The season is now approaching when Beauties and Liberties will be liable to be attacked by black spot, and it behooves every grower to be on the lookout for this trouble and to stamp it out as soon as it makes its appearance. Houses which are situated on low, marshy or much sheltered ground, and where naturally the foliage is soft, are usually the first to suffer.

Care should be taken to keep the atmosphere as dry as is consistent with the health of the plant; avoid all sudden fluctuations of temperature, and be sure to have the foliage dry by sundown.

To prevent and hold this fungus in check a spraying of the carbonate of copper compound is recommended, using 3 ounces of carbonate of copper and 1 quart of ammonia to 50 gallons of water and apply once a week.

Cleanliness and care play an important part in the prevention and checking the spread of this trouble. Those leaves at the base of the stem which touch the soil should be picked off, as it is there the trouble usually begins. All ripe, spotted and decaying leaves should be carefully picked off every day and destroyed. If this treatment is persisted in for a few weeks and special care taken not to overwater the benches the trouble will disappear. Ribes.

WEDDING DECORATION.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a church decoration by Jos. Kift & Son, of Philadelphia, for a wedding on June 7th. With the exception of the lilies in the baptistry and on the central arch overhead the only flowers were roses, of which over six thousand medium to short stemmed were used. The varieties were Bride and Bridesmaid, Queen of Edgely, Kaiserin and Robert Wedding Decoration by Jos. Kift & Son, Philadelphia.

Scott, the colors being limited to white and pink.

The effect was of a large arbor covered with climbing roses in full flower. Each color was kept separate, the plants being apparently growing from large green pots which contained laurel branches, and these being covered with roses, showed a fullness and irregularity that gave the whole decoration a more natural appearance. In the photograph, which was taken by flashlight, the difference in the colors is not apparent, but while each variety was kept to itself, they were trained, some straight, others diagonally, and all to look as natural as possible. The space covered was ten to twelve feet high by seventy-five feet long. The roses were arranged in Kift's vase rods, suspended by wire from stout tacks in the top of the cornice rail. The whole arrangement was in front of polished wood work and when taken down there was not a scratch to be seen.

The pew ends and kneeling stool were decorated with white roses, and palms were used in front of the platform and either side of front of church. The baptistry, as is seen, contained Easter lilies in trumpet or horn vases; the edge was covered with lilies in mossed boards, cut to fit, and on the arch lilies were placed in vases attached to the adjustable holders.

The wedding took place on Saturday and the Sunday following, being children's day, the decorations, with the exception of the pew ends and kneeling stool, were allowed to remain, and were in such good condition at the end of the evening service that the flowers were distributed to the members of the congregation. CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Feeding.

Feeding is beginning to occupy the thoughts of those who planted their stock early with the idea of getting as good results as possible. The old theory of not feeding at all until after the bud is set and swelling is all very well, but it does not always work out right in practice. Early planted stock is now beginning to show signs that a little more nourishment is needed. The foliage of the plants is running smaller, and the general growth is not as robust as it might be, showing that most of the nourishment present in the soil at planting time has been exhausted.

Now is the time to apply a mulch of rotten cow manure to your beds. This keeps a more uniform degree of moisture in the soil and protects the young roots that appear on the surface. We do not believe in too heavy a mulch, as it keeps the soil too wet, and we think it is conducive to a vigorous growth of suckers, which, of course, have to be removed. Just enough to cover the soil nicely is all you need to apply. Bone meal is sometimes scattered over the beds before putting on the mulch. If you use any let it be the bone flour, as the coarse meal is too slow in action and is not available by the plants to any great extent before the flowers are developing, and then it is not needed. Above all things avoid the use of fresh cow manure as a mulch. I have seen the foliage killed half way up the stem by putting rank manure on the benches. If you haven't any rotten manure throw on a little leaf soil, or even use no mulch at all rather than use crude manure.

Feeding with liquid fertilizers may be started now, giving your plants a dose once a week or so and gradually increasing in frequency. Nitrate of soda is useful used in the proportion of one pound of soda to fifty gallons of water, but if the growth of the plant is free and good it is not well to use soda more than once or twice, as it tends to produce a quick, soft growth, and the best flowers are produced where the growth is slower and firmer. Sulphate of ammonia is also largely used by the best growers. It is safe to use much oftener than the soda and should be applied in a slightly more diluted form, say 12 ounces in 50 gallons of water. These chemicals should be alternated with liquid cow or sheep manure, which should be diluted down considerably for the first applications.

Many flowers are lost every year by injudicious feeding, where the plants have been heavily dosed with something, or feeding has been too long continued. Half a dozen light applications of liquid manure are far more beneficial to plants than one heavy one. When a heavy dose of anything is given it will kill all the delicate feeding roots, and the plant has to produce more before it can take up the nourishment supplied; and in the meantime has been at a standstill. When using chemicals, or in fact any liquid fertilizer, be careful to see first that the soil is not too dry. Give clear water first, so that the young roots will not take up the feed too greedily.

The problem of feeding, when to feed, how much to apply and how often, are questions that are perplexing to the novice, and no one without seeing the plants personally can advise. Experience is the only teacher, and there are always so many things to be considered—season, locality, condition of the plants, etc. It is wonderful the amount of food a chrysanthemum plant will use when it is applied to good advantage, and the results are equally wonderful, but it is always far better for an inexperienced grower to use too little than too much unless he is prepared to lose many of his flowers by rotting, which frequently follows overfeeding. Too much nitrogenous manure will develop enormous leaves and stem at the expense of the flower, and it has been repeatedly proved by expert growers that changes from one kind of fertilizer to another continually will always give the best results.

These notes on feeding apply to the grower of exhibition flowers chiefly. The average florist gives his plants a dose or two of cow manure and gets flowers plenty good enough for his use, or he may make his soil rich enough at planting time to carry the plants right through, but the grower for exhibition must feed, and feed considerably, or get left in the race. I believe that the Chinese, who have been growing mums longer than we have, encourage their plants with liquid manure right from the first stages of growth. They evidently realize the oft-repeated assertion that the mum is a gross feeder.

A man who came round looking for a job once told me that a mum could be fed up to the point where it would digest "kerosene ile;" he'd be "blink blanked if it wouldn't." It may be so, but I never experimented to see, being reasonably content with my success obtained by keeping to more conservative and better known aids to culture.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Rambler Rose Cuttings.

A subscriber asks: "Would cuttings from Crimson Rambler rose root if taken from the plants at this season of the year? Kindly state in the next issue of The Review what time of the year is best for rooting them and oblige."

By going to the trouble of putting up a mild hot bed and with a few inches of sand, also the greatest care in shading and moisture, they could be rooted now. From middle of October to middle of November is a far better time. Then the ordinary propagating house will do very well. Again in February and March from blind shoots of the plants you are forcing for Easter you can propagate to a certainty. In selecting the cuttings either in the fall or spring don't choose the strong, stout growths; the medium-sized firm growths root much better. This is a rule that applies to all rose cuttings, more particularly to the hybrid perpetual and the hardy climbing types.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

Some weeks ago, in describing a range of rose houses that were all connected, but no partitions, and the gutters supported with cedar posts, walks on each side of posts, I mentioned that I saw Asparagus Sprengeri growing in deep, narrow boxes between the posts. The boxes were 24 inches long, 16 inches deep and perhaps 8 inches wide. In fact, they were made to hold 100 lights of 16x24 glass, but the glass was on the roof and the asparagus had been growing in these deep, narrow boxes all winter most luxuriantly, and must have added greatly to the revenue of the houses.

Now is a good time to start, and any amount of it is advertised. I don't recommend a costly range of houses being built on this plan just to accommodate these boxes, but what could be put in this space so profitably, and some of you may have such a spot or two on your place. We all know that the asparagus family are prodigious feeders, and this useful one soon gets small and stunted in its growth if there is not a large supply of food, and what impressed me with its growth when I saw these boxes last November and again in June this year was their wonderful growth and color. It was the depth of soil, and the plants had not become exhausted. Depend upon it, that happy thought of utilizing those otherwise useless boxes was inspiration. The conditions were just what this hungry plant needs.

Pansies.

Those who grow pansies and winter them in a cold frame so as to have early flowering plants in April for vase-filling should sow by the middle of this month. In the choice and fancy of people for the many faced and marked pansies there is no accounting, and if only a few thousand are wanted some good mixed strain is sufficient, but of late in pansies as in other flowers the customers want a bed or vase filled with one color, and you should be sure that you have a good supply of the yellow, white, purple and very dark or black variety. A bed of these four colors in distinct lines or masses is about as chaste and tasty a bed of flowers as can be found. After a bed of coleus or geraniums it is like a Rubens compared to a circus poster.

Cinerarias.

Sow cineraria this month or early in the next for your Easter and spring plants. We do not think that this showy plant is worth growing. It takes up too much room, needs a vast amount of fumigating and is cheap in the end, but there may be communities where it is of value. Cineraria has a seed that you can see without the aid of a microscope, and is easy to manage in a young state.

Calceolarias.

Calceolaria (the herbaceous) is a much more showy plant, and if well done is about as gaudy, high-colored a plant as we grow. The seed is very minute and will not need any covering. Just well water the soil in the pot or pan and when dry enough so that it is not sticky sow the seed on the surface and press in with the clean bottom of a new pot. I don't know any better plan with all these small seeds than to put a light of glass over the pot or flat and cover with a cloth. This keeps the soil moist without the need of daily watering, but you must watch out and remove both as soon as the seedlings are up or they will generally "draw up," and that's a poor way to start.

Callas.

I was asked a question a few days ago about callas. A friend and neighbor has just planted a bench 150x5. Evidently he thinks they are going to be in demand, and I am not sure but that he has guessed right. He is not the man who asked the question; he knows all about it. Calla roots that are just bought should be started at once, out of doors if you are crowded indoors; it makes little difference. Although you get a good crop of flowers from them in the spring when planted in a bench in six inches of good soil, you will not get so many flowers during the dark days from the bench as from those grown in pots, and I prefer them the year around in pots.

Those you flowered last winter and have rested out of doors this summer should soon be shaken out and started. You will find a great many off-shoots, little bulblets we call them, from the size of a marrowfat pea to a freesia bulb. If they are potted this fall into 2-inch and given one shift during winter and in May put into a 5-inch and plunged out of doors and kept liberally watered all summer they will make fine flowering roots the following winter. Perhaps it is as cheap to buy the Pacific slope roots. I have never tried the latter.

Cyclamen.

Will you please look after the cyclamen just now. The sun is getting less and less powerful every day and a permanent shading will not do, so have, buy, get, invent or make some means of shading during the bright hours of the day and remove it after 3 p. m. and on dull days altogether.

William Scott.

BUFFALO.

Business.

Extreme dullness in business is reported all along the line, and we suppose we are no exception. Gladioli, asters, sweet peas and carnations of very fair quality are piling up, or would pile up if there were not the daily dumping.

The Club's Picnic.

It has started in again to rain at some time every twenty-four hours. Yet between the hours of 1 and 10 p. m. last Wednesday it did not rain, and the Florist Club's annual picnic went off in the most approved style. Niagara was calm and no seasickness was reported. It was by far the largest crowd that ever attended a similar occasion. There were sisters and cousins and aunts—altogether 125 sat down to the feast, which concluded the day's sport. There were half a dozen faces not seen there that should have been, but to make amends for that were several present whom we did not look for. C. F. Christensen and family and all the staff were welcome attendants. The most notable absentee was Daniel B. Long. Now, what was the matter, Dan? Don't pretend you were too busy. Still, if you were going to introduce business it's as well you stopped home.

After the inevitable operation of photographing was over we all adjourned to the pasture lot, on which a diamond is laid out, and with little delay the ball game was begun. It was all Buffalo florists vs. Scott's Sons and employes. There was a small "ringer" on the Scott team and two big "ringers" on the other side. The battery was Stevens and R. Scott, and for All-Buffalo Scrap Iron Heavyweight and Weiss. I would like to be able to give the correct name of the All-Buffalo pitcher, but I don't know it. His claim to being a florist was based on his having carted some little around town for Mr. Anderson at one or more Easter times. He was, however, a good-tempered, jolly fellow.

The game was for blood and gore and something else, and the something else caused a good many remarks between S. A. Anderson and W. B. Scott. At the last half of the last inning the score stood 9 to 7 in favor of All-Buffalo and the Scotts to bat. In a few minutes D. I. Scott came in with a run; then two men went out; two more got on the bases, second and third; C. Reish came to bat but fanned the country atmosphere twice and had three bad balls tossed to him. It was a momentous moment; women stopped their gossip; hearts throbbed loudly; W. Mott walked toward the beer keg overcome with emotion, but before he found that the barrel was empty, whack! went the ball into the left field; two men came in and the game was won and lost.

L. H. Neubeck officiated in the thankless position of umpire, and an able one he made. I just want to say that although a loser, Mr. Anderson had a hard task to get a team together, but he did his best, and he took defeat in a good-natured, gentlemanly way that pleased the writer very much. They were all such swell players that I shall not attempt to mention any of them in particular, only to say that if the manager of the New York National League Club had been present I know he would have engaged Shortstop Bert Troup, Catcher Stephen Jones for a kicker and coacher and Carl Reisch for his marvelous base-running.

Then for the programme of sports. President Braik was fortunate to have at his call three eminent judges of seeds, bulbs, florists' supplies, fertilizers, etc., and they proved equally good judges of athletic games. Walter Mott came from Jamestown ready to enjoy himself and never whispered business. Mr. C. B. Knickman, of Rutherford, N. J., shut off palms, lilies and bay trees for the day, and Mr. William Trillow, representing the Chicago house of J. C. Vaughan, did his best to suppress business. It would show signs occasionally of breaking out, and several times you could see his eyes look up, and he would get as far as "How are you off for——" when he was immediately conducted over to the refreshment counter and was then profuse with apologies. He said we must excuse him; it was so strange to him.

I have already occupied too much space, Mr. Editor, but I must tell you that there was a 100-yard race, running hop, skip and jump, bicycle race, three-legged race, ladies' race (maiden fillies to carry ten pounds extra), old men's race (the idea of their calling a man old at fifty-eight), boys' race, girls' race and one-legged race. There were thirty-two useful and substantial prizes.

The fields were large in almost every contest. The features of note were the sprinting of Mr. Reichert and George McClure, the broad jump of D. J. Scott and the great hop, skip and jump, 36 feet 6 inches, of Billy Greever. The elderly ladies present said that for a man so recently married this was an extraordinary performance. I must mention the splendid running of Mrs. Bailey. As the writer was starter, we watched her from the time she left her trainer's care till she got the word. I could not see a blemish in her. For her age she is most docile, quiet and patient at the post, while other performers gave the starter much trouble, but when she settles into her gait she has her field hitched up to the fence. There is no better place to judge of action, style or form in this class of race than from the position of starter, as he views the flying field some thirty yards ahead of him, and he is always glad if the race is run in heats.

We were greatly in hopes that after the supper we should be treated to a little talk from President Braik, and the distribution of prizes was to have been made by another spouter; but it was not to be. Walter Mott had been told that he was expected to say a little about something, and as soon as he got his ice cream down he made for the door. Others followed and soon it was a stampede.

All praise to our worthy president, Captain Braik, and to the committee, C. H. Keitsch, William Legg and the other member, who so well arranged all details. And the committee on sports likewise did well, and they were Emil Bruker, William Greever and W. B. Scott. One who was not officially on the committee, but seemed to do a lot of work, was J. Rowland Clendsley, Esq.

In conclusion, gentlemen of the Buffalo Florists' Club, it is perhaps not for the old man, who can not much longer be a participant in your sports, to dictate the manner of your amusements for the annual picnic, but I must beg leave to say, cut out the baseball game. It has been too much in earnest, occupies too much time, is not of general interest, and, far more important than any of the foregoing, it engenders a spirit of rivalry, and worse. It's grand in its place, but not at a florists' picnic. Let's have more music, dancing, rolling in the grass, buying your wife and wife's sister another bottle of sarsaparilla, a more general mix-up, and we should have no cause to regret it. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses are still short in supply, though quality and quantity are improving, as more buds are being cut from the young stock. The stems of these are weak and short, of course, but many of the flowers are very fair. The general range is from $2 to $5, with some selects reaching $6. Rates have stiffened some on Beauties. Beauty prices change but little; that is, on those with fair to good stems, the variations in supply and demand being generally met by a stronger or less rigid adherence to the regular grades in classifying. Carnations range from $1 to $1.50, with selects reaching $2, and "weeds" are offered at 40 to 50 cents.

Asters are being received in immense quantities. The best sell at $1 to $1.50, with a few extra good reaching $2, but many poor and short-stemmed flowers can be had at 20 to 75 cents a hundred. The great abundance of good white asters has somewhat diminished last week's heavy call for white carnations. Not so many gladioli are coming in now, and good blooms are very well cleaned up at $1.50 to $2 per 100 spikes. Auratum lilies are still coming in freely and move slowly.

The funeral of Senator McMillan has brought many calls for fine flowers from Detroit this week, and more choice stock could have been placed.

The start of the Married Ladies' Race at the Picnic of the Chicago Florists' Club, Tuesday afternoon, this week.

The Picnic.

The annual picnic of the Florists' Club last Tuesday was one of the best attended affairs of the sort in the history of the organization. The day was an ideal one and the florists turned out in force. The various races and other contests were entered into with vim and dash and all present enjoyed themselves hugely.

In the 50-yard dash for misses Miss C. Ludlow was first and Miss L. C. Polis was second.

In the 50-yard dash for boys L. Bradie was first and F. Mador was second.

The race for little girls from 3 to 7 years was a most interesting event. The little ones ran bravely. Miss Hill was first and Miss Bradie was second.

In the 50-yard dash for girls Miss Benthey was first and Rose Garland was second.

In the misses' race of 100 yards Miss Scholze was first and Miss Stromback was second.

In the 100-yard dash for men J. Walker won first by a foot and John Zeck second by a leg.

In the married ladies' race Mrs. Fred Wittbold easily captured the prize of a sofa pillow.

In the fat men's race J. Enders won such a large first prize that George Asmus was contented to accept second.

In the hurdle race (the hurdles consisting of two long benches from the picnic grounds' tables) C. B. Smeeton captured first and Gus Balluff second. It was a hot run and a warm finish. No bones broken.

There was a hot game of baseball between two teams captained by E. F. Winterson and Ed. Benthey. Mr. Winterson's team won by a score of 13 to 8.

There were so many to roll in the bowling contest that each one was allowed only five balls, total pins to count. In the men's contest three were tied for first prize, a fine bowling ball, each making the full fifty pins. These were P. J. Hauswirth, Leonard Kill and Fred Worden. On rolling off the tie, Mr. Hauswirth won out, making forty-seven pins, while Mr. Worden got forty-five and Mr. Kill, forty.

The second prize was a quart bottle of champagne, and no less than five tied for second place, each making forty-nine pins. Mr. P. J. Hauswirth was again victorious, repeating his former score of forty-nine, while the next highest was forty-two.

In the ladies' contest, the first prize was also a bowling ball, and it was won by Mrs. Melms, with a score of forty-seven. For second prize, a carving set, there was a tie between Miss Wyant and Mrs. Peter Reinberg, each making forty-four pins. In rolling off the tie, Miss Wyant won, making forty-seven pins, Mrs. Reinberg getting thirty-seven.

In the evening a handsome large basket of his finest confectionery, contributed by Mr. C. F. Gunther, was won by John Poehlmann and his niece in a prize waltz.

There was good music, and the dancing pavilion was well patronized.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kennedy and C. C. Pollworth came all the way from Milwaukee and James Hartshorne came up from Joliet to take in the outing.

The absence of the veteran Edgar Sanders was regretted by all.

The committee, consisting of E. Enders, Walter Kreitling and E. F. Winterson, is entitled to much credit for the success of the affair.

Various Items.

Don't forget that the delegation to the Asheville convention will start by Big Four route next Sunday evening at 8:30; fare $20.00 for the round trip. Special cars from here to Cincinnati and special train from that city on. The Cincinnati florists have arranged to entertain the party while in their city Monday morning. If you have not already ordered a berth reserved for you in the special cars better attend to it at once. Probably it would be better at this date to address direct to J. C. Tucker, Agent of the Big Four Route, 234 S. Clark street, though E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, will attend to it for you if you wish.

E. H. Hunt has received a stock of seed of an especially fine strain of cyclamen.

Edgar Sanders is reported to be improving, though still kept quiet and not permitted to see visitors.

Challenge Ventilator Evans was a visitor this week.

G. H. Pieser, secretary of the Kennicott Bros. Co., started last Tuesday for a two weeks' outing in Wisconsin.

Mr. C. Winterich, Defiance, O., was a welcome caller this week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The middle of August finds the cut flower market quiet, but with a steady undercurrent of substantial business. Kaiserins at from $2 to $6 per 100 are used freely. Geo. M. Moss is getting a few nice La France that bring $4 to $6. Beauties are scarce; out-of-town growers are not favoring us and our own growers have not nearly enough to supply the demand yet; $1 to $1.50 and $2 a dozen is the price. Asters are between seasons, so to speak, Semple's not being in force yet. Very few fine ones are to be had; $1 per 100 buys the best. Saturday the fakirs had loads of poor stuff at 2 cents a bunch. A few choice carnations bring $1.50 per 100; $1 a 100 is a good price for outdoor flowers. Valley is not in special demand; some very fair flowers can be had. Lee Niessen is receiving some Lilium auratum alba and rubra that are in demand; the shorts bring $4 a 100, the long-stemmed, $6. Asparagus is plentiful. A little more smilax could be used. A good many showy flowers are to be shipped to Atlantic City for the decorated roller chair parade. Japanese hydrangeas are plentiful.

For Asheville.

A fine delegation of our leading men in all branches of this great and growing business will leave Broad street station at 12:29 midday on Monday, Aug. 18. Better join them. Get a ten-day excursion ticket to Washington, price $6. John Westcott will tell you on the train how to spend the rest of your $50 to the best possible advantage. You will have a glorious time and meet some real good fellows, to say nothing of what you will learn.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

The second meeting to prepare plans for a cut flower market was held on Thursday evening of last week, Joseph Heacock in the chair. The committee appointed for the purpose outlined a plan, which, after some changes, was adopted, and a prospectus has been issued this week to the growers outlining the plan and asking them to come to a meeting on August 14 and state whether they will support the plan. Briefly stated, it is proposed to form a stock company, chartered under the laws of this state, with officers, a board of directors and a capital of $10,000, the company to issue 500 shares of stock at a par value of $20 a share, $5 a share to be paid October 1st and the balance when the board of directors should require, probably not until a year's success justified permanent improvements. Four hundred of these shares are to be offered for subscription now, and the remaining 100 shares will be reserved for growers who join later, each grower wishing to sell his flowers in the market to hold at least one share of stock.

It is proposed to secure a suitable place north of Market street, near the two terminals, and provide stalls to be rented to the members at $50 a year, payable quarterly in advance. It was thought best to have a manager to take charge of the company's business and to sell any surplus flowers that might be left in his care by the growers. The plan received the support of most of those present, in fact, the growers were a little startled by the warmth of a small but enthusiastic body of commission men. This was explained, however, by the street rumor that the two leading spirits among the wholesalers had agreed to try the experiment of taking their wagons out of service if the market succeeded. A message was received from John Burton to the effect that he would support the market with his flowers and financially. It is believed that half the stock is already taken.

A Dream.

(Dedicated to Leo Niessen.)

I see a stately pile
On quiet Filbert street,
Of medieval style,
In each detail complete.

Great doors stand open wide,
Crowds are hurrying in,
The flower mart inside
Just ready to begin.

The hall is very full
('Tis seven by the clock)
Of those who Bear and Bull,
And every kind of stock.

There is Crawford, Wolf, Stahl,
Liddon, Pennock, Charles Fox,
Habermehl, young Frank Gaul,
Craig, Heacock, Burton, Cox.

Look, who is this we see,
Coming down 'twixt the stalls?
The brilliant H. H. B.!
Listen to what he calls.

"One thousand Maids at four"
See how the growers stare!
"Taken for half" shouts Knorr.
Agreed to then and there.

"At five, here are the rest,"
Palmer's deep voice rings clear.
From Sammy Weiss, "The best
At six are none to dear."

Nine huge rooms round the hall
In semi-circle run,
Commission men have all
Their daily work begun.

Bernheimer, Baker, Moore,
Moss, Ehret, Dumont, Reid,
The "great" Sam, just next door
To Niessen, strange indeed!

Come, now, up stairs we go;
There's something very nice,
Bayersdorfer & Co.
Alongside Moses Rice.

Each has a vast area
Of space piled ceiling high,
Of everything so dear
To dealers in supply.

If you would like to make
These airy fancies true,
A market stall you'll take,
And stock, a share or two.

Notes.

Of course you are going to Asheville.

Wm. C. Smith has returned to the florist business, having resumed his former greenhouses at 60th and Market streets. He is said to have a nice lot of Beauties and other young stock, and is very busy getting his houses in shape.

Henry Michell enjoyed his trip greatly. He says Dutch bulbs, especially hyacinths, will be unusually fine; French bulbs rather scarce; seed crops good, but late owing to the wet season.

S. S. Pennock spent part of this week at Mt. Pocono, Pa.

The Thackena Refrigerator Co. has just completed an ice box 17x17 feet for Eugene Bernheimer.

Joseph Heacock has put Beauties in two of his tea rose houses and palms in the other four.

Base Ball.

The second game of base ball between the employes of R. Craig & Sons and the "Hustlers" (a nine picked from employes of retail and wholesale florists about town) took place on Saturday, August 9, at 49th and Chestnut streets. The game was attended by a number of retail and wholesale florists and growers, who did their share of shouting for one side or the other. There was lots of excitement from start to finish, the score being 16 to 16 at the end of the seventh inning, and ended before the next inning was completed owing to some of Craig's players refusing to abide by a decision of the umpire. Some of them were thirsty and others hungry. There was an abundance of sandwiches and other things after the game and everybody seemed to be having a good time. In the game which took place a few weeks ago, the "Hustlers" won out, and another game is looked for in the future to decide the championship. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The past two weeks have seemed to me to be as quiet as anything in the past seven years' history of the business. There really has not been a very large amount of first class material coming in, although it has looked as if there were enough to fill all first class orders in spite of unfavorable weather conditions.

The sweet pea and aster men probably get more than their share of what little movement there is, but I do not think they are to be envied for the wealth thus obtained. The old saying of "Too much pork for a shilling," revised by Uncle Solon Chase in old "greenback" times, into "Too much steer to a dollar," would now fit this business as "Too many blossoms for a cent!" The good ones bring a little something, while many of the poor ones bring nothing. This holds true concerning roses and carnations. In regard to the former, the few growers who have Kaiserins and Carnots cover about all the ground, and it is now "nip and tuck" between growers of outdoor and indoor carnations, with odds getting in favor of the outdoor man.

Lilies are getting quite scarce, and so are calls for them. Outdoor gladioli have arrived to take their place, and sunflowers and rudbeckia make up the yellow, missing among the asters. The fact is, all we need is good cash customers. J. S. Manter.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

A very interesting meeting of the Florists' Club was held in Civic Hall on Monday night. The attendance was not large, but was thoroughly representative. Walter Sheridan presided, and the house committee, particularly Messrs. Bunyard and Langjahr, as usual, proved their efficiency.

Convention matters were, of course, the principal business for consideration, and Mr. Wallace, reporting for the transportation committee, stated that so far about fifty would go from New York, and that even more than that may make up their minds at the last moment. Special car accommodations would be provided for the New York party and everything be done to insure a pleasant trip. The train will leave the Pennsylvania R. R. depot, Jersey City, at 10:10 a. m., Monday, Aug. 18; be joined at Philadelphia by the Pennsylvania delegation; arrive at Washington, 3:40 p. m.; leave there at 5:30 p. m., and arrive at Asheville 7:30 a. m. Tuesday. The round trip from New York will cost $23.60, exclusive of a sleeping berth ($3.00) from Washington. Stopover privileges at Washington will be accorded on the return trip. The committee were empowered to, as Mr. O'Mara suggested, take something along for the governors of North and South Carolina. From present indications there will be a most creditable convention at Asheville. Every assurance is given for a very delightful time, which all are in need of and should enjoy. New Yorkers look forward with keen anticipation to the pleasure of meeting the hospitable Southerners.

Mr. Bunyard, of the outing committee, reported progress, and both he and Mr. O'Mara, reporting for the Fall Exhibition committee, stated that the Newport, R. I., the Milbrook, N. Y., and the Lenox, Mass., Horticultural Societies intended to take an active part in making the Madison Square Garden show a great success. The National Sculpture Society will also hold their annual exhibition in conjunction with the flower show. This, comprising, as it does, the best sculptural ability in the United States, will ensure the best show seen in this country. Messrs. W. Falconer, I. L. Powell, Wm. Scott, E. Lonsdale and W. Nicholson have signified their willingness to act as judges.

The secretary was instructed to write Mr. John Burton of Philadelphia, expressing the sympathy of the club in the loss of his son. All New York is deeply grieved over Mr. Burton's loss.

Several very important amendments were made to the by-laws. It was decided to have membership consist of active, associate and honorary, initiation fee to be $3.00; active members to pay $6.00, associate members, $2.00 annual dues. Ladies are eligible to honorary membership.

It was gladiolus night at the club. Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., sent a very handsome lot of blooms of his remarkably beautiful strain, but they were unfortunately cut too tight. The committee of awards expressed a wish to see them more fully developed before passing upon them. A certificate of merit was awarded George Burchett, Montclair, N. J., for display of splendid gladiolus, some being of enormous size, and Bellows received honorary mention for a display. An exhibition of cannas will be held at the September meeting and all who grow them are requested to exhibit.

Notes.

New York will be represented by a good bowling team. They have not been doing any shouting lately, but expect to make things interesting on the Asheville alleys. From past experiences it might be well if the extra exuberance and loud coaching were somewhat curtailed, at least until the games were rolled. Many good bowlers have delicate nerves.

We very much regret to write that S. S. Butterfield, of the Florists' Exchange, is very ill, and know all will join in wishing his speedy recovery.

Dan MacRorie has been laid up in the South Orange, N. J., hospital for some time with muscular rheumatism.

The fourteenth annual horticultural exhibition of the Schwabitcher Sangerbund, which is largely composed of German horticulturists of Long Island, will be held at Ridgewood Park, L. I., from Aug. 31st to Sept. 7th. Fred Marquardt, of Middle Village, L. I., is manager, and Messrs. A. F. Schrader and John Meissner, of Elmhurst; Carl Koch, Flatbush, and Herman Maenner, of Maspeth, are the committee. Some very good prizes are offered and some very fine exhibits are sure to be there. Carpet bedding is one of the features, and it might be well to introduce this into fall shows.

Thomas Young, Jr., will in the early fall open one of the best equipped retail stores in New York. It is at the corner of 58th street and Sixth avenue, and is being fitted up in the most approved style.

Dards is also making his new store more elaborate, and there is talk, which cannot yet be verified, that a new wholesaler will shortly appear in 28th street.

Mr. Henry Small is enjoying the sights of this city. Mr. A. H. Small is expected back from his European trip next week.

Mr. George Nicholson, of Dictionary and Kew fame, is coming over to participate in the plant breeding conference to be held here in September.

Chas. Schnell, for many years with Thorley, has gone to take charge of W. J. Palmer's new store on Main street, Buffalo. We commend Charlie to the Bison City florists.

Archibald Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co., has returned from his trip abroad and looks and feels extremely well.

Louis Schmutz is once more able to compete with John I. Raynor in the matter of velocity of alley balls.

Business is at low water mark. Plenty of outdoor flowers at anything offered.

J. I. D.

Sigmund Geller's importation, just received, is a very extensive one, and contains everything novel in florists' supplies, baskets and ribbons, a very large stock of the latter having just been placed on exhibition.

J. K. Allen has just returned from his summer outing at Greenwood Lake, looking robust and happy, and ready for the coming revival in business.

Miss Reilly's vacation begins next week in Maine, and has been well earned.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Kreshover leave next week for their annual recuperation in the midst of the health inspiring mountains of Sullivan county, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Nash depart Monday for a three weeks' exploration of the Catskills, and Mr. S. Nash returns from his holiday at Bensonhurst by the Sea.

Fremont and Dutzenberg of Ghormley's are away "resting up," while Mr. Wiese has returned from Ogontz, Pa.

Mr. John Young is in Saratoga, where the health giving waters and the races furnish enough of interest to make one for a while forget gay New York.

Alex. Guttman's store has been enlarged and repainted and looks spick and span and ready for the increased business expected there this fall.

Charles Millang, the "Lily King," is arranging to make violets a specialty this winter, and will have an unlimited supply.

Reed & Keller's big store with six floors filled with everything in the supply line that a florist can mention, make this establishment one of the largest of its kind in the world. All the latest novelties are here and open for inspection.

Mr. Eggeling of St. Louis and C. B. Flick of Fort Wayne, were recent visitors.

R. Hauft, it is rumored, will form a co-partnership with W. Samson, the wholesale florist, this fall.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., is expected home from Europe early in September. The firm of Siebrecht & Son reports a great season at Newport this summer. They have some big weddings already and are doing a large shipping business in the wholesale lines. They will have a large exhibit at the convention and Mr. Henry Siebrecht, Sr., will be there.

Mr. C. Cropp of Chicago, has been in the city for several days.

Emil Steffins, the champion wing shot, will be at Asheville and may have an exhibit of his wire designs there. This firm was the first maker of wire designs in this country and has been in business over forty years in New York.

Messrs. Clucas & Boddington will both be at the convention and will have a good exhibit there as usual.

Mrs. Alex. Burns of Woodside, wife of the popular club bowler, was severely injured in a trolley accident Monday evening.

Traendly is gathering strength in his bowling arm amongst the Thousand Islands.

Looks as though the fight would be between New York and Philadelphia for the prizes this season at the Asheville tournament.

The flower show combined with the art exhibition by the Sculpture Society, promises to exceed any similar affair of recent years.

Charles Millang showed me some grand longiflorum lilies from cold storage bulbs which readily bring from 8 to 10 cents even in the dull hot season. His number of consignors is increasing and he is rebuilding and increasing his room in anticipation of a very busy season.

Dunne & Co. have had a fine season. Landscaping and "rustic" work are but a part of their lines. If you want anything horticultural ask them for it. They have it! When I called Mr. Dunne and his assistants were manufacturing "Dunnite" to beat the band.

Jas. McManns, next door, shows some fine Dendrobium formosum, and a strain of sweet peas that is as good as any in the street. Mr. McManus handles the finest grade of Beauties always and his specialty is orchids, of which he disposes of an immense quantity in the season. The coming fall and winter will see sample palms and plants of all kinds in his windows from the establishment of A. N. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

With the thermometer down to 60 a few days last week we were in the coolest spot on the map. Business is very slow in the cut-flower line; in fact, almost at a standstill. There seems to be plenty of stuff of all kinds except first quality roses and carnations. Among the roses Kaiserins are about the best that come in, and sell at $4, but $3 is about the average price for roses in this market, and with so little doing are hard to sell at that price.

In carnations some nice field-grown whites bring 75 cents and a few extra blooms bring $1. The good stock is not overplentiful, while quite enough seconds come in to supply the demand.

Sweet peas are all over. This was a good year for them, as the supply was large, quality good and a fairly good price was obtained for them.

Asters are very plentiful at 75 cents to $1 per 100. Lots of them had to be dumped the past week for want of demand.

Gladioli are a drug, as nobody seems to want them. Single and double tuberose stalks bring $4 per 100 stalks. These find ready sale, although plenty of them are in the market just now.

Notes.

The talk of the week among the craft has been about the Edwardsville meeting and the convention at Asheville. Judging from their talk, quite a large delegation will go to Edwardsville Thursday to enjoy the hospitality of our friend, J. F. Ammann. At this meeting we will know definitely how many will make the trip to Asheville and what road the delegation will take from here.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., accompanied by his aunt, who is here on a visit from England, spent Saturday and Sunday in St. Louis; and Jimmie, as he is familiarly known in the trade, visited all points of interest while here.

Mr. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was a visitor last week with a line of sample plants. Mr. Peterson had the trade call on him at the Hotel Rozier, where the plants were on exhibition. Mr. Peterson was very enthusiastic over the florists' special, which will leave Cincinnati next Monday for Asheville, and invited the St. Louis boys to go with him.

Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, got in Sunday morning to spend a few days with the trade. Arnold looks the picture of health.

Carl Beyer and wife have returned from their visit to St. Paul, where they made a two weeks' stop. They are very busy just now making preparations for the annual Schwenfest at Lemp's park, which takes place on the 24th of this month. This will keep the boys away from the convention this year.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, accompanied by friends, left last week for New York City to spend three weeks. Mrs. Ayers will buy her fall stock while away.

Will Adeles, who is with Mrs. M. M. Ayers, left Sunday night to spend a few days in Chicago. Will will, no doubt, attend the florists' picnic and compare notes. He will come back in time to attend the Edwardsville meeting.

Mrs Windt, wife of J. F. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, who is visiting at Madison, Wis., will return home September 1. Mr. Windt, Jr., who has been sick, has recovered and is around attending to business as usual.

Theo. Miller is making extensive improvements at his place for the fall trade. The new addition will give him the room of which he has been in need. The Garland iron gutter will be used on the new house.

Bowling.

The bowlers wound up their summer practice and will not bowl again until fall. By next Monday most of the members will be on their way to Asheville, but not as a team; most of them will enter the individual class. The six who came down Monday night rolled three games, with the following scores:

Kuehn's Team.	1	2	3	Total.	Aver.
Meyer	145	179	170	494	164 2-3
Miller	166	150	157	473	157 2-3
Kuehn	144	155	168	467	155 2-3
	455	484	495	1434	159 1-3
Sturtz's Team	1	2	3	Total.	Aver.
Beneke	172	165	152	489	163
Sanders	179	142	140	461	153 2-3
Sturtz	184	211	137	532	177 1-3
	537	518	429	1482	164 2-3

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Trade still holds up remarkably well. There is quite an active demand and there is plenty of stock to go around. Especially is this true of asters, which are very plentiful. At the present time George Murphy is bringing in the best, and they bring $2 per 100 readily.

Roses are fair. Brides are a trifle short, but Golden Gates cut from new stock, sell readily in their stead. There are plenty of Maids, such as they are. Meteors are right fair, but there are many bullheads. Some outdoor-grown roses of good quality are to be had.

Carnations, as usual, are scarce. Some field-grown stock is coming in, but that's about all. Dorothy is the only carnation that is really good at present. Carnation plants, though, are doing fine everywhere, and prospects for a large early fall crop of good quality are fine.

Current prices are as follows: Roses—Beauty, short stem, 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen; Brides, Bridesmaids, Meteors, Golden Gates, etc., 2 cents to 4 cents. Carnations, 50 cents to 75 cents for field-grown stock; $1 to $2 for indoor stock. Asters, at all prices from 50 cents to $2 per 100; Asparagus plumosus, 50 cents per string; Sprengeri, $2 to $3 per spray; smilax, 10 cents to 12½ cents.

Various Items.

Mr. E. G. Gillett is now receiving many inquiries for berths, etc., for the Asheville trip, and he is doing his best to satisfy everyone. In case you have not done so, send in your application at once.

Erhardt & Wetzel is the name of a new firm on Fourth street.

J. A. Peterson is out of the city taking in several of the large cities. It is a business trip.

The regular meeting of the florists' society took place on Saturday evening last at the club rooms. The principal business related to the Asheville convention. It was decided to appoint information committees that would meet all incoming trains likely to have convention delegates on board. The committeemen will wear badges and are there for the purpose of directing all strangers, wherever they may care to go, etc. They will also pilot parties wishing to see some of the points of interest about the city and suburbs. In case you are not acquainted with our city be sure to look out for these men as soon as you leave your train, as they are there for the purpose of meeting you and to give you any information they can.

Circulars are out booming Mr. Edwin A. Seidewitz for secretary of the S. A. F. O. H. Mr. Seidewitz's record as a florist is one to be envied by any one, and I do not doubt that he will make a good bid for the office.

A recent visit to the greenhouses back on Price Hill shows many changes and improvements under way. Mr. C. C. Murphy has about completed remodeling his plant and is busy getting ready to plant in his carnations. Geo. Murphy is placing a large boiler and also remodeling somewhat. George suffered considerable loss during the past winter, owing to defective heating apparatus, so he is fixing things that it will not occur again.

Sidney Murphy is building an entire new range of glass for his own use. The foundations are now up, and also part of the frame work. He is very busy and things are moving rapidly.

Wm. Murphy has five new houses completed, and they are large and of modern construction. He will soon be ready to house stock. His new white carnation, which he will place on the market this fall, is in A1 shape, having made a wonderful growth in the field. Some already housed are doing finely, the first crop being about ready to cut. The stems run from fifteen to eighteen inches and show no signs of weakness.

Visitors were: H. H. Ritter, Dayton, O.; W. B. Paterson, Montgomery, Ala.; Mr. B. Eschner, Philadelphia, Pa.

CINCINNATI MAKES A BID FOR THE CONVENTION.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society has decided to make a bid for the next meeting of the S. A. F. O. H. The Cincinnati delegation, headed by Mr. E. G. Gillett and B. P. Critchell, will be prepared to make a strong fight for this honor. Cincinnati was the birthplace of the S. A. F. and is the most convenient point in the United States for a meeting of the society. Think well and long and cast your vote with the Cincinnati boys.

Final arrangements for the entertainment of all florists passing through this city on their way to Asneville were also made. All visitors will be escorted from the various depots to Fountain Square, where special cars will be waiting to carry the visitors to Eden Park, then on to the Zoological Garden, where lunch will be served. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Society of Indiana Florists.

The monthly meeting of the State Society of Indiana Florists was held on the 5th, and, as previously announced, was a memorial meeting in honor of our late brother florist, William G. Bertermann, who passed away on June 29.

There was a good attendance, and everyone present was full of praise for the good work done by Mr. Bertermann in uplifting our profession in this state, especially while serving as secretary of our society. He was well known to all of us, and no more popular member did we ever have in our society.

E. G. Hill was to be the principal speaker of the evening, but on account of being unable to be present he sent his speech to bo read by the president, and in it expressed the sentiments of everyone present. Suitable resolutions were adopted by the society at this meeting and a copy ordered sent to his family.

Various Items.

This city is likely to be poorly represented at Asheville, as everybody is heels over head in work building or rebuilding. Bertermann Bros. are building a new house for storing azaleas, etc. H. W. Rieman is pushing his new addition as rapidly as possible. His two new boilers are beauties. The Young & Smith Co. has its new house planted. J. Hartje has his house ready for the glass, but he is in no hurry, as the house is planted with carnations, which are looking nice. The Indianapolis Plant and Flower Company is finishing a carnation house. Baur & Smith have their large new house ready for the glass, and it is attracting a great deal of attention by its sign. The carnations were planted in beds last spring and the house built over them, and they are looking fine, promising a large and early crop of blooms. They are installing the single pipe system of heating.

On the 14th of this month A. Wiegand and wife start on a tour of the West, including a week in Yellowstone Park. They expect to be gone several weeks.

E. A. Nelson has planted a house in Beauties, and they are looking nice.

Carnation planting is going on in full swing, and in a few weeks all will be housed. Asters have been in oversupply, but recent rains have spoiled many outside and good ones are not overplentiful just now. A. B.

LONDON, ONT.

The London Horticultural Society held its mid-summer show on Wednesday and Thursday, August 6th and 7th. The exhibit was the largest yet had by the society, Mr. H. H. Groff, of Simcoe, sending over a thousand spikes of gladioli. These exhibits are becoming very popular and with each show there is a decided improvement from its predecessor.

The Horticultural Department of the Western Fair, which takes place from the 11th to the 20th of September, is being well looked after, and there are already a number of entries. Mr. Callender, of Woodstock, will make an exhibit of a carload of cacti.

Messrs. Gammage & Sons have about completed their new range of houses, and are making preparations for the erection of a large carnation and propagating house.

The program for the Canadian Horticultural Association is ready, and can be had on application from William Gammage, secretary pro tem. LOND.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The bankruptcy petition of Alexander Parks, florist, of Northampton, was filed in the U. S. Bankruptcy Court, of Boston, last week. His liabilities are $9,522.38, and assets, $9,100.00, secured debts, $6,050.00, and unsecured, $3,182.38. The largest secured creditor is the trustees of the Smith Charities of Northampton, being secured by mortgage on lot on Union street. The three largest unsecured creditors are as follows: A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., three notes aggregating $479.00; First National Bank, Northampton, three notes aggregating $440.00; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., three notes aggregating $322.00.

In Springfield, Holyoke and vicinity trade in general is very quiet. Although the weather for the past couple of weeks has been very favorable, flowers of every description have been very scarce, with the exception of asters and sweet peas, which are coming in bunches. INO.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Various Items.

Trade continues to maintain a moderate volume, season being considered, and on Friday and Saturday of last week the demand for roses exceeded the supply, and other flowers were pretty well cleaned up. Beauties are asked for to-day (Aug. 11), but are not in evidence; asters are abundant; gladioli, a drug on the market, and outdoor carnations and roses ample for all calls.

The Gardeners' Club has decided with enthusiasm to invite the Society of American Florists to hold its next meeting in Baltimore, and a provisional subscription has been pledged, as is understood, ample for all requirements. This implies, it is said, the election of a young and popular member of the trade of this city to its next presidency.

The sad bereavement which befell Mr. John Burton created universal sorrow and profound sympathy here among all the friends of that estimable gentleman.

J. E. Bartell, of the York road, near Govanstown, is building a number of new greenhouses.

Robert L. Graham and family have escaped all the dangers and pitfalls which a month's sojourn in the suburbs of Chicago involves, and have returned with gladness and singleness of heart and rejoicing of spirit to the delights which this summer-resort-like City of Monuments affords.

The number of attendants at the Asheville convention from this bailiwick will probably be quite up to the earlier estimates, and will include much dignity, worth and eloquence in the delegation.

R.

Malden, Mass.—John Walsh & Son have added a new house 20x120, making ten in all, at their place in Melrose Highlands. They have also built a new office and boiler house. A show house will be built in the rear of the new store they will occupy this fall in the new Goodwin block in Summer street.

Mitchell, S. D.—E. C. Newbury has begun the erection of a new house 26x115. This will give him a total of 13,500 feet of glass.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Flower Show.

"All encouragement so far has come from the management who will spare neither time nor any expense to make this the greatest flower show ever given."—Uncle John Thorpe.

Uncle John has spent nearly two weeks here in conference with Mr. Taggart and in closing the final details of what is to be the greatest flower show the world has ever seen. This is not idle talk. Kansas City has the greatest place on earth to hold such an exhibition, the management composed of men who do things, and a $7,000.00 premium list to attract the growers. The premium lists will be out and distributed this week. What do you think of that $7,000 proposition, Mr. Grower? Don't you think it would be a pretty good thing to be in on?

The general plan of the show will be changed considerably from last year. An attendance of 100,000 people is expected this year and last year the room was crowded with 50,000, so to avoid crowding the roof gardens will be utilized for the cut flowers. A board walk will cover the boxes entirely around the arena floor, which will give the promenaders a beautiful view of the entire floor.

On the arena floor will be reproduced the home of Washington at Mount Vernon with its garden of old fashioned flowers, a facsimile of the place as it stands today. These old-fashioned flowers are now being grown especially for this show. A facsimile of the white house will be arranged as a back ground and marble steps will join it to the Washington garden. All will be brilliantly illuminated with colored electric lights.

The cut-flower attraction in the roof garden will consist of a mile of chrysanthemums, a mile of roses and a mile of carnations. Mr. Taggart says if a "Miss" is as good as a mile there will be at least two hundred miles of pretty flower girls in the booths. To further carry out the idea all society ladies who assist will dress in Colonial style. Prizes are to be again offered for a new musical composition to be dedicated to the flower show.

Notes.

Director General Taggart was called to Hillsdale, Mich., early last week, by the sickness of his mother.

H. J. Barnes has been entirely remodeling his place this summer. Those of his houses that have heretofore run north and south will be changed and run east and west to correspond to the rest of the plant. His other houses have all been raised to have the gutters six feet from the ground. Mr. Barnes will have a nice place when completed.

In connection with rooting carnation cuttings I know one big place where the cutting bed was made of one by six-inch pine with a quarter-inch crack. This crack was stuffed with sphagnum to keep the sand from falling through. As soon as the boards got soaked there was of course no drainage and yet the "old man" hollered pretty hard when the second batch went by fungus. My own cuttings were rooted on a slate-bottomed bench. John H. Vesey.

Don't fail to have a strong special adv. in our Convention Number, to be issued next week, and send copy at once or you will be too late.

BOILER CAPACITY.

What H. P. steam boiler will be required to heat two houses, one 18x85 and the other 20x104, running east and west? There is a 30 ft. passage connecting the two. Sides are wood and would average 5 ft. high. Mercury sometimes drops to 18 or 20 degrees below zero. At such times I would want to maintain 55 degrees inside. C. F.

Replying to C. F., for the heating of the one house 18x85 and one 20x104 with 30-ft. connecting passage, he will require not less than a 12 H. P. boiler. For such a small range of work, I should be inclined to use a cast-iron sectional boiler in preference to the brick set tubular boiler.
New York. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

WASHINGTON TO ASHEVILLE.

The special train from Washington for Asheville will leave Washington, D. C., per Southern Railway, on Aug. 18th, at 5 p. m., arriving at Asheville at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 19th. All florists from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and way stations will time their departure so as to arrive here in good time for the special, as the next regular train leaving here will not reach Asheville until 1 p. m. of the 19th; too late for the opening of the convention.

CARNATIONS.

Registered by S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R.I.

Lillian Pond—Large white, of good form and strong fragrance. Good keeping qualities. Strong stem and an early and continuous bloomer.

For the American Carnation Society.
ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Notice—There are a number of new carnations about to be introduced and others that have been introduced that have not been registered. This is a serious neglect on the part of the originators, as they should be registered, either with the American Carnation Society or the S. A. F. & O. H., so that the names and description get on record.

The fee with the Carnation Society is one dollar for each name and registration, and is open to anyone having a new carnation, whether a member of the society or not. All names registered with the Carnation Society must be sent to Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. Those that are registered with the S. A. F. & O. H. must be sent to Wm. J. Stewart, 79 Milk street, Boston, Mass. In this society registration is free to members, and to outsiders is $5.00 for each name.

BEAVER VALLEY, PA.

J. J. Bolton is putting up a range of houses on his farm back of Beaver Falls.

The many friends of John H. Meyer will be pained to learn that on account of ill health he has resigned his position as head florist of the Meyer greenhouses and will go West for a year or two.

Mr. Fitzgerald is cutting some fine asters.

Mr. Aug. Meyer will open up his store again on Sept. 1 with a full line of seeds, bulbs and cut flowers. At the greenhouses they are busy rebuilding some of the houses and benching carnations.

Business is dull except for funeral work. J. M.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—Anders Rasmussen, the florist, has purchased a large tract of land at Vincennes and Chartres streets. He will remove his greenhouses to this location and will also build a handsome residence.

WILLIAMSBURG, IA.—Mr. H. Harrington, the nurseryman, was married recently. The wedding took place in Davenport and the bride was Miss Sheetz.

NEXT WEEK we shall tell how the tickling of the angels' feet progressed at Asheville. Send advs. at once for this issue.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather has been most favorable the past three weeks for carnation growing. In consequence the plants look fine, and the work of benching them is being pushed with all the zeal possible, for the weather is so cool and cloudy that it is hardly necessary to shade the glass. We expect, when this spell of cold weather ends, it will be followed by a long hot spell, to even things up, as it were.

Business is quiet; you might almost hear a pin drop. There is a little funeral work and outside shipping, besides the collection of bills from customers who have flown to the resorts. Roses and carnations are scarce. Roses have not come into bloom yet and carnations are thrown out and neglected.

There will be no one from here who will attend the convention; too busy this time. One of the boys, when asked if he were going, remarked: "Not even if it were Milwaukee. I haven't the time."

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. is building one rose house and remodeling several others. It is using the Garland gutter and solid cement benches for planting. The benches, or beds, are two feet high, being filled to within six inches of the top with sand or any good drainage material, then soil; benches, five feet wide. The experiment is being watched with considerable interest, for if it succeeds it will be adopted by all the florists. The carnation houses are being equipped the same way.

Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. is building two carnation houses; the Hill Co. one propagating house. Chas. Chadwick will build two large carnation houses after the peaen crop is over. Crabb & Hunter will build one large violet house, 150x30. Henry Smith, while he has glass and other material on hand, has experienced some difficulty in getting the necessary help and is uncertain whether he will build. Charley Morton is building three carnation houses.

Visitors: S. S. Skidelskey, of Philadelphia; J. N. Burroughs, of Hastings; J. P. Herzog, of Saginaw; Mrs. Cohn, of Manistee, and Wm. Wasserman, of Muskegon. G. F. C.

The Pierson Fern

Nephrolepis Piersoni

THE MOST VALUABLE NOVELTY INTRODUCED IN MANY YEARS.

Awarded GOLD MEDAL, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, March, 1902. A rare distinction, having been awarded only a few times in the history of the Society.

Also GOLD MEDAL, New York Horticultural Society, May, 1902, for the best horticultural novelty. THE HIGHEST HONORS that can be bestowed on any horticultural novelty in America. These very high awards testify to the sterling merit of Nephrolepis Piersoni.

NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI is as easy to grow and propagate as the well-known Boston Fern, of which it is a sport and which it will assuredly supplant in popular favor.

THIS WILL BE A MONEY-MAKER FOR YOU.

SEE OUR EXHIBIT OF THIS AT THE S. A. F. CONVENTION, ASHEVILLE.

Will be introduced to the trade in Spring, 1903. Demand is sure to be enormous. Place order at once in order to secure early delivery, as orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

AUSTIN, MINN.

The Perry Florists' Convention.

The Perry Florists' convention (named after the originator) was held at Austin, Minn., August 6th and 7th. All the visitors were the guests of A. N. Kinsman, of Austin, and a most successful convention was held. The first day was devoted to discussions on various trade matters, and the second to a bowling contest, driving around the city and a boat ride up the river. Considerable benefit is derived from these meetings by the members, who are kept posted as to lines of stock on hand, and many exchanges and sales are made to their mutual advantage.

W. B. Perry, of Cresco, Iowa, was elected president, and Walter S. Hall, of Osage, Iowa, secretary and treasurer. It was voted upon to hold two meetings annually, one in January and one in July or August. The next meeting will be held at Cresco, Iowa.

Those present were: A. N. Kinsman, Austin, Minn.; W. B. Perry, Cresco, Iowa; Walter S. Hall, Osage, Iowa; P. Clausen, Albert Lea, Minn.; W. T. Symonds, Decorah, Iowa; Mr. Krieger, Mason City, Iowa; Mark H. Wetherbee, Charles City, Iowa, and C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.

MILWAUKEE.

Trade remains in about the same condition as last week. Asters are coming in extremely plentiful, mostly white, and but few of fancy colored stock. Carnations are becoming quite scarce and most of them are of poor quality. Sweet peas are shortening up in supply. In roses, good Kaiserins, Perles and Meteors are about equal to demand, but good Maids, Brides and Beauties are scarce.

The florists are again considering the question of going after the next S. A. F. convention. They will not do much shouting in advance, but will wait until the eleventh hour, a la Asheville. Quite a few of the trade from here will attend the Chicago Florists' Club picnic.

INCOG.

WHITEHALL, MICH.—The 11-year-old son of Thomas Rogers, the florist, was drowned while fishing July 28. His body was not recovered until the following day. His parents have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

DENVER, COLO.—Thomas Chapman is fishing and rusticating in Northern Wisconsin, and reports a good time.

This week I think it well this fact to mention
To all who go down South to the Convention;
And to our BUYERS here, in gay Manhattan,
And to our shippers true whose purse we fatten;
That LILIES, South or North or East or West,
Seem all to KNOW the man who SELLS them best,
And still the same sweet song the Lilies sing:--
"Long live Sir Charles Millang, the Lily King!"

And not only Lilies, but ROSES and CARNATIONS! VIOLETS,

All kinds of CUT FLOWERS in season and plenty of them. Telephone for what you want--from out of town or in town--we have it.

The Asheville Convention

AN INTERESTING MEETING UNDERNEATH THE ANGELS' FEET.

Next Meeting to be Held at Milwaukee, Wis.

OFFICERS FOR 1903:

President, JOHN BURTON, Philadelphia, Pa.
Vice-President, C. C. POLLWORTH, Milwaukee, Wis.
Secretary, WM. J. STEWART, Boston, Mass.
Treasurer, H. B. BEATTY, Oil City, Pa.

When the convention convened for the first session on Tuesday afternoon the large Auditorium was well filled and the number in attendance was certainly very gratifying. The exhibits were arranged at the sides of the large hall and on the back of the stage, while in the center of the floor were seats for four or five hundred people.

Vice President Deake called the convention to order at 3:30 p. m. and expressed regret that the recent bereavement of President Burton, in the loss of his son, would prevent his attendance. He then introduced A. S. Barnard of Asheville, who extended a welcome to the visitors which proved that the society contained other eloquent speakers than the gentleman who adressed the society at Buffalo. He said that the fact that Asheville had been selected as the first Southern city for a convention of the society was an honor much appreciated by its citizens. He eulogized the profession of horticulture and floriculture, and said that its existence was an evidence of an advanced stage of development in our industrial life, as the appreciation of beauty was an evidence of refinement. He held that the elevating and humanizing influences of the profession were evident wherever it was practiced. He said that the crowning triumph of civilization is co-operation and unity of action, and he rejoiced that the florists were enjoying its great advantages. He said that the complete reconciliation of the North and South after the great differences that once, unfortunately, divided them, was due more than anything else to visitation and contact between the people of the two sections, such as the gathering of florists from all over the Union now in this city. He assured his hearers that nothing would be left undone to make the stay of the visitors a pleasant one. His eloquent address was received with long continued applause.

Mr. P. O'Mara responded on behalf of the society in his usual happy way. He said that a look at the faces of those present was sufficient response to the eloquent words of welcome. When Mr. Deake was addressing the convention at Buffalo last year he said that angels hovered over the mountains in the vicinity of Asheville, but did not say whether they were Southern or Northern angels. He did say, though, that they were so accommodating as to let their feet hang down sufficiently so they might be tickled; but, said the speaker, the Northern florists did not come to see angels. They came to visit their Southern brothers and to extend to them the hand of fellowship. He said that the business the members were engaged in was founded upon the esthetic sense, and that only those having this sense were able to make a success of it. He referred to the way in which the word gardener had been misused and applied to men who had no title whatever to it. He hoped steps would be taken to preserve the impressive meaning of the name. The president's message was then read by Mr. O'Mara, as follows:

President's Message.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is customary for the president to address a few words of greeting to the members on the occasion of the opening of the annual convention, and, although I regret being unable to be with you, I take the opportunity to call your attention to some matters pertinent to the welfare of the society.

The year just passed has, I believe, been a very prosperous one for the great majority of those engaged in commercial floriculture. A large amount of new building has been going on, and that notwithstanding the increased cost of glass and other building materials. This I believe shows our business to be in a healthy condition and is a state of affairs on which we have every reason to congratulate ourselves.

The wisdom of the founders of the Society of American Florists, in giving it the widest scope instead of making it a close trade organization, has been often called in question.

To many it has appeared inconsistent and unnatural to try to combine commercial and amateur gardening under one head. An amateur florist or gardener is interested only from an esthetic standpoint and cares little as to whether gardening as a business be profitable or the reverse. The commercial florist, on the other hand, is in it for a living, or to increase his income. How then could any good be accomplished by trying to combine these two contradictory elements, and why not let the commercial men confine themselves strictly to the business end of the problem and by combination safeguard and promote the interests of the trade only?

To many of us the latter seemed the best course, and many think so still; but the die was cast in the beginning for good or ill and what we have to consider now is the practical results. To all appearances no harm has come of the liberal provisions as to membership; on the contrary, the society remains practically a trade organization for the preservation and promotion of commercial floriculture, while welcoming within its ranks the amateur who desires to aid in the promotion of floriculture for its own sake, and the two elements seem to have worked together in entire harmony. A realization of this fact leads to the thought that perhaps we have not given as much consideration as to how we might utilize the patron or connoisseur as we should have done.

The commercial florist and the amateur are both marching towards the same goal, namely, to make every part of North America blossom like the rose. They march towards this goal for radically different reasons, it is true, but so long as they are going the same way they might as well join forces and get the benefit of co-operation. A beginning in this direction has already been made by offering the society's medals for meritorious new plants exhibited under the auspices of amateur organizations, which move is highly commendable and should be so extended as to include cultural skill on any class of plants, taste and skill in the arrangement and care of flower gardens and grounds, and for conspicuous service in relation to improving by selection or otherwise of any class of plants. Recalling the pride with which prominent men in gardening matters exhibited their Victorian medals while visiting our country suggests to us that services of a similar nature here might be suitably rewarded in the same way and serve also to stimulate and encourage the younger element. When we remember the labors of such men as Paul, Barr, Baker, Elwes, Burbidge and Wallace on the Rose family, the Lily family, the Daffodil family, etc., we can readily see a vista opening out before us in this country where the efforts of the amateur as well as the commercial florist might be stimulated and encouraged by such a body as ours.

There are many families of plants, as for instance, the phlox and the peony, that from various causes are not cultivated as much as they deserve, and which, by concentrating on them the efforts of expert committees, might be made extremely popular over a wide section of the country to the great delight of the amateur and the great profit of the commercial florist. In most sections of this country, particularly in the west, the peony thrives greatly and is a far more satisfactory plant than the rose for outdoor planting. A vast number of inferior forms of this family have been disseminated and the nomenclature of same is in a state of great confusion. Our society could do a good work by appointing an expert committee say on the peony as a starter. A collection of all the named sorts now in commerce could be got together at little expense, as most growers would gladly donate for so laudable a purpose, and the synonyms, the good, the indifferent and the bad forms, could be recorded in an authoritative way. Such a record would be of untold value and would prove a great stimulus to the popularity of the plant. An outgrowth of such a collection might be a peony exhibition at some central point during the height of the flowering season. The funds for carrying on the work of such a committee might be secured partly by appropriation and partly by donation or subscription. The committee should have power to add to its number where desirable and to raise funds for the furtherance of the work under the sanction of the executive officers of the society.

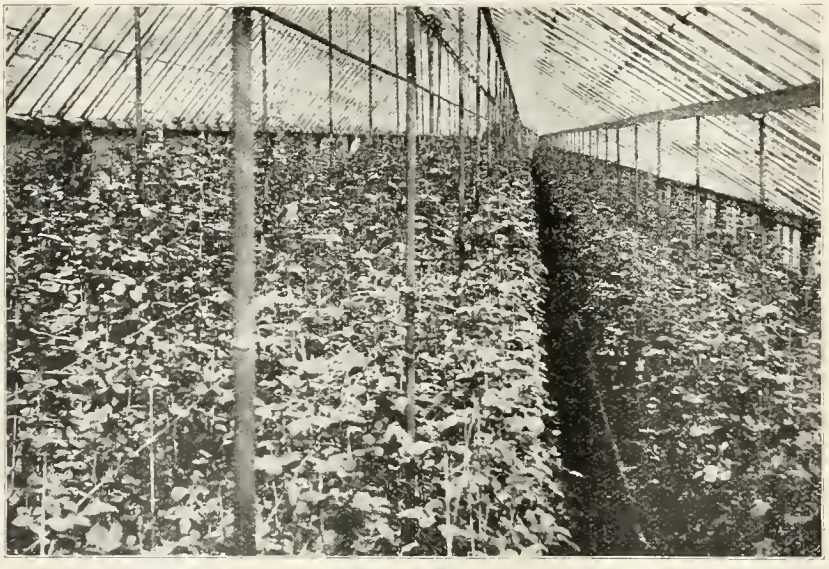
The peony is only one of many hardy plants, but it is a representative one and eminently suitable as a subject to commence with. Too much stress cannot be laid on the point that a commencement should be made, for hardy plants are rapidly coming to the front, and less and less trade is to be expected in soft wooded stock for carpet bedding, which has, for so many years, been the mainstay of a large section of the trade. The question is not whether we approve of the change; we have to make the best of it, for the new order of things is already with us. And in this connection we must observe the vast advance in the laying out and planting of grounds in recent years. The quantities of hardy stock required have been immense and there is every indication that the demand will be on the increase for a long time to come. Every commercial florist who does what is termed "a general trade" and who has as a rule considerable land, or can readily get same, should study this phase of the business and secure his share of the trade in hardy plants. The recent additions to our original title of the words "Ornamental Horticulturists" has published the broadness of our work. The laying out of grounds or landscape gardening is a most important section and we cannot do too much for this branch of gardening. We should deprecate the custom which is common among many of our florists and jobbing gardeners of calling themselves "landscape gardeners." To be able to look after a greenhouse and plant a flower bed may warrant the title of florist, but certainly not that of "landscape gardener." We should also set our faces sternly against the abuse of the word gardener.

A person who milks the cows and mows the lawn is a laborer, or man of all work, and the looseness of expression in common use of calling him a gardener is mainly responsible for bringing an ancient and honorable calling into such disrepute that horticulturists, floriculturists, landscape architects, and a host of other titles have been resorted to which are not nearly as accurate nor appropriate as the old word. Gardening has been in all ages the inclination of kings and the choice of philosophers and, as the Prince de Ligne has it, "is the only passion that augments with age." Our best efforts should be put forth in maintaining the old title in its true significance.

Closer Relations.

Ten years ago President Dean pointed out that the custom of forming out of our own membership so many auxiliary societies was likely to become so pronounced that there would be danger of greatly weakening the parent body. The Chrysanthemum Society, the Carnation Society, the Rose Society, and talk of an Orchid Society, a Dahlia Society, a Fern Society and divers others sufficiently indicated even then the tendency towards disintegration. Ever since that time efforts have been made to stem this tide and to inculcate correct principles of procedure in an opposite direction. Various plans have been put forward, but nothing definite has yet been accomplished excepting the ripening of sentiment in favor of closer relations with these existing independent bodies and of managing such matters in future, either by committees or sections. The committee plan seems to be the most simple, flexible, and natural but an opportunity will be given for a full and free discussion of the merits of various suggestions and no doubt the best will be selected. Several of the brightest minds in the business have been studying the subject for a long time and will put the concrete results before you at this meeting.



House of Beauties at Bassett & Washburn's, Hinsdale, Ill. Planted just after Easter. Photographed Aug. 1st.

Missionary Work.

Missionary work among the children—we should continue to preach the importance of this in season and out of season. We should keep everlastingly at it and endeavor by every means in our power to establish ways and means of interesting the young in gardening. On the continent of Europe they are in advance of us in this direction and it is highly desirable that we should have a full account of the system so that we may be guided by practical experience. This subject was agitated by President Smith at St. Louis in 1893, and at that same meeting Robert Farquhar read an able paper on the subject and it was also advocated then by George C. Watson in his paper "How to Increase a Love of Flowers Among the People." The impressions received in youth are deep and lasting and the training of the young should form a part of every horticultural or floricultural society. Our society ought to have a strong standing committee to attend to this work.

Nomenclature.

Years ago we had an active vigilance committee on nomenclature. They did good work for a while, but of late they seem either to have been asleep or nonexistent. We need these watch-dogs all the time to prevent careless or ignorant dealers from taking advantage of us with old things under new names. A little timely barking from the committee now and again has a powerful deterrent effect and preserves a healthy moral tone in the trade on this subject.

Convention Cities.

We have wandered all over a great part of North America in our annual gatherings of the past, mostly in the east and north as is natural from the density of our trade in these localities, and sometimes have gone west and this year we have come south. This last may not be the largest in point of attendance, but it has several compensating features and its influence both on ourselves and on the south cannot fail but be beneficial. Whenever we go from home we learn something. Whenever we receive a visitor we learn something; not so much in the routine business of the society perhaps, as in keeping our eyes and ears open. When a boy goes to a shop, a factory, or a farm, it is not so much by being told about every little thing that he gets a grip of the business, but by keeping a bright lookout and absorbing as he goes along. If he cannot "catch on" in this way no amount of telling will ever do him any good. To many of us the annual convention is our only chance of seeing distant places and for that reason it seems a wise thing to select a new locality each year. But we ought to make some provision in the near future for the time when no invitation shall come to us from a desirable locality. In other organizations similar to ours the matter is left in the hands of the executive committee and perhaps that would be the best plan to adopt. That method would certainly give ample opportunity for mature consideration. Of course under this method all obligations, implied or suggested, as to local entertainments would be waived and the place selected would be entirely absolved from any burden in that direction.

Executive Committee Work.

A number of matters of importance received the careful consideration of the Executive Committee at its annual meeting in February last, and the action taken then will appear in the reports of the executive officers. One thing that gave the committee cause for much anxious thought and discussion was the lack of a local florists' club to take charge of the exhibition at Asheville. After looking over the ground carefuly from all sides and canvassing the merits of various plans and suggestions it was finally decided to put the exhibition in charge of the secretary, giving him power to get such local assistance as would be necessary. Looking back with the light of experience of the past few months the wisdom of this action has been amply demonstrated. Another thing that gave the committee some trouble was the society's medal for the best plant or flower. The committee has been criticized for the way the medal is offered. The burden of much of this criticism is the assumed impossibility of judging a plant and a flower in the same class. Such an assumption is largely imaginary; and, not only that, if a separate class is made you will at once hear a cry that a chrysanthemum should not be judged in the same class as a carnation and so on without limit. Looked at in the proper light the action of the committee is really the only method possible under the circumstances. The number of societies having the privilege of offering the medal has been increased, and there is every reason to believe that much good will result, as the medal is looked upon as a most unique and valuable distinction from a general floricultural standpoint. The subject of bulb culture in our southern states received the best thought of your executive, and an invitation was extended to all growers of bulbs in the south to submit samples at this convention for testing under the auspices of the society. It is hoped that much good may result from this and an impetus be given to a new industry in our country, it being felt that we have the soil and climate for growing such stock, and, with encouragement from the society, it would soon be unnecessary to send abroad for supplies of that nature.

Life Membership.

It is noted with satisfaction that there has been a considerable increase in the list of life members. There is nothing that can add to the stability of the society better than a large life membership, and it is sincerely hoped that many more will avail themselves of the privilege.

Exhibitions.

When we reflect that our society was formed to encourage floriculture and that an exhibition of flowers is one of the most potent methods of spreading a love of flowers among the people, we must admit that it is our duty to encourage exhibition by every means in our power. We who make our living by commercial floriculture should never lose sight of the fact the more people who take an interest in flower plants there are, the better will be the florist's business in general. Too many of us are apt to be indifferent, and even hostile, sometimes, to exhibitions because as we say "they don't pay." That is, we are short-sighted enough to consider the box office to be the only criterion. That attitude is a very great mistake. We ought to take a broader view and consider the general effect on the public and its reaction from them to our business in course of time if we keep persistently at it. We should be emphatic in our approval of the flower show at all times.

It now becomes my duty to perform the saddest part, namely, the recording of the deaths of seven of our members during the year just passed. Most of them you were familiar with, they having been active in the society almost since its institution, and one of them, indeed, was elected to the highest honor in your gift. Their wise counsels and genial personalities will be sadly missed, and it will be a long time before we can adequately fill their places in the future.

Naming the Judges.

The names of the judges of the various classes in the trade exhibit were announced and Secretary Stewart read his annual report, as follows:

Report of the Secretary.

One year ago the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists met at Buffalo, N. Y., amid the excitement attending a great exposition; today we hold our 8th annual convention in this peaceful mountain city of the South.

Almost a thousand miles removed from the scenes of our recent activities, our banner floats in unfamiliar territory and we appeal to a new constituency. True, the steadfast friends who have stood in our ranks, unfalteringly loyal, in the days of prosperity and adversity alike, are here in goodly numbers, and we know that many others, unavoidably absent, are thinking of us, reviewing with the mind's eye the events that are here transpiring, and hearts warm with good wishes for the society they love; but many new faces greet us here today as we present our plea and invite our brothers of the South to join with us in a united effort to open up new channels of industry that will bring in the coming years prestige and material advancement to American horticulture.

To meet in a place so remote from the scenes of our earlier labors, and yet retain without serious interruption the adherence of the rank and file of our membership, would not have been believed possible a few years ago, in the days when the location and accessibility of the annual convention was the gauge of our fluctuating membership roll. A steady trend towards a more permanent membership, the desirability of which has been frequently referred to by your secretary, now seems happily inaugurated, and, as indicating a faith in the society's usefulness and approval of its methods by our conservative business and scientific men, is one of the most hopeful signs in our career at the present time.

The whole number of members in good standing as recorded in the annual report was 921, 50 being life members and 881 annual members. We have lost 7 of these by death since the last meeting, and 144 members have either resigned or forfeited their membership by non-payment of dues for the year 1902.

The list of deaths is as follows:

Edmund M. Wood, Dec. 12, 1901.
Charles Connon, Jan. 25, 1902.
Thomas J. Winters, Jan. 31, 1902.
James Comley, Feb. 1, 1902.
Conrad Eichholz, March 23, 1902.
A. Whitcomb, April 24, 1902.
W. G. Bertermann, June 29, 1902.

One hundred ninety-two members were added, of whom 6 are life members, and 12 annual members have changed to life membership by payment of the requisite fee. The new members are severally credited to the various states as follows: Florida, Iowa, Louisiana, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Oregon, Virginia,

Hawaiian Islands and Australia, one each; North Carolina, Rhode Island and Canada, two each; Colorado, Connecticut, Indiana and Kentucky, three each; Wisconsin, four; District of Columbia, five; Missouri, seven; New Jersey, eight; Maryland and Michigan, nine each; Illinois, fourteen; Ohio, seventeen; Massachusetts, twenty-two; Pennsylvania, twenty six; New York, forty-two.

It is unnecessary here to refer at any length to the proceedings of the convention at Buffalo, as this is fully recorded in the annual printed report. It was in every respect a creditable and successful meeting and the sessions were generally well attended, notwithstanding the attractions of the Pan-American Exposition. The principal enactments of the society were the acceptance of the national charter, the transfer of the assets to the new corporation and the adoption of a new constitution practically as reported by the incorporators, with the exception of the clause in reference to cooperative relations with other organizations. This matter is again before us for consideration at this convention. It is to be hoped that every member here will make it his duty to be present and assist in settling wisely this important question so that not alone individual, sectional or corporate benefit may accrue, but that the advancement of American ornamental horticulture in its broadest sense may be hastened.

Besides a full account of the proceedings, the printed report contains valuable contributions on the Red Spider by Prof. F. H. Chittenden, and Thrips in Greenhouses by Prof. W. E. Hinds, reports of local progress from the various state vice-presidents, reports of exhibition committees, list of plants registered, list of plant introductions in America in 1901, state laws, and regulations of foreign governments regarding inspection and transportation of plants, special express rates on plants, bulbs and seeds, report of superintendent of sports, the charter and constitution of the society, list of members and accounts of summer meetings of auxiliary societies. The number of plant introductions for the year included 8 cannas, 25 carnations, 32 chrysanthemums, 11 roses and 40 miscellaneous. The wide-spread demand for copies of the volume is the best indication of its value as a book of reference.

The following named new plants have been registered by members during the year:

Aug. 13, 1902, Rose Climbing Clothilde Soupert by P. J. Berckmans Co.

Aug. 21, 1902, Rose Freedom by Arthur Griffin.

Aug. 22, 1902, Cattleya Harrisoniae superbissima, Cattleya speciosissima lilacina, and Cattleya speciosissima striata marginata by Lager & Hurrell.

Aug. 26, 1901, Cattleya Gaskelliana Mrs. Hugh J. Grant by Lager & Hurrell.

Aug. 30, 1901, Rose Philadelphia and Canna Mont Blanc by Conard & Jones Co.

Aug. 31, 1901, Rose Queen Victoria by Good & Reese Co.

Sept. 27, 1901, Rose Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Rose Mark Twain by Peter Henderson & Co.

Oct. 10, 1901, Carnation Dr. W. Seward Webb by J. B. Trudo.

Oct. 14, 1901, Rose Lady Gay by M. H. Walsh.

Nov. 4, 1901, Canna President Roosevelt by C. W. Ward.

Nov. 15, 1901, Rose Dorothy Perkins by Jackson & Perkins Co.

Nov. 16, 1901, Rose Nestor, Rose Young America and Rose Atlas by Schmidt & Botley.

Dec. 7, 1901, Cannas Duke of York, Duchess of York, Eastern Beauty, Evolution, Brandywine, Striped Beauty, Niagara, Queen of Holland, and Cherokee by Conard & Jones Co.

Dec. 20, 1901, Sweet Pea Christmas Comtes and Sweet Pea Christmas Captain by A. C. Zvolanek.

January 14, 1902, Rose Miss Alice Roosevelt by American Rose Co.

February 25, 1902, Zonal Geraniums J. D. Eisele, Jas. Davidson, Jupiter and Venus by Henry Eichholz.

March 3, 1902, Carnation Seth Low by E. G. Hill Co.

March 8, 1902, Carnation White Layde by A. L. Thorne.

May 10, 1902, Rose The Farquhar by R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

May 14, 1902, Zonal Geranium Harriet Cleary by J. M. Horsburgh.

May 15, 1902, Rose Queen Madge by C. S. FitzSimmons.

July 2, 1902, Dahlia Uncle Sam, Dahlia Alex Wallace, and Dahlia Mrs. E. T. Royle by H. Beaulieu.

July 26, 1902, Dahlia Wm. Scott by H. Beaulieu.

July 28, 1902, Cattleya Hardyana Mrs. Geo. Schlegel by Lager & Hurrell.

July 31, 1902, Rose Wedding Bells, Rose Princess and Rose Urania by M. H. Walsh.

August 1, 1902, Carnation Miss Aimee by J. B. Trudo.

August 2, 1902, Hydrangea Hortensis superba by M. H. Walsh.

Medals have been awarded as follows during the year: Through The American Carnation Society, a silver medal to R. Witterstaetter for Carnation Adonis; a bronze medal to R. Witterstaetter for Carnation Albatross.

Through the Horticultural Society of Chicago, a silver medal to The Chicago Carnation Company for Carnation Harlowarden.

Through the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, a silver medal to John N. May for Rose Mrs. Oliver Ames; a bronze medal to Edwin Lonsdale for Cypripedium Wyndmooreanum.

Through the New York Florists' Club, a silver medal to J. N. May for Rose Mrs. Oliver Ames.

Through the New Jersey Floricultural Society, a silver medal to John N. May for Rose Mrs. Oliver Ames.

Through the State Florists' Association of Indiana, a silver medal to H. W. Rieman for Chrysanthemum Majestic; a bronze medal to John Hartje for Carnation Snowdrift.

Through the Newport Horticultural Society, a bronze medal for Cypripedium Gardnerianum (insigne x barbatum).

The Executive Board convened at Asheville on March 4, 5, 6, 1902, all the members except three being present. Matters considered, in addition to the general program and arrangements for this convention, were the identity of the rose Helen Gould with the old Baldwin, the auditing of the treasurer's report, proposed legislation in Congress regarding the inspection and fumigation of nursery stock, the method of awarding the society's medals through other organizations, the testing of American grown bulbs for forcing purposes, the proposed plant breeding conference at New York city and the question of closer relations with kindred societies. Owing to the fact that there is no florists' organization in Asheville to whom the work of arranging for the trade exhibition could be delegated, as has been customary in recent years, this duty was intrusted to the Secretary with instructions that the maximum charge for exhibition space should be 20c per square foot instead of 25c as heretofore. It was decided to recommend to the society the reestablishment of the Nomenclature committee.

The program for the meeting as outlined by the Executive Board and published in the preliminary bulletin has undergone some alterations necessitated by the recent sad bereavement sustained by our President and the inability of one of our speakers, Mr. Carmody, to be present and fill his assignment on the program. At the last moment, we are apprised of the sudden illness of another of our essayists, Mr. Edgar Sanders, but fortunately Mr. Sanders had prepared his paper before he was stricken down and it will be presented in due time.

The various committees and, as a rule, the state vice-presidents, have done earnest, thorough work for the society, and have been at all times ready and willing to respond to any call made upon them from the secretary's office. To them and to the members generally your secretary is indebted for considerate co-operation and friendly counsel in the many emergencies and perplexities that have arisen during the year. Never before has the interest in the society seemed so widespread and earnest among its members, and this fact augurs well for the future of the old, yet ever young, S. A. F.

Wm. J. Stewart,
Secretary.

Report of the Treasurer.

Treasurer Beatty then presented his annual report, showing that in the general fund the balance on hand Jan. 1, 1901, was $1,756.02. And receipts for the year 1901 were $2,482.91, making a total of $4,238.93. The expenditures during the year were $2,127.82, leaving a balance of $2,111.11 on hand Jan. 1, 1902. In the life membership fund the balance on hand Jan. 1, 1901, was $954.45, and the receipts during the year were $620.23, making a total of $1,574.68 on hand Jan. 1, 1902. On August 1, 1902, the balance in the general fund was $2,430.56, and in the life membership fund $5,764.81.

The reports of the state vice-presidents were presented, and were on motion ordered printed in the annual report.

The legislative committee made a report of progress. A committee consisting of Messrs. A. Graham, E. G. Hill and C. W. Ward was appointed to suggest action on the matters mentioned in the president's message. A message from the Pacific Coast florists, expressing their wishes for a successful convention, was read and received with applause.

In response to a request signed by many members, a committee consisting of William Scott, C. W. Ward, M. H. Harris, F. R. Pierson and S. J. Reuter was appointed to petition President Roosevelt to take action looking to the settlement by arbitration of the coal strike; to remove the duty on coal until the strike is settled, that the menace to the very life of the greenhouse business may be removed before cold weather makes it too late.

A committee of three consisting of Messrs. P. O'Mara, F. R. Mathison and George C. Watson was appointed to draft suitable resolutions upon the death of ex-President Wood and to prepare a message of condolence to President Burton. The illness of Edgar Sanders, of Chicago, being brought to the notice of the convention, a committee was appointed to send him a telegram of sympathy, and the following telegram was sent:

"By unanimous vote the Society of American Florists sends you condolences and regrets upon your illness and earnestly hopes for your speedy recovery.

William R. Smith,
William Scott,
G. L. Grant,
Committee."

Owing to the absence of the president, the usual reception on Tuesday evening was not held, but the members congregated at the hall for an inspection of the exhibition and informal social intercourse while listening to some excellent music on the grand organ in the auditorium.

The Exhibition.

The exhibits were very large and comprehensive, considering the distance they had to be shipped, and in fact there was an overflow from the hall, M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, having their large display of choice novelties in florists' supplies and fine ribbons, etc., in a parlor of the Battery Park Hotel, where a host of visitors was deeply interested; and here the firm kept open house, having a punch-bowl well filled and cigars bearing their own label, while fans bearing their name were freely distributed. That their display might not be overlooked, each one entering the Convention Hall was given a very official-looking summons with a big red seal to appear before the Court of Wonderful Exhibit.

In the Convention Hall H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, also had a very large and comprehensive display of florists' supplies, including a host of attractive novelties.

H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, had, as usual, a very large exhibit of palms, ferns and similar plants, also bulbs, glazing points, etc.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, had a fine display of Begonia Lorraine and Pandanus Veitchii.

Charles D. Ball, Holmesburg, Philadelphia, Pa., a fine display of palms and other decorative plants.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, an extensive display of fine ribbons for florists.

H. Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y., a large display of palms and other decorative plants.

Robert Craig & Son, Philadelphia, fine palms and crotons.

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., two large tables of gaillardias blooms of his choice strain.

The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, showed one of their new small boilers, composed of two shells, one inside of the other and each cast in one piece. Also a model of greenhouse construction showing their iron gutter, supported by both iron posts and iron arches, angle iron plate and cast iron posts; also new attachment to their ventilation machinery.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., made a large display of fine plants of the new Nephrolepis Piersoni. This novelty attracted much attention and favorable comment. It is certainly a fine thing.

The new Foster fern was shown nearby by L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., and it was a splendid opportunity to compare these two variations from the Boston fern. Both are decided acquisitions.

Cluces & Boddington Co., New York, made a display of Harrisii bulbs and of Oncidium varicosum Rogersii with a sign saying that this was the most profitable orchid. We believe they are not far from correct in this. We must have Cattleyas and others, but this Oncidium is such a free bloomer and the long spikes are so magnificently decorative, as well as graceful, that it should not be overlooked.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, made a large display of bulbs in variety and also of novelties in ferneries and similar goods that was very attractive and interesting.

P. J. Berckmans Co., Augusta, Ga., made an extensive display of palms, caladiums, potted conifers and other trees and plants in addition to general nursery stock.

Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., showed a collection of his new geraniums in bloom, and they attracted much attention.

W. J. Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., showed his machine-wired toothpicks.

Mrs. H. Rehder, Wilmington, N. C., native Sarracenia Dionæa, etc.

H. M. Altick, Dayton, Ohio, folding boxes and labels.

James M. Lamb, Fayetteville, N. C., native plants and flowers in variety.

The Florists' Exchange, New York, horticultural books.

Lemuel Ball, Wissinoming, Pa., palms and other decorative plants.

Pinehurst Nurseries, Pinehurst, N. C., an extensive display of hardy plants and trees.

J. Stern, Philadelphia, was a new exhibitor of florists' supplies and he had an extensive line.

J. G. & A. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., showed samples of their hose.

Schloss Bros., New York, displayed a full line of ribbons.

W. C. Krick, Brooklyn, N. Y., was on hand with his usual display of immortelle letters and designs.

The Chadborn Mfg. Co., Newburgh, N. Y., had a model of a greenhouse with their automatic ventilating machinery in operation.

W. H. Ernest, Washington, D. C., showed a collection of well-made pots.

The Dillon Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Bloomsburg, Pa., had a novelty in the way of concrete composition gutters, posts, and plates that seemed indestructible and strong. A curious feature was that nails could be driven into the composition with about the same ease as into seasoned oak.

The Challenge Ventilator was to be seen in operation, as was also J. A. Evans, the exhibitor.

Sections of his iron gutters were displayed by George M. Garland, Desplaines, Ill., including a new pattern in which the drip conductor reaches much higher than in the other styles.

H. F. Michell, Philadelphia, showed Harrissii bulbs.

George Wittbold Co., Chicago, sample palms and ferns.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, bulbs in variety.

Segers Bros., Lisse, Holland, a full line of Dutch bulbs.

Judson Kramer, Cedar Rapids, Ia., an iron pipe frame greenhouse and a pot-hanger.

Central Foundry Co., New York, pipe and new style of pipe joints.

L. B. Brague, Hinsdale, Mass., hardy ferns, sphagnum moss and evergreen trees.

A. C. Oelschig, Savannah, Ga., rubber plants both plain and variegated, a fine lot.

Brooks Sisters, Sorrento, Fla., plants and seeds.

Jno. F. Croom & Bro., Magnolia, N. C., an immense plant of Caladium esculentum in a tub and tuberose plants and bulbs.

H. J. Smith, Hinsdale, Mass., ferns, moss and Christmas trees.

Robert Kift, Philadelphia, a full line of his vase rods and vase stands.

The U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, a very interesting collection of nepenthes and other rare plants.

A. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., iron ventilator frame.

Jessamine Gardens, Jessamine, Fla., orange trees in fruit and some of the immense bulbs of Crinum Kirkii.

J. L. Banner & Co., Montezuma, N. C., galax and leucothoe.

In front of the building there were several exhibits of plants that had been bedded out early in the season and across the street was a huge bed of 300 Egandale cannas, bordered by coleus, which was the exhibit of Fritz Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., and a bed of the new canna, West Virginia, and another of the new geranium, Mrs. Gov. Jackson, both shown by Gus Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va.

In the plant classes the judges awarded Henry A. Dreer a certificate of merit for display. A. C. Oelschig was highly commended for his exhibit of rubbers. The P. J. Berckmans Co. was highly commended and the Pinehurst Nursery received honorable mention. C. D. Ball received a certificate of merit, and H. Eichholz honorable mention. Lemuel Ball's display was highly commended, and Mrs. H. Rehder and J. M. Lamb each received honorable mention. J. A. Peterson and R. Craig & Son received certificates of merit, and Geo. Wittbold Co. was given honorable mention. Siebrecht & Son won a certificate of merit and Cluces & Boddington Co. and the Jessamine Gardens were given honorable mention. R. Bottomley, gardener at the Biltmore estate, was awarded the society's silver medal for the magnificent plants used in decorating the hall. The silver medal was also awarded to Mr. Smith of the U. S. Botanic Garden for his display of rare plants. The Foster fern received a certificate of merit and the Pierson fern was awarded the secretary's gold medal, the judges saying they considered it the finest decorative fern introduced in many years. In the cut flower classes a certificate of merit was awarded to Arthur Cowee for his gladioli.

In the classes for boilers, etc., The Lord & Burnham Co. received a certificate for the new boiler shown, the judges expressing the opinion that having the casing in one piece was a decided advantage. H. Thaden & Co., Atlanta, Ga., received a certificate of merit for the iron wire tendril plant support. Judson Kramer received a certificate of merit for his system of greenhouse construction and for a pot hanger. The Detroit Flower Pot Manufacturing Co. received a certificate for their new model pot which assures quick drainage and a strong bottom.

Honorable mention was given to A. Rasmussen for iron ventilator frame. To the Dillon Greenhouse Mfg. Co. for composition gutters and plates. To Central Foundry Co. for pipes and couplings. To the Chadbourn Mfg. Co. for automatic ventilator To Quaker City Machine Works for ventilator. To Geo. M. Garland for iron gutters.

In the bulb classes, the Brooks Sisters and the Jessamine Gardens were highly commended.

At the Wednesday morning session Mr. C. W. Ward of the committee on fertilizers read an interesting and instructive report, and in view of the fact that the committee had gone as far as it could in the matter, requested that it be discharged. This was done and the thanks of the society voted.

In the discussion, Mr. O'Mara emphasized the necessity of being careful in the selection of even cow manure by telling of a grower who lost several houses of roses by using cow manure from a place where he afterward learned they had used large quantities of deodorizers in the cow stables.

The committee on resolutions of condolence to President Burton, made their report, and it was adopted, as were also the resolutions on the death of ex-President Wood.

The report of the committee on the president's message was rather mixed, each member making an individual report. There was an extended discussion of several matters.

Mr. Graham recommended the appointment of a committee on paeonies, with Mr. Ward as chairman.

Mr. Hill thought the selection of a city for the next convention should be referred to the Executive Committee and that its recommendation be then acted upon by the convention.

Mr. Ward declined to act as chairman of a paeony committee for the reason that a paeony society was now in process of organization. He warned the society against the dangers of any further centralizing the governing powers of the body and of making the members feel less interest in their right to speak and vote.

After several motions had been made regarding the selection of the place of meeting next year, the whole matter was laid on the table, and the convention proceeded to make its selection in the usual manner.

Mr. F. R. Mathison then read his paper as follows:

The Needs of the Commercial Florist in the North.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

A year ago the Society of American Florists was cordially invited to meet in convention in the "Land of the Sky." As an inducement we were told the angels would be near to us. We see them now. We feel very much at home in their presence, knowing them to be loyal friends of the society, which at all times is endeavoring to do something for the beautiful, yes, for the angels and for the advancement of horticulture and floriculture in every state, town, and hamlet in the Union. The society feels confident of the hearty co-operation of its members in the south and the ladies and gentlemen present.

The subject allotted to me by the Executive Committee—some of the wants of the north, east, and west, in the line of plants, trees, shrubs, vines, bulbs, tuberoses stocks for budding, grafting, etc., by the commercial florist, the landscape architect, the park and cemetery superintendents, the private and the jobbing gardener. Their wants and requirements to successfuly carry on their various lines of horticulture are varied and many. The usual way of supplying these wants is by importing them from foreign countries, European countries in particular, at great cost and much risk, and frequently with unsatisfactory results in general. Without going into details the imports into the United States of plants, trees, and bulbs, and other horticultural products, seeds not included, from January, 1901, to March, 1902, in round numbers to the value of $1,500,000. I am informed by a gentleman who is in a position to know, that the imports in horticultural goods would average over $1,000,000 a year for the past four years, with imports on the increase, but the exports were less than $100,000 per year.

Cereus Grandiflorus in Bloom at Humboldt Park, Chicago. Max Kleppin, Gardener.

Now, my friends of the south, is it necessary that the florists of the United States should continue to pay out so much money for imports and receive so little for exports. With this great, great country at our feet, it has been said that about everything we import can be produced between Virginia and Texas. Without going into items some of the principal imports are azaleas, bay trees, spirea, rhododendrons, trees and shrubbery. These heavy and bulky goods cost about 60 per cent freight and customs-duty alone. Hybrid roses in great quantities, Manetti stocks by the million, palms in variety, lily of the valley by the million, bulbs and tuberoses in unlimited quantities at an advance on their original cost of not less than 50 per cent for freights and customs duty. I do not know of any good reason why this country should not become a great exporter horticulturally as well as a large importer. A free interchange of merchandise is the very life of our business. The government at Washington is doing a good work on the right lines by organizing the Bureau of Plant Industry. Already good results have been secured by following the policy thus laid down, and important plant problems are being studied.

A foreign visitor to Massachusetts, who is connected with the Royal Netherlands Nurseries, Hillegom, Holland, an authority on tulips, says: "Twenty-five of his countrymen connected with the bulb exporting business are about to visit the United States in connection with that industry." He is reported as saying, Holland annually sends to this country $1,000,000 worth of bulbs from which the United States gets $250,000 in duties. I think the above goes to show that the gentleman from Holland thinks favorably of some part of this country for the growing of bulbs.

A clipping from a Dutch correspondent to the Horticultural Trade Journal says: "Seldom, if ever, has the month of May kept us in such a continuous wintry temperature as this year, and bulb crops are very likely to show the results. This refers more especially to tulips which must have their principal growth in the month of May. Hyacinths have not suffered quite so much, their growth is made later. It will greatly depend upon the weather we get in June if we get a fairly good crop." I think the gentlemen from Holland have some good reasons for looking up new and more favorable locations where climatic conditions play such an important part in the bulb industry.

What is the south doing on these lines? What are the prospects of American-grown bulbs?

Mr. Buechi, Buffalo, N. Y., has for several years successfully grown White Romans. His stock of 10,000 were equal in all respects to the French bulbs delivered in 1901. Will force fully as well as the French stock and they can be produced in this country at less cost than the imported ones. He grows them in muck land, and the richer the better.

State Vice-President Lilenthall, San Francisco, is in receipt of a communication from the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, containing a valuable amount of information relative to the bulb industry, which he is anxious to see introduced into California. Owing to its climatic advantages as a bulb producing section, Secretary Wilson, Department of Agriculture, announces his active sympathy with the horticulturists of California in their efforts to secure this profitable field of commercial gardening. There are other states in the Union that can justly claim genial temperatures and congenial soils that can produce almost anything from peanuts to a full-grown stately pine.

The state of North Carolina is one of the oldest of the colonies and one of the original thirteen states, but her history horticulturally is not so generally known as some of the other states, still it is said to be the greatest botanical state in the Union. On her soil was the first settlement in the United States, the first white child of English parentage was born, the white people of this state probably represent today the purest type of American citizen in the Union.

But it is not the history of the State I will speak of, but some of the resources of the state and the south in general as they exist in the present, and the great possibilities for future development horticulturally. No other one thing contributes so much to satisfactory results in horticulture as a favorable climate, which this state has. There are none of the extremes of heat and cold, rainfall or drought, and the geographical position and topographical features of North Carolina afford a variety of soil and climate hardly to be found elsewhere within the same range of territory. This variety of soil and climate makes one of the richest in the American Union. There is no section of the state in which some variety of fruit, vegetables, or flowers cannot be grown profitably. Of strawberries, peaches and apples, not forgetting the peanuts, not less than 100,000 acres were planted in the year 1900, with a production of about 4,000,000 bushels. Another profitable field is the production of plants and bulbs. While this industry has received but little attention, whenever experiments have been made very satisfactory results have been shown. The above are a few extracts from the Congressional Record by Mr. Small, M. C., June 28th, 1902.

It is generally understood by gentlemen in active business and well versed in everything pertaining to horticulture that a great many plants, trees, shrubs, bulbs, and things too numerous to mention here, that at the present time are being imported at great cost and much risk, can be grown on the American continent. I do not pretend to tell the florists and nurserymen of the south what to grow, or what not to grow, for I am not well enough acquainted with the conditions and conveniences to give such advice in any particular state or locality, but I do know some of the wants and needs of the east and west in the line of horticultural products.

This state is making rapid progress in some lines, notably in raising fruit. In 1890 there were in the state in round numbers 1,250,000 apple trees; in 1900, 6,500,000; peaches increased in the same time 30 per cent; plums, prunes and pears increased more than threefold in ten years. Value of manufactured tobacco in 1890, $4,375,000. In 1899, 7,000 acres were devoted to small fruits alone. There were 5,600 acres of strawberries, the total yield for 1899 was 10,700,000 quarts. This business was started only twenty-seven years ago and is increasing rapidly. Large sections of the state are within a belt where frost is not known, but the floricultural establishments are not keeping up to the pace set by market gardeners. By the census statistics for June, 1900, only fifteen establishments are given with ninety acres of improved land. Value of land, buildings and implements, only $27,000. Value of products, $25,000; expended for labor, $4,000. This is a small showing for such a large and fertile state. It is earnestly hoped and it is confidently predicted, that the gathering of the S. A. F. in the south will be of inestimable value, not only to the south in general but to the horticultural world at large.

It is up to the florists and nurserymen of the state of North Carolina in particular, and to the south in general, to take advantage of the present opportunity by putting their shoulders to the wheel and prove to the florists of America and the world what they can do and will do for the advancement of the noblest and grandest work, horticulture. It has been proven that this state can grow tuberoses to perfection; the choicest kinds of dahlias will increase threefold faster than in any other known place, and lily of the valley is indigencus to the state. No doubt that it can be successfully grown and be much better ripened than that which comes from Europe. The demand for first-class pips the past five years has been enormous.

A gentleman, an acknowledged authority, says all kinds of tulips, narcissi, freesias, tuberoses and the general collection of Holland bulbs can be grown in this state successfully for commercial uses. Rhododendrons are native here, and they luxuriate in the ravines and dells of the mountains. The foundation is right here, with water in unlimited quantities, and it seems as though the grandest collection the world ever saw could be raised here, but we still keep on importing at high cost with 60 per cent added for freight and customs duty, with a shortage at the present time in Europe. Millions of Manetti are imported yearly at a cost of not less than $12 per thousand on the average to the consumer. They can be grown, and are to a limited extent, in South Carolina, and are as easy to grow as watermelons.

Again we are buying from Holland large quantities H. P. budded roses, anywhere from three to eight inches from the ground, taken from wet land in an unripened condition, not even losing their foliage in some cases, before being packed for shipment. They lie around the vicinity of New York till spring, are then sent broadcast to auction rooms, department stores, and other places to be distributed to the public usually with such unsatisfactory results as to be a positive injury to this branch of the business. In numerous instances clematis and other vines, Indian and Ghent azaleas, and a general collection of shrubbery are kept in storage so long that they are practically useless for ornamental or any other planting, and a sure disappointment to the last purchaser. Ordinary kinds of shrubs and the native evergreens in suitable sizes for immediate planting were not easily found two or three years ago. Red oak and pin oak could not be found in the eastern part of the country to plant a boulevard in Massachusetts, and this is the land of hard wooded trees, North Carolina. Low budded H. P. roses can be and are grown in South Carolina. Samples sent to Massachusetts last winter were all right; nice plants, well ripened; forced for Easter, and were satisfactory to those concerned. A consignment of Crimson Ramblers from the same state arrived in Massachusetts in the pink of condition, wood well ripened clean out to the points, the best forcing plants we had for the spring of 1902.

Another class of bulbs we have been importing of late years at heavy cost and little profit, with little prospect of geting anything better. I refer to the lilium bulbs. The Bermudas are unreliable. The Japanese are decidedly worse this year. From press reports the outlook in Japan is very discouraging. One grower in my section forced about 60,000 bulbs for last Easter, with over 50 per cent loss by disease partly, and apparently, by no care being given to selection. The Department of Agriculture at Washington has been carefuly looking into the matter and says some of the causes are indiscriminate propagation and in a great measure lifting out of the ground before they are ripe.

Here is an opportunity for the bulb grower of the south. Now what will the florists and nurserymen of the south do? The S. A. F. is here to talk and advise with you on many important matters in regard to this great and growing industry. We hope and we feel confident that an impetus will be given to the business within the south. We want to receive your bills of lading and some of the products of this vast territory at our feet, the "Sunny South." We hope for more and closer business relations with our friends and co-laborers from the great south. Let progress be the watchword in floriculture and horticulture in every branch. I believe most firmly in the future greatness of American horticulture. Our markets are unlimited. I see no reason why we cannot become a nation of exporters as well as importers, and compete with Europe and Japan. In the past five years horticulture has advanced more rapidly in the United States than at any period in history, and is exciting the admiration and wonder of the horticultural world. In round numbers, June 1st, 1901, the number of florist establishments in the United States was more than 6,000 with 43,000 acres of improved land. The value of land, buildings, and implements was $52,000,000, value of the product about $18,500,000. The same date, number of nurseries 750, with 52,000 acres of land, value of land and buildings, $8,500,000. The imports of seeds first five months 1902, value $1,630,139. Exports same date, $1,536,350.

So the florists, nurserymen, and seed growers in America are importing more than is exported in the same line of goods. This is not as it should be.

Mr. Wm. R. Smith then read his remarks on the bulb situation.

Remarks on the Bulb Situation.

To help find a commercial home for bulbs that can be grown in this country instead of being imported, has been in my mind for some years. This is a matter I consider of great importance, and worthy of careful consideration by this society. I have made an effort to obtain information as to the value and quantity of Roman hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, and lily-pips imported annually, but have failed. I addressed a letter to the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury, which he promptly referred to the Bureau of Statistics. Mr. O. P. Austin, chief of that bureau, furnishes the following table:

"Imports of value on orchids, palms, dracænas, crotons and azaleas, tulips, etc., for consumption in the United States, by principal customs districts, and all other districts for the year ending June 30, 1901.

Year Ending June 30 1901.

"Orchids, palms, dracænas, crotons and azaleas, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, lilies of the valley, and all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms, which are cultivated for their flowers:

New York, N. Y.	$415,101
Boston, Mass.	41,555
Philadelphia, Pa.	137,651
Chicago, Ill.	40,363
All other districts.	129,788
Total.	$764,458

"Treasury Department, July 22, 1902. "(No quantities stated.)"

Mr. Austin says, in a letter addressed to me, that he had requested the collectors of customs at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago, for any further information they could give but owing to the classification they could not furnish separate information on the articles asked for.

We beg leave here to acknowledge the kind courtesies of Mr. Austin. Mr. Powers, chief statistician of the census office, also kindly endeavored to secure information for me on the same subject, from leading firms in the various cities, but for the same and other reasons he tailed to elicit reliable information; enough, however, was obtained to make it an object that those bulbs, of easy culture, not requiring extra skilled labor, can be grown successfully somewhere in the United States, and the quantity used can be doubled and made an object of interest. There are numerous other bulbs imported, that can and will before long be grown by enthusiastic experts in this country. We have the advantage of cheap land as against cheap labor. Already the gladioli, freesias and tuberoses are exports. Of the latter the large output of $45,000 is not all for florists' purposes, I am informed. Grease and glass, at Grasse, near Nice, consume an immense quantity of tuberose flowers, and a monopoly from natural causes secures this, and will secure others as exports. An interesting and instructive article on this subject can be found in Appleton's Popular Scientific Monthly of John Burton, Re-elected President Society of American Florists.

November, 1897. In the same article Kruger is stated to have discovered an artificial violet perfume in the iris root. Whether the Lilium longiflorum and its variety, Harrisii, can be grown for market purposes in the state of Washington and state of Texas, as intelligent correspondents seem to think, is still an open question. With 6,159 intelligent heads of commercial florists' establishments scattered over the whole land, representing, as they do, an investment of $50,708,671, urging them to vigilant care for their best interests, it is not to be doubted that a commercial home in some of the various states and territories will be found for those articles, so valuable in developing the esthetic soul of the American people.

The discussion that will follow to-day, and in the trade papers on this subject, will soon disseminate all useful and interesting information, and we will thus add another wreath to the good old S. A. F., which has, in my opinion, been an important factor in improving our profession. The following extract from an advance sheet, kindly furnished by L. G. Powers, Agricultural Division, Census Office, shows the magnitude of the commercial florist business:

"The annual income from cut flowers is estimated at $12,000,000 to $14,000,000. Upon this basis the sale of roses averages $6,000,000 annually, with an annual production of 100,000,000. The violet is third with sales of $750,000, and an annual production of 75,000,000. The chrysanthemum sales equal $500,000, the season for the sale of this flower being short. In another part of the report, it is stated, the total product was $18,422,522, and the retail value would be at least $30,000,000, since between the grower and consumer there is sufficient expense and waste to nearly double the value."

Prof. Massey was not present and the subject assigned him was deferred.

Written invitations for next year were then read from Baltimore, Milwaukee, Washington and Cincinnati, and various speakers urged reasons in favor of their cities. Later Cincinnati withdrew from the race and after a good deal of spirited speechmaking a ballot was taken resulting in the selection of Milwaukee by a large vote, that city receiving 140 ballots, Baltimore 73 and Washington 24, a total of 237 votes cast which shows the warm interest taken in the matter.

John Burton was unanimously nominated for re-election as president. C. C. Pollworth was the only nominee for vice-president. For secretary W. J. Stewart and E. A. Seidewitz were nominated. Treasurer Beatty was renominated and no other name was offered.

On Wednesday evening there was a large audience to listen to the interesting lecture by Mr. Farquhar of Boston, on foreign bulb and plant markets, which was freely illustrated by stereopticon views.

In the bowling contest Philadelphia practically swept the board, or the alleys. They won the Detroit trophy, and this is now their property, being the second time they have won it. This was for the greatest number of pins in any one game. They also won the Lord & Burnham cup, and as this is their second winning the cup is now theirs. They won the Hitchings cup also, but this is their first winning of this cup. The Halliday gold medal for highest aggregate individual score in three games was won by B. Starkey, Philadelphia, with a total of 494. The Bayersdorfer gold medal for second highest aggregate individual score in three games was won by R. Halliday with a total of 475. The prize for the third highest went to Geo. Moss of Philadelphia on a total of 467. The Stewart prize for greatest number of strikes in three games went to Geo. Moss, who made 12. The prize for the greatest number of spares went to W. Robertson, of Philadelphia, who made 15. The scores in detail follow:

CHICAGO AND CINCINNATI TO ASHEVILLE.

The two special cars that left Chicago at 8:30 o'clock last Sunday night for Asheville were well filled, there being 38 in the party, as follows: E. F. Winterson and wife, C. W. McKellar and wife, C. A. Samuelson, John Poehlmann, Geo. M. Garland, Geo. W. Wienhoeber, Fred. Wittbold and wife, J. C. Vaughan and wife, Leonard Vaughan, F. Bahr, Thos. Turtle, Philip J. Foley, G. L. Grant and wife, E. Enders, J. S. Wilson, M. Barker, Jessie Ludlow, Frances Ludlow, Chicago; James Hartshorne, J. D. Thompson and wife, Mrs. J. M. Thompson, Fred P. Story, Joliet, Ill.; C. C. Pollworth, R. C. Watrous, Milwaukee; Mrs. Jos. Dunkley and daughter, Kalamazoo, Mich.; Frank Berry and wife, Stillwater, Minn.; J. T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.; Judson Kramer, Cedar Rapids, Ia.; Aug. S. Swanson, St. Paul, Minn.; Miss M. A. Evans, Tunbridge Wells, England.

The party had a very pleasant trip to Cincinnati, where the train was met by a committee of the local florists and taken to the Grand Hotel for breakfast. Then parties were made up to visit the parks and other places of trade interest, each guided by one or more of the Cincinnati boys.

At 1 p. m. all met again at the hotel and the whole party was entertained at luncheon, which was almost a banquet, by the Cincinnati florists. About 300 sat down to the table. It was a hospitality that was greatly appreciated by the visitors. With the coffee came a few brief remarks from some of the visitors called upon by the local chairman, Messrs. Adam Graham and E. G. Hill being very entertaining, as usual. A vote of thanks and three cheers for the Cincinnati boys were given with a will, and the party proceeded to the train, which left at 2:30 p. m.

Two sleepers were added, making four in all, and these, with a baggage car, constituted the Florists' Special train.

It was then found that these had been added to the party for Asheville: E. G. Gillett, R. Witterstaetter, J. A. Peterson, Clarence Peterson, A. Sunderbruch, Wm. Murphy, C. C. Murphy and daughter, Ben George and wife, Cincinnati; F. C. Weber, wife and two children, Geo. Windler, sister and aunt, Geo. Waldbart, Jno. Connon, St. Louis; Phil. Breitmeyer, J. F. Sullivan, Jno. Dunn, Wm. Dilger, H. Balsley, Jas. Taylor and wife, Detroit; Adam Graham, C. G. Graham, Herman Hart and wife, J. M. Gasser, Cleveland; E. G. Hill, J. A. Evans, G. R. Gause and wife, Vernon Grave, Richmond, Ind.; Jno. M. Good and wife, Springfield, O.; H. H. Ritter, W. G. Matthews, H. M. Altick, Dayton, O.; Lewis Ullrich, Tiffin, O.; Geo. A. Kuhl and wife, Pekin, Ill.; Geo. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; S. N. Peck, wife and son, Toledo, O.; J. T. D. Fulmer and daughter, Des Moines, Ia.; E. C. Reineman, Pittsburg; D. E. Small, Kokomo, Ind.; E. R. Sackett, Fostoria, O.; Vern L. Schluraff, Erie, Pa.; D. O. Pratt, Anoka, Minn.; J. D. Imlay, Zanesville, O.; Gus. Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va.; A. Krueger, Meadville, Pa.; Jno. McDonald and wife, Farmer City, Ill.

This added 60 more to the party, making 98 in all on the special train. The Cincinnati boys had not ceased looking after the welfare of the delegates when the train left their city for the baggage car was found to have been well stocked with refreshments that would not have been disdained by the governors of North and South Carolina.

The ride through the beautiful blue grass region of Kentucky by daylight was much enjoyed and the early risers got a view of the "mountains of the angels' feet" before arriving at Asheville.

NEW YORK.

On the Train.

On the train and "On the Potomac" for we are just crossing the big bridge as I write, on our way from Washington to Asheville in our splendid "special" sleeper train furnished by the courteous and solicitous Southern R. R. Everybody looks cool and happy after their magnificent reception in the Capitol City and the elegant dinner provided by the big-hearted florists of Washington. Over 250 guests sat down in a beautifully decorated dining room to a repast that lacked nothing to make it palatable, satisfying and suggestive of true southern hospitality. The Washington boys exceeded all our expectations and started us on our long trip at 5:30, thoroughly rested and refreshed.

"Father Smith," Gude Bros., Mr. Freeman and, in fact, all the best members of the trade were here and there and everywhere attentive and profuse in welcome. Fifteen Washiugtonians accompanied the crowd to the convention. An invitation to the S. A. F. O. H. to come to Washington in 1903 was eloquently tendered by Mr. Bulkley, of the Business Men's Association and was received with hearty cheers even though everyone had already been decorated with Baltimore buttons.

The Baltimore contingent had been in Washington for several hours before our special arrived and most of them had "done the city" and were at the station to join in the welcome we received. Prominent amongst the Baltimoreans was Candidate Seidewitz, fat, rosy and genial.

A special car at Philadelphia was well filled with the "brethren and sisters horticultural" on our arrival there, and fraternizing and inter-visiting was the order of the day. Purveyor Langjahr, of Brooklyn, had already cared for the "inner men and women" in his charge, and fruit, sandwiches and liquid nourishment had been freely dispensed under his able management, the same having been provided by the New York Florists' Club. An immense lot of gladioli had been sent to the train by Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, and Capt. Lang officially decorated the car.

The trip from New York to Philadelphia was a pleasant one, perfect weather, agreeable companionship and "innocent" card games whiled away the time. There was much to talk about, the coal question especially absorbing the interested ones. A petition which follows was circulated and signed by everyone on board. Coal in New York is now worth $10 a ton and if the strike continues calamity threatens every industry, and especially will the florists suffer.

The Ashville Board of Trade Souvenir was distributed on the train and was very favorably received. It is indeed a credit to Dan Long, the artistic publisher.

Everybody was glad to see William Scott and Landscaper McClure at Washington ready to join the "army on blessing bent." This is a very peaceful invasion and we are all expecting a royal welcome. A more lovely day for the trip could not have been selected. The sun smiles steadily; the air from these Southern fields and woods is sweet and cool; the red earth glistens in the waning light; the corn tassels wave rythmically in the breeze. We are coming to historic ground; Manassas and Bull Run are redolent with memories; we have passed them by and the farther south we go the more we realize that "the past is past" and we are one people, one nation, under one flag and forever inseparable and loyal, working together for the common good! The shadows gather, the lights are lit, the night cometh, and with it rest and readiness for what promises to be one of the happiest and most important conventions of the S. A. F. O. H. since it began to be! When we awake tomorrow it will be amid the "everlasting hills" of the Skyland. Possibly we shall dream of the feet of angels, and awake to find we are to be entertained by real "human angels" in the beautiful little City of Asheville.

Scintillations.

The ladies were not so numerous as was expected, but they were very welcome and gave the excursion a tone that kept it in tune and eminently decorus all the way.

Julius Kietschmar proved an excellent sprinter in his wild flight to catch the train at Washington. This entitles him to enter the fat men's race.

Ex-President O'Mara was in good voice and full of "merry grips" as usual.

Henry Siebrecht, F. R. Pierson and C. W. Ward were interested discussors of the coal question.

Robert Kift's face shone with enthusiasm and good nature, as he looked after the comfort of the Philadelphians.

Mr. A. M. Herr and wife were in charge of the youngest florist on the train, a beautiful boy of fourteen (months) that was soon the special pet of the crowd, even the old bachelors hovering around him.

John Westcott's punch is a household word. It was as potent as ever

Dean Harris seems as young and spry

as in the old days. It would be a lonesome convention without him.

An interesting vote was taken by the ladies between New York and Baltimore as to who was the handsomest man on the train, and resulted in a tie, the fortunate winners being Fred Michell and Alex. Guttman, with Arthur Boddington and Leo Niessen amongst the "also rans."

A pleasant incident of the start at New York was a good-by call at the train from S. S. Butterfield, who is recovering from a very serious illness.

The Flatbush boys must have gone on a special train of their own.

Henry Siebrecht, Sr., maintains his reputation as the youngest man of his age in the S. A. F. He grows younger every year.

Everybody was pleased to see the veteran "Father Smith," of Washington.

The music at the banquet at Washington was very interesting and added greatly to the enjoyment of the hour. The tune that brought down the house, of course, was "Away Down South in Dixie."

A TILE BENCH.

It is scarcely correct to call this a bench, as the tiles are laid on the ground. The picture shows two or three beds complete, but it does not illustrate just how we laid them, for we should and did begin at one end. These are not drain tiles, which I have seen used in many places. They are what is known as hollow brick, 5x4 inches and 13 inches long. They cost us at the brick yards $15.00 per 1,000. Unfortunately with us freight was quite an item. If drain tile is a good thing for the bottom of a bed or bench then these hollow bricks are a great improvement over them. They are square, do not rock or roll, are very porous, and how much better to shovel the soil off when renewing has to be done. It must be the most perfect drainage and the air passing freely beneath the roots. If these hollow bricks had been just 12 inches long it would have been better for us, as it was quite awkward to make the beds more than 5 feet, so one brick had to be cut in half.

Now about cost. This is cheaper, considerably so, than a 2-inch plank. The brick would be equal to common hemlock plank at $30.00 per 1,000, and at present prices it would cost us $36.00 per 1,000, 2-inch thick, and pine would cost more. The sides of the beds are 2x4 scantling set on edge and fastened to a piece of 1-inch gas pipe driven into the ground and fastened with a tin clip. The scantling could be improved on by making a frame 2x4 or deeper, if required, and running in a concrete or mixture of sand and lime. It sets in a few minutes and you can remove your frame and go ahead with another length. It takes about as long a time to properly grade and lay this brick floor as it does to build a bench, no longer. I saw in my travels this past winter many tile benches that were laid on the ordinary wooden bench with the usual 2-foot uprights and cross pieces to bear the tile. I can hardly see the wisdom of that as the wood frame will rot out and all your building has to be done over again.

I am aware there are thousands of houses, particularly the long span to the south detached houses, where the beds could not with advantage be placed on the ground. This range, however, is entirely different. The gutters average 6 feet 6 inches above floor level; there are no partitions, merely a 2-inch pipe every 5 feet 7 inches supports the gutter. Now it is very evident that the higher the gutter and house and the lower the beds the more light will every rose plant get. At present every spot in these six houses is a little lighter than out of doors. I have some beds with 2 inches of coal ashes beneath the soil; some with a 2x6-inch joist on the ground and a 6-inch board on them; some on simply the hard but well drained ground, and some on the hollow brick. I ought to know something a year from now and, if I don't get photographed to death, will delight in telling you if there was any difference in results, and if so, what difference.

The personnel of these operations is of little interest outside this village. The man with the wheel-barrow is endowed with great strength, and we are obliged to give him heavy work to keep down his exuberance of spirits. Notice the load. The white and black mud turtle in the distance loves to bask on the hot bricks. The Filipino is laying the brick and the broad brimmed tall youth who is assisting is quite a character. He talks Milton and Byron, composes odes for school graduations, was brought up in an antiquated faith but is far advanced in modern thought. We never let him work alone. He gets lonesome. Who knows but what we have an undiscovered Longfellow or James Whitcomb Riley, or another 16 to 1 Bryan.

Seriously, perhaps the most important operation in laying a tile or brick floor is to have the surface of your house nicely and correctly graded, and that we did by getting the proper grades on the two outside rows of brick, and the rest is easy. The poor old man with the rake did the grading and insisted on being in the picture.

It pleases him and doesn't hurt us.

NEW YORK.

Various Notes.

The cooler weather of last week made the cut-flower trade on Saturday quite exhilarating from the wholesalers' standpoint. Everything of merit in sight was in good demand at better prices. Even the prolific gladiolus was popular, and its price improved. The "melancholy days" are drawing to a close; the schools and the theaters will open and the "good old times" renew their youth and start business at the same old stand. This week sees many of the popular play houses in full blast, and the public demonstrations of Flora's beauty will soon be made "over the footlights" as of yore. The holiday season has had a goodly influence upon the wholesale men—they are coming back to town with healthful glows and hopeful faces ready for the prosperity that the trusts have promised to all, and that the wonderful harvests of the glorious West have confirmed.

The convention has been the principal topic of late, and its seductive power has drawn many to the southland. Later in the week we can tell who they are and how they have honored the metropolis by their experiences "above the clouds" at this outing. Everything indicates a large attendance at Asheville from New York and vicinity. Mr. Langjahr, the wholesale florist of Brooklyn, was entrusted with the commissary department, and had everything in apple-pie order for his charge (including the apple pies) so that the good beginning of the journey is assured. The stop-over at Washington is a comforting assurance as we board the train. The outlook for a grand time is most encouraging and the accumulating happiness of the excursionists bids fair to overflow before the angels' feet appear.

H. J. Smith of Hinsdale, Mass., was a visitor Saturday on his way to Asheville with a fine exhibit of his ferns and other specialties peculiar to the north. He should have a fraternal welcome from those wild smilax and galax men, for between them the decorators have been able to make their reputations, and now we "cannot live without them."

Schloss Bros., the ribbon men of 533 Broadway, will also make a brilliant display of their new shades and specialties.

The trade exhibit promises to be much larger and more interesting than was anticipated. Mr. Krick of Brooklyn will be there with his letters and novelties and inventions.

Stumpp & Walter Company have sent a bulb and supply exhibit under the superintendency of Mr. Henry Eicke, and Mr. R. N. Lockwood of this house will also be at Asheville, where his residence of nearly a year has inspired him with eloquent appreciation of its loveliness. Mr. Walter is back from his summer rest full of physical refreshment, and Mr. Stumpp looks able to "make the fight of his life" for business in the two big stores of this progressive firm.

I saw Andrew McKnight ("Uncle Andrew," the "pansy king") at Elliott's the other day hale and hearty at 81 and "good for a hundred," so he says. He can "remember the father of William Elliott when he was a boy," which is going back a long, long time.

George Saltford is ready for the violets and to defend his title, and is anticipating a wonderful season with the society flower. His book on violet culture is having a great sale, and deserves it.

Mr. Thielmann of Brooklyn was in town Saturday from his summer home at Mount Kocono, Pa., in greatly improved health, and hopeful of being at Asheville with his better half.

Two who will be greatly missed at the convention are President Sheridan of the New York Florists' Club and Treasurer Charles Weathered. Mr. Weathered has just completed his "latest improved sectional boiler," one of the largest ever manufactured. He reports a wonderfully busy season.

Mr. J. F. McConnell of the New York Cut Flower Company is back from his vacation, which included a cruise through the sound and a visit at all the fashionable resorts, a dissipation that must be wonderfully beneficial, from the looks of things.

Mr. Hagemann has returned from his trip well and happy, and Mr. Meyer is now away for a well-deserved rest under country skies and "harvest moons."

Mr. Butterfield of the Exchange was "out of danger" when last heard from, and all who know him will rejoice in his recovery.

Mrs. Burns' accident was a most severe one, and Alex Burns has the sympathy of all in the anxiety he still endures. He will be greatly missed by his bowling confreres.

James Weir, son of John Weir, the veteran florist, of Brooklyn, has been very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Kreshover are enjoying an outing among the Sullivan county mountains.

H. H. Berger & Co.'s importation of French bulbs has just arrived in fine condition. They report freesias scarce on account of the drought in California, and callas also, as a telegram from that section for a shipment of the latter attested when I called. This firm has orders already for over 200,000 freesias and a quarter of a million Asparagus plumosus seed and 400,000 kentia seed.

John E. Sutton, from Reading, England, of the firm of Sutton & Sons, was in the city last week calling on his friend, Mr. Lessner of Suzuki & Iida. Mr. Lessner says this firm has seven miles of seed farms and do the largest seed business in the world and spend half a million dollars annually in advertising.

Mr. Joosten reports a large importation of bulbs, palms and azaleas from the Exotic Nurseries of Ghent, Belgium.

Arthur Newell of Kansas City arrived from England Thursday morning via the Teutonic in good health and too happy in his desire to see his American family to stay over for the convention.

A. L. Miller of Brooklyn is too busy for Asheville. His place looks very attractive now, and his new range at Jamaica and the thirteen acres he has acquired there promise a great showing in hardy herbaceous plants, California privet and shrubs in due time. He has over sixty of the best varieties of cannas, including a good stock of La France, an orchid-flowering variety equal to Black Beauty in foliage, and his new dwarf, an orange-scarlet with yellow band, an improvement on Crozy—larger and a freer bloomer. A fine tree hydrangea on the old home place, twenty-five years of age, is the finest specimen I have seen anywhere. His stock of camelliæflora dahlias is very large, as usual. Repairs, new boilers, and attention to his range of glass at Jamaica prevent his enjoying the trip to Asheville, as he anticipated.

Captain Lang will be on hand with a team of bowlers ready to capture all the prizes—if they can—and he thinks they will. His stay in the country has developed a "200 arm" that seems invincible.

As to the next place of meeting a general satisfaction is expressed concerning Milwaukee's graceful and brotherly sentiment, and after a season near the skyland it seems only right the effect should be somewhat counteracted by a visit to the "famous" city by the lake, where brotherly communion may be enhanced by flowing bumpers of something almost as exhilarating as the "mountain dew" of the sunny south.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is practically no change in market conditions since last report. The last few days of the past week witnessed a slight improvement. With an active demand and rather small supply, the stock was easily moved at fair prices. The current week, however, opened in a listless, mid-summer fashion with largely increased supply on account of a change from a chilly fall atmosphere to fairly warm weather.

Roses are improving fast. The exceptionally cool weather which has prevailed practically all summer has been an almost ideal condition for stock under glass. Roses now look more promising. Beauties are making rapid strides, both in growth and quality of bloom. The cool weather enables the growers to fumigate freely, hence less trouble with thrips. Teas also show an improvement, although by far the largest cuts are still very short, and this grade of stock is rather difficult to move.

Carnations from the field are coming in more freely. Quality in this line is also improving somewhat, but still stems are very short in most cases.

Asters remain with us in immense quantities. The poorer grades, especially in colored sorts, are a drug. Gladioli have shortened up some, but are still more than plentiful in supply and sell very low.

Prices: Beauties, long per doz. $2 to $2.50; medium, $1 to $2; short, per 100, $2 to $5. Maids, per 100, $1 to $4; Brides, $1 to $4; Kaiserins, $1 to $6; Meteors, $1 to $5. Carnations, 1 to $1.50.

Various Items.

Oscar J. Friedman, the Michigan Ave. florist, was married Aug. 12th, the bride being Miss Clara Schlesinger.

Recent visitors: Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.; James Hayes, Topeka, Kans.; Henry C. Fruck and Harry G. Smith, Grosse Pointe Farms, Detroit, Mich.; E. S. Thompson, South Haven, Mich.; Thomas Chapman, Denver, Colo., and C. L. Brunson of C. L. Brunson & Co., Paducah, Ky.

Uncle John Thorpe was unable to attend the Asheville Convention on account of the serious illness of his daughter, Mrs. Roscoe, of Park Ridge, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe came to Chicago for a short visit and Mrs. Roscoe was taken ill soon after arriving.

The latest report in regard to Edgar Sanders was very favorable, Mrs. H. P. Vietor reporting that the family has every reason to be encouraged about his condition.

A PAEONY SOCIETY.

In this issue appears a call for the organization of a society to be devoted to the interests of the pæony. The growing importance of this flower should certainly make such a society useful and we wish the movement success.

AMONG THE GROWERS.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati.

At this establishment Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is much in evidence. There are now no less than 12,000 cuttings in the sand, a large proportion being leaf cuttings. Mr. Peterson finds that he can get a much more shapely young plant from a leaf cutting than from the cutting of usual form. And there were plants in all stages from those just potted off up to specimens. He certainly does this begonia extra well and handles them successfully in a wholesale way that is very encouraging.

Pandanus Veitchii is also largely grown here and the stock was in uniformly fine condition. A large batch of young plants was plunged in hot manure in a cold frame under elevated shaded sash. A large lot of fine young cyclamen was in a similar frame, but instead of being plunged the plants were set on inverted pots in a thick bed of tobacco stems.

He has quite a stock of Dracæna terminalis and Lord Wolseley, but says he is decreasing the space devoted to them. An odd plant of Dracæna Godseffiana drew the remark that it was of no value to the commercial florist. And he cares little for Dracæna Sanderiana. Says it may be useful to some, but doesn't believe it is worth while for him to bother with it.

An interesting house was one of Lawson carnations planted in June from 4-inch pots, the plants having been grown in frames up to planting time. He will undoubtedly get some fine early blooms from that house. The plants were in solid beds, but the question of drainage can never be serious with him as the whole establishment is on a side hill, each house several feet higher than the one in front of it. A general line of roses and carnations is grown, but in plants he runs altogether to a few specialties, doing these unusually well, which is certainly the correct line of action.

Below the lowest house he has a pond of aquaties that was showing some of the finest blooms of Nelumbium speciosum we have ever seen.

CARNATION NOTES.

An inquiry comes to me asking how soon it is advisable to allow carnations to bloom after they are brought in from the field.

It depends on a good many things, and the first of all is whether you need the blooms or not. When we bring in the plants we pinch off every shoot which has begun to run up into bud, and by the time the next shoots run into bud the plant has a pretty good hold on the soil, and if they are of a color that is in demand we let them bloom; providing, they are of a variety which will produce good blooms during this warm weather. These varieties are comparatively few, however, and up to date there is not a scarlet one among them. Crane is the earliest red to made good blooms, but even it is not of much account while the weather is hot. Lawson is inclined to come on short stems, and it will pay you to pick off the flower shoots until the middle of September. White Cloud does not make good blooms until cool weather, nor does Mrs. Bradt. The best early white is Flora Hill, and we let it come in just as soon as it will, and the same way with E. Crocker. Queen Louise is also a good early white, and Dorothy is a good early pink.

If you are a wholesaler it will pay you to keep your plants from blooming until they will produce good blooms, as poor blooms will bring you neither money nor reputation; but if you have a retail trade you can use the blooms to good advantage, and it will do the plants no harm to let them bloom. You will want to put on the first mulch of cow manure pretty soon now, and you should see that you have a sufficient quantity on hand and also that it is of the right kind and in proper condition. If you had it hauled last fall or during the winter and turned it over a couple of times it will be well rotted and in fine condition to use for mulching. It is essential that it should be well rotted. There is perhaps nothing (unless it be a good sod pile) that there is less danger of a grower's having too large a supply of, than cow manure. Most growers have a hard time finding enough, and lucky is the grower who has a dairy within reach where he can get all the manure he needs.

Your plants will need other food besides cow manure, though, and now is a good time to think of what you are going to feed with this winter. You will need to apply a dressing or two of bone, and it will pay you to have it in shape so the plants can assimilate it at once. Sift a lot of soil through a ¾-inch screen and mix in about a 5-inch pot full of bone to a bushel of soil and put it where it will not be exposed to the weather too much. A heavy rain will wash much of the bone meal away. In a few months this stuff will be in fine shape for the plants to take up, and it will stiffen the stems and toughen the blooms wonderfully. Lime and wood ashes we sprinkle on the soil and work them into the soil just as they are. Do not mulch your carnations until you have weeded them at least once. If the soil is inclined to bake loosen it up occasionally, and it will not bake. If the bottom foliage has turned yellow and dried up now is a good time to clean it off. Put a careful man at the job, though, or else he is liable to do more harm than good. If the grass is quite dry it will break off easily and no harm is possible, but if it is damp you will have to pull it off, and that is where the danger is. See that you do not pull the skin off the stem, as that would do more harm than the dead foliage could ever do. It is a tedious job, but it pays to do it, as a plant which has only healthy foliage is much nearer disease proof than a plant which is half dead.

A. F. J. Baur.

A Broken Wreath.

A BROKEN WREATH.

The common wire form for a broken wreath is made with a small portion lacking to represent the break; or at most is only held together by two wires which require to be hidden by some kind of greenery.

If required to make this design, and a form of the necessary size is not available, or if it is desired to produce something varying from the common type, which it is often a good thing to do, the florist may use a form for an ordinary wreath, of proper size, and fill in to the height of the body of the work with smilax instead of flowers, to indicate the break, as shown in the illustration.

W. T. Bell.

Springfield, O.—The Good & Reese Company have moved their office building to a more desirable nearby location, and are building several fine new greenhouses. The cost of the improvements will aggregate about $10,000. The buildings will be completed by Sept. 1.

A copy of the twenty-seventh annual report of the Board of Commissioners of the Boston parks has reached us. It is freely illustrated and contains a full report of the work of the year by Superintendent Pettigrew.

OUR TITLE PAGE.

It may be of interest to our readers to know that the young lady who posed for the picture on our title page is a daughter of Mr. J. Austin Shaw, New York, whose stage name is Zana Austin, and who was so popular a footlight favorite in "The Burgomaster."

Everybody in the trade knows Mr. Shaw, but a comparative few knew that he had three daughters on the stage. The one who appears on our title page is the youngest.

Mr. Shaw, by the way, is the Eastern representative of The Florists' Review for New York and vicinity.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower business seems to have but little life at present, and nearly all report very little doing in anything except a little funeral work now and then. Good stock of all kinds is scarce.

The roses that come in are soft and, unless there is work on hand requiring their immediate use, there is not much demand for them. They sell for 2 and 3 cents, and only the select stock brings 4 cents. In Beauties some fair blooms were seen the past week that brought 75 cents to $2 per dozen.

Carnations are somewhat scarce, that is, good stuff. Plenty of poor, short-stemmed ones are in the market at 75 cents. Good blooms demand $1.50 per 100.

Auratum lilies sell at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Outdoor stuff, such as hydrangeas, gladioli, tuberoses and asters, is plentiful and hard to sell, except white asters, which always find a market at $1 per 100.

The outlook for better stock is very promising. The young rose stock is in very good condition. Carnations in the fields and houses also look good. Violet plants in most places are reported as being very fine, owing to the recent good rains.

Club Meeting.

The club had another of those delightful outdoor meetings, this time at the home of Bro. J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, Ill. Twenty-nine florists made the trip on the electric cars. Of these, twenty were members of the club and nine were visitors. The visitors were Messrs. Gross, Pilcher and Berdan, of Kirkwood, Mo.; E. W. Guy, J. Clark and Joe Kaiser, of Belleville; F. B. Call, of Central; Thos. Klockenkemper and Mr. Frow, Jr., of St. Louis.

Before the meeting was called to order the craft inspected the new houses of Mr. Ammann, which contain 25,000 feet of glass. In the six houses are grown 2,000 Beauties, 1,500 Meteors, 1,000 Bridesmaids, 1,000 Brides and 1,000 Golden Gates. Seven thousand carnations are grown consisting of Lawson, White Cloud, Crane, Flora Hill, Angel, Joost and Morning Glory. The new ventilator system, by Wolf, of Dayton, Ohio, is very practical and was highly spoken of. All the plants are in excellent shape and great things are expected of them this winter. Mr. C. A. Kuehn receives the outpnt.

The meeting was then called to order by President Meinhardt. After the regular order of business and reports of committees were finished the election of officers took place. J. W. Dunford, the only nominee for president, was elected by acclamation to fill the chair for the coming year. Mr. Dunford made a neat speech for the good of the club. For vice-president Geo. B. Windler, R. J. Mohr and Henry Emundt were the nominees. The first ballot resulted in a tie between Windler and Mohr. The second ballot elected Mr. Geo. B. Windler. Emil Schray for secretary and J. J. Beneke for treasurer were elected by acclamation, having no opposition. Wm. Adels, F. M. Ellis, H. Berning, John Steidle and C. J. Juengel were the nominees for three trustees. Messrs. Steidle, Ellis and Juengel were elected on the first ballot.

The secretary's report showed that the average attendance during the year was fifteen, the largest single attendance was twenty-six and the smallest was seven. The club started the year with fifty active members and closed with forty-nine. The treasurer's report showed a balance in the treasury of $31.12. Mr. F. B. Call made application for membership.

Chas. J. Juengel, state vice-president of the S. A. F., was called upon and made a few remarks regarding convention matters and hoped to see all the brothers become members of the Society of American Florists, especially as we expect to bring the convention to St. Louis in 1904, during the World's Fair.

The Review was complimented and given a vote of thanks for the excellent photograph of Mr. Ammann, which was distributed among the members as a souvenir during the meeting.

After a long discussion on boilers and greenhouse apparatus the meeting adjourned, after which the members sat down to an elegant lunch on the lawn, which was prepared by Mrs. Ammann, assisted by her three young daughters.

It was a most pleasant meeting and the members are with me in extending to Mr. and Mrs. Ammann a vote of thanks for their very pleasant entertainment, and Aug. 14th, 1902, will long be remembered by those who made the trip.

Convention Matters.

This being convention week, by the time this issue is in the hands of our readers the craft will be enjoying themselves at Asheville. The delegation from here is small and left Sunday night at 9 o'clock over the B. & O. to Cincinnati to travel on the florists' special to Asheville. Those who went were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Weber, son and daughter, G. B. Windler, John Connon, George Waldbart; Mr. J. T. D. Fulmer and daughter, of Des Moines, Iowa, and G. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo. Mr. C. C. Sanders left Monday morning over the L. & N. We hope everybody will have a good time, and we are for Cincinnati for the next convention and hope that Philadelphia will win the bowling match.

J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business has been very quiet during the past week, as much, perhaps, on account of the scarcity of good stock as anything else. But at this period of the year not much is expected, so we are not easily disappointed. Asters, which were our mainstay, are getting scarcer and scarcer every day, and what few are left are proving to be good feed for the aster bug, which is making its appearance by the thousand and whole fields are swept clean in a day's time. Asters from the north are about due, and their arrival will be hailed with joy by the retailer, as there is scarcely anything now with which to make a show.

Carnations that are any way near good are eagerly sought after, and as the supply is very limited, many more could be disposed of to advantage, especially white, which, if good, brings a very good price. Field-grown stock is most plentiful, but its quality is very poor, and it is hard to move.

Geo. B. Windler, Vice-President-elect of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

More roses are to be seen than anything else, but the majority of them are small, short-stemmed stock and move very slowly, except where they are used in funeral work, now and then.

The return of the Cincinnati ball team from its eastern trip furnished occasion for a little work. B. P. Critchell and R. A. Kelly made a large piece some 8 ft. high and T. W. Hardesty also sent a very large and handsome design, both being emblematic of base ball.

The first chrysanthemums of the season arrived in this city Aug. 12th from Mrs. E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind. They were consigned to E. G. Gillett, wholesale florist. The variety was Lady Fitzwygram, white, and though the stems were short, the flowers were of fair size, considering their earliness. They brought $1.00 per dozen. Several shipments have arrived since that time, including some yellow ones. As it is rather unusual to have mums in so early, they were quite a novelty.

A bunch of Graves' new carnation President McKinley, which was sent to this city during the past week, showed up remarkably well. The flowers were of good size, fair length of stem and of a pleasing dark-pink color, which was very brilliant under artificial light.

Then, too, it proved to be a very good keeper.

Items.

A late novelty that is putting some extra money into the retail florists' pockets is the making of hats of raffia. The raffia is sold in lots containing enough for one hat, and in a recent communication from Mrs. J. F. Young, of Dayton, O., she says she has sold over $200 worth of raffia for this purpose.

Everything that was to be heard during the past week had more or less of Asheville mixed up with it. At first it looked as if the Cincinnati delegation would be rather small, but as the time drew near, others made up their minds and at the last moment many were carried away with enthusiasm and hastily packing their grips, left with the florists' special. Monday morning saw strangers coming in from all over, and our reception committees were on hand at all depots to give information. Unfortunately it was raining, so plans had to be changed at the last moment, and instead of the car ride, as had been first planned, all visiting florists were given a dinner at the Grand Hotel at 12:30. Everyone seemed to be in the best of spirits and expected to have a great time at Asheville. The special train left Grand Central depot at 2:30 p. m., and there was a very jolly crowd on board.

Of course, the Cincinnati boys are going to put up the fight of their lives to get the convention to meet in our city next year, and they are leaving prepared for the struggle. Owing to the number of applications for the honor of having the society next year a lively contest is to be expected; so let the best men win. But the Cincinnati delegation will not be whipped till the last vote is counted.

Mr. R. Brown of Sidney, O., manager of the Park Conservatories of that city, was a caller. C. J. Ohmer.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is pretty active; the demand for really nice stock is certainly gratifying. Valley which was rather hard to sell has been in demand at $2 and $3 per 100. Edward Reid has some nice Flora Hills which bring $2 per 100. Ethel Crocker is in short supply; in fact, colored carnations are scarce. The list of roses has been strengthened by Ivory. Eugene Bernheimer is receiving short stemmed flowers of this variety which are very acceptable for designs. Asters have been reinforced by a few fine Semple's which bring $1.50 per 100. If quality don't matter, 25 to 50 cents per 100 will buy them; 75 cents to $1 per 100 buys a good grade.

Announcement.

A meeting of the subscribers to, and all those interested in the proposed Philadelphia flower market, is called for Thursday evening, August 28 at 8 p. m. in the secretary's room, Horticultural Hall, Broad street, below Locust street.

Woodland Ave.

George Anderson is one of those few men who do a number of things well. He grows roses, he bowls well, he shoots well; but the thing that George Anderson does so well that he is in a class by himself is the way he adapts iron to greenhouse work. Even the builders and pipe dealers come to him for points. He puts up supports out of complex fittings, nicely adjusted, and saws out and drills iron for purlins with surprising ease. Just now he is fitting up a new house on the site of an old one and it is worth a visit to any grower. His roses were all planted before the new house was begun, each house a week apart, all growing well. Two are of Liberty, five of Maid, six of Beauty, one each of Bride, Carnot and Kaiserin, and one propagating house. It is very doubtful whether Brunner, for which this place is famous, will be retained. It does well, but it is hard to sell the flowers that will precede the main cut even when perfectly leaved. 'Tis a pity the last of the hybrids is in danger of being crowded out by the hybrid teas.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

The meeting of the growers to consider the plan of a cut flower market was held in the secretary's room at Horticultural Hall on Thursday evening of last week, Joseph Heacock in the chair. Secretary Rust read a letter from Wm. Nicholson explaining the method of the Boston market, which is very successful and has the active support of nearly all the growers who come into Boston. The committee's plan was then laid before the meeting and the stock and stalls offered. Adolph Fahrenwald criticised the plan freely. He thought it was gotten up on too liberal a scale and would frighten the small growers. Charles E. Meehan replied that he did not know of any small growers who could not afford to pay $5 on a share of stock and less than $1 a week for a stall. Frank P. Myers said his firm had no use for a market. W. P. Craig came to the aid of the committee, warmly endorsing the plan. After a recess, devoted to signing the subscription list, it was announced that 100 shares of stock in the proposed company had been taken. On motion of Mr. Craig the committee was instructed to see as many of the growers as possible, learn their views and report at another meeting to be held in the same place on Thursday, August 28 at 8 p. m. The meeting then adjourned. The subscribers to the plan were: Samuel J. Bunting, John Burton, Robert Craig & Son, Thomas Foulds, Joseph Heacock, John Holt, Edwin Lonsdale, Charles E. Meehan, J. W. Young and Charles Zimmer.

Notes.

President Harris led a fine delegation of our best men to Asheville on Monday. You will find them first in debate, first in sport and first in the hearts of their countrymen.

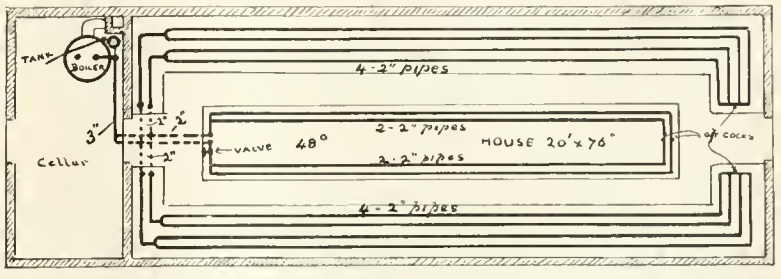
Last reports from Frau Ehret said that he had bidden farewell to the fatherland and would see the sights in London before coming home.

George H. Berke was first in the decorated chair parade at Atlantic City.

William J. Moore will remove to 11 S. 16th street September 1.

Miss M. A. Baker has taken charge of her father's business during his absence in Asheville.

Edward Reid will reach Asheville on Friday after a trip through the south.



Plan of Piping for E. C. For description see page 424.

The unavoidable absence of John Burton is greatly regretted. Phil.

MARKETING OF CUT FLOWERS.

At Wholesale.

By Edgar Sanders.

When I accepted the invitation of Secretary Stewart to say something on the conditions and growth of the business of the wholesale florists of this country, to use a homely expression, I thought it would be as easy as "falling off a log." Of the Chicago end of the efforts I had no doubts, and supposed all I had to do outside of printed authorities, was to apply to the proper parties and the thing was done. In a measure this did not fail me, but the stumbling block I struck was in what is called co-operative concerns. These failed me; and yet, in my humble opinion, this is a field, rightly conducted, which is fraught with much good, especially in cities of moderate size, and as it has proved, even of the largest size, as witness New York; and yet in no way disparaging the value of the regular commission and wholesale dealers as we find them today. You cannot get back to the old ways if you would, nor would a thoughtful business man do so if he could.

The general tendency of the day in the price of florists' products, including staple flowers, like other products of labor average lower and lower. To meet these conditions, greater combinations of capital are invested, more and more is given for the dollar. In the growing and the selling, smaller profits and larger sales are the rule. If the output of the wholesale man has enormously increased, so have his expenses. He could not make his salt did he sell no more at present day prices than he sold in the early stages of the business. Out of his 15 per cent has to come heavy rentals, expensive cold storage appliances, boxes, carefully ice-packed packages, secure against heat and cold, with no charge therefor, large advertising and labor bills, besides no end of sundries he finds absolutely necessary through severe competition.

The old order of things changes, giving place to the new, in the florists' business no less than in others. Time was (and that within my time) when there was but one stage in the entire business; the man with the greenhouse took an order for bouquets, sometimes made them up on speculation at his greenhouse, then delivered them to his customer direct, or peddled, as the case might be. Next came the flower store, first with a greenhouse attached, then simply a store, and the retail florist as we know him today came into existence. As the demand increased those who had no stores began to supply such as had, either with or without greenhouses. Then the "grower" became another division.

For many years, if this store man wanted extra flowers, he had to send to the greenhouses for them, often scattered long distances apart, and a sorry job he found it hunting for his supplies. Presently the grower employed a carrier, who began to make the rounds of the stores with baskets or wagons peddling the flowers he had to sell. Stems of the flowers in early days were no object; the bouquet maker made his own stems so the grower or his agent could carry quite a supply in a pretty small package and make the round of the retail stores with such flowers as he had to sell.

In the course of time some growers began to be noted for choice stock. On the way to the market the retail men began to meet the grower at a half-way house and lighten his load. This, it seems, was notably so with John Henderson's stock at Flushing, N. Y., and "Jem" Johnson, Mr. Henderson's carrier, became a noted person. Other carriers followed Johnson's method of lightening their loads, and the Thirty-fourth street market, in New York, became a regular rendezvous and ultimately a co-operative concern of many growers. In Boston a similar condition of things led to similar results.

But I am anticipating. The increased use of flowers grows apace, and growers make great efforts to meet the demand. The short stemmed flowers give place to the long stemmed; they require better handling and are more burdensome to carry around, to say nothing of the great expense and inconvenience of this system and its peddling nature. Some shrewd men buy outright of these growers and sell to the retailer. Then others hold unsold stock and sell on a commission, but this proves unsatisfactory, and it is not long before the advent of the wholesale florist, dealer or commission man finds his opening. He opens a store, solicits consignments and sells on a commission basis of 15 per cent of what he sells, and we come to the latest factor, into which the word florist is now divided, which, however, at this day, has assumed many forms, as may appear as we get farther along.

Modest as this wholesale man was in the first inception as an entity, he is by no means so now. In the flower trade the grower may be likened to the farmer; the wholesale florist to the board of trade, or counting house, that sets up the machinery to move the crops. The middleman, if you will, and like all middlemen, whether they deserve it or not, sometimes, as the old saying goes, "get more kicks than ha-pence." But you cannot now dispense with his services if you would. The busy wholesale centers, like New York and Chicago particularly, would convince any man of this fact. The wholesaler has two distinct classes to deal with, the local or home buyer, who sees, or may see, the flowers he purchases, and the out-of-town buyer, who depends upon his shipper for the quality of the flowers he orders.

This shipping trade, brought to the system it is now by shrewd business men, cuts a very important figure in the florist industry, and that never could have been handled or worked up in the way it is now without the aid of the middleman. To make a lively wholesale market, it needs abundant growers to draw supplies from, and retail florists doing business within easy distance to look to it for their supplies. Second, a contributory region for shipping purposes, and the less this region is interfered with by other large cities or centers (where other wholesalers will start if they can), the better and faster the trade will grow. In this respect Chicago, as a center now and for years to come, stands without a peer, not excepting New York and its vast contiguous population, that has Boston on its east, and Philadelphia south, almost within the distance that Chicago draws its supplies from. The east looks populous and is so, but is a narrow strip of land on the Atlantic slope compared to the country that Chicago represents, which is actually four-fifths of the people of the United States. Is it any wonder of its phenomenal growth in the flower industry?

What the Wholesaler Stands For.

The wholesale florists, as a body, although numbering all told in all the chief cities of the country at the present time under 100 firms, to be exact, just eighty firms, from the very conditions of that business are more in evidence and make a greater noise in the florists' world, use more strenuous means to find customers and a sale for flowers grown in the country, than all other florists or means combined. In 1896 there were 9,528 firms in divisions as shown by the Florists' Directory of that year in all classes. There are at least 12,000 at the present day and in large cities an army of fakirs or street peddlers and the like, that, in case of gluts, dispose of a large proportion of the cut flowers sent to the market. Many of these, however, are not listed in either city or florists' directory.

How many millions of dollars is the cut flower product of this country? Who knows? Do you? It might be answered that the census report for the year 1900 tells us the total cut flower sales then were $14,175,328.01, figuring it down to a very fine point, surely.

But ten years later, according to the next census, as given us by Dr. B. T. Galloway in the yearbook of agriculture for 1899, and at the New York convention in 1900, the estimate was but $12,500,000. Are these figures estimated on the same basis, representing first cost of the flowers, say, returned to the grower only, or does one represent the profits added of the wholesaler and retailer to the end. Ordinarily, there is a wide discrepancy, in the very nature of the business, between what the grower gets in cold cash for his flowers and what the consumer pays in the final round-up. I will further say, from first to last—there is now an army of people engaged in making profit in selling flowers alone—that they will continue to increase as long as the country grows, and that there is money in it for those who keep abreast of the times. Every country and every city has its own ways of doing business, differing more or less from each other. It is so in the wholesale flower trade. There is but one Covent Garden, coster and his cart, but one Paris flower market, but one New York and one Chicago.

The Wholesale Florist's Birth.

The wholesale florist is but a little more than a quarter of a century old, New York having the honor of starting about the year 1875. Boston and Chicago followed suit three years after, in 1878 or 1879. Farther back than a quarter of a century we have no good data to go by. It was ten years before the S. A. F. this now prosperous society, was organized. The first trade paper was established at the same time, and the American Florists' Directory came three years after that in 1888. From this on we have some tangible records to go by as to the growth of each of the divisions of the florist's calling.

In the year 1890, or twelve years ago, New York was credited with fifteen wholesale florists—Boston with four, Chicago and Philadelphia with three each, Brooklyn, St. Louis, New York, New Jersey, Cincinnati and Milwaukee one each, a total of thirty-one firms. In 1896 the total had increased to half a hundred, while the present showing is eighty firms occupying bona fide stores, and excluding individual growers who have stands and sell their own flowers wholesale with others or who rent the stores as co-operative bodies. In the last decade New York has doubled its number from fifteen to thirty, Chicago has risen from three to sixteen, Philadelphia to nine, Boston seems to have settled down to four; other cities, like Denver, Detroit, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Providence, all going through the early stages of established wholesale, or co-operative, stores.

The ratio of city population to wholesale flower stores is, in New York, one to 114,573; Chicago 106,161; Boston, 112,172; St. Louis, 119,746; Baltimore, with its population of 508,957, gets along with one, and that co-operative. Pittsburg with 352,387 has one. Then comes Minneapolis, with 101,354, and Detroit, with 285,704, this, by the way, being co-operative also. The cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore have the credit of continuing in the old order of things later than any of the larger cities, in that a large part of the best growers are still selling direct by wagon and their own carrier. But there are signs of a change in Philadelphia, I understand, to a new order of things, either in the form of a market, or, perhaps, co-operative, or both.

Each City's Story.

In what I will say on this, let it be understood, I claim no originality, hence expect no suits for plagiarism as was the case of S. E. Gross, of my city, against the doughty French author of "Cyrano." I am no millionaire and could not stand the riffle, so that if sundry persons in different parts of the country find what follows has a sort of familiar sound, it is explainable in my inability to clothe the information in better words than I received it. I make this acknowledgement in place of giving the names of my informants, so he that runs may read.

Greater New York, now Manhattan, the Empire City, then, let me begin with. As I before stated, the year 1875 seems to be settled on as the year when the actual wholesale commission man first made his appearance in New York, or the country, but prior to that, one William Russell, of Jersey City, bought up large quantities of cut flowers from several growers, also receiving consignments from Connecticut, and held the stock for orders in Wilson's flower store, on Fourteenth street, selling directly to the retailer. A year or two later Jas. Hart, still in the businss, began selling camellias for Gabriel Marc of Woodside, L. I., on a 25 per cent commission, afterwards being employed by the largest rose growers in the vicinity to dispose of their stock in a similar manner, thus showing in an unmistakable manner the need of the middleman, who was about to appear. As the next step, it seems, the late Jas. S. Allen started in selling the flowers raised by his father, C. A. Allen, and those of Wm. C. Wilson and others, and who is considered to be the first man to reduce the cut flower commission business in New York city to a systematic basis.

In 1890 we find the following firms designated in the wholesale florist class as soliciting custom: J. K. Allen, 106 W. 24th street; W. S. Allen, 36 E. 23rd street; A. A. Copin, 11 W. 14th street; Copin Bros., 84th avenue and 35th street; Hammond & Hunter, 51 W. 30th street; Jas. Hart, 111 W. 30th street; Edw. C. Horan, 36 W. 29th street; John Muller, 113 W. 30th street; John B. Nugent, Jr., 59 W. 24th street; J. J. Perkins & Co., 43rd street and 6th avenue; Jas. Purdy, 109 W. 41st street; Theo. Roehrs, 153 W. 31st street; Ross & Millang, 1168 Broadway; W. F. Sheridan, 50 W. 30th street, and Thos. Young, Jr., 20 W. 24th street

Of these names, both the Allens and Messrs. Copin, Hammond, Hart, Horan, Perkins, Purdy, Sheridan and Young are among the thirty firms still doing business on the same lines at the present day. In the early days, when old Bon Silene, or "Boston birds," were known from one end of the country to the other, a thousand roses in the market were more thought of than a hundred thousand now, and New York wholesale florists are supposed to turn over stock to the amount of between two and three million dollars, as against $400,000 in 1867.

The center of New York city's wholesale cut flower trade to-day is between Twenty-seventh and Thirty-fourth streets, inclusive, between Broadway and Sixth and Eighth avenues. Of the thirty firms, eleven are now on Twenty-eighth street, eight on Thirtieth, four each on Twenty-sixth and Twenty-ninth, two now as high up as Thirty-fourth and one as low as Twenty-seventh street, a wide distribution when compared with Chicago, with its concentrated wholesale center.

The Co-Operative Plan.

The wholesale florists' business of New York seems mainly done on the consignment or commission basis, and the regulation 15 per cent commission basis, except the co-operative Cut-Flower Exchange that grew out of the restaurant headquarters near the Thirty-fourth street ferry, where the growers' carriers congregated until the year 1892, when a corporation was formed and a building secured in the same locality, stands being rented at the rate of 65 cents per lineal foot to members, 75 cents to others. The average sales are near $100,000, the sales over mostly by eight o'clock in the morning. There are 150 members of the exchange, fifty others who rent stands only, with a number of commission men who do business here in the early hours of the morning. These pay an entrance fee of $15 each, besides the rental. The exchange has paid 10 per cent dividends on the investment.

In 1891 the New York Cut Flower Company was formed by a number of prominent growers selling their own product and some producers on commission at the time of starting. This company was claimed at the time to represent a yearly output of $750,000 worth of cut flowers, and was the first to grade roses as known now into fancy, special, extra No. 1 and No. 2, respectively. Both these co-operative concerns in May, this year, moved into the Coogan building, corner of Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue, and the memorable headquarters so long known at the Thirty-fourth street ferry is left to A. Herrmann and a few others of the Long Island growers, who still stick by the old stand.

Chicago Starts.

Chicago comes next to New York in the time of starting, and in the number of wholesale firms doing business. To J. C. Vaughan, the seedsman, must be given the credit in starting. It had its origin in some of Mr. Vaughan's customers sending in some boxes of flowers for him to try and sell. He, sending one of his young men to the retail stores, found it easy to do so. The news spread, other consignments came and pretty soon O. W. Frese, his young man, was making regular daily visits, first with a basket, then, as supplies increased, with a horse and buggy, when regular rounds were made by this carrier all over the city. In short order it was found that these supplies were the very thing the retail stores were after, that the retailers would go to the stores for them, and a wholesale flower department was added to his business. This was run very successfully until the year 1889, when the late E. H. Hunt bought it out and started on East Lake street. The business is still in existence, with a large supply department added.

In 1884 the Kennicott Brothers opened the first wholesale flower store, in a space eight feet square. This business grew apace, and in 1892 a stock company was formed, the name changed to Kennicott Brothers Company. The Piesers became interested, and the firm now has 7,000 feet of salesroom and is doing one of the largest wholesale commission businesses in the city, if not in the country.

Since Chicago's first start then, it, like its sister cities, has seen lots of changes in the men who essayed the way, as well as the method under which the business is now conducted. Some men and firms in the fourteen years have dropped by the wayside altogether, and some of the men once in the swim are now managers for others in the survival of the fittest. The wholesale district has now centered in and near the corner of Wabash avenue and Randolph street, the Atlas block having no less than eleven of the firms, all with large, fine stores for doing business. This is a great advantage in every way, for both seller and buyer.

Twelve years ago Chicago had four wholesale florists, C. H. Fisk, Kennicott Bros., E. H. Hunt and M. Olson; all there were up to December, 1891. There were noises in the air about this time, and outcries against the commission man by some growers, besides which some of the latter day leviathans of the trade, noted in this city, seemed to want to handle their own flowers and money. It resulted in a stock company called the Chicago Florists' Exchange, which started and opened for business on Lake street, November 15, 1892. It lasted but two years, however, and had no success.

The number of wholesalers at the present day is somewhat smaller than a couple of years ago, but these survivors are stronger than ever and the business harder for new ones to break into. Only a part of the wholesalers are commission houses, pure and simple. They may be divided thus: Bassett & Washburn, Peter Reinberg, George Reinberg, Wietor Bros. and Poehlmann Bros. are grower-dealers, selling their own monster output from at least 2,000,000 feet of glass. J. A. Budlong sells his own and several neighbors' stock. John Muno and Weiland & Risch operate on the same lines. Benthey & Company sell their own cut from New Castle, Indiana, and some on commission. Frank Garland sells mainly his own and the growth of three brothers, with but little on commission. E. C. Amling, E. H. Hunt, A. L. Randall, Kennicott Bros. Co. and McKellar & Winterson are the only bona fide wholesale commission florists among them.

There is another peculiarity worth noting in Chicago and the west. The fast-growing trade in all kinds of florists' supply goods is being handled almost exclusively through these commission houses. That, in eastern cities, we find entirely separate. The enormous amount of wire work still used in the west is almost exclusively made and sold by the wholesale florists. The amount of money turned over by Chicago wholesale florists in a year is probably near one and a half million dollars.

The Boston Story.

P. Welch, about the year 1879, first started, subsequently forming a partnership with his brothers, David and Edward, as Welch Brothers. Shortly after this the Waban Rose Conservatories opened an office in Boston for the sale of their own products and that of any other growers who might consign to them. W. J. Stewart, then a retail florist disposed of this to take charge of the Waban Rose Conservatories' city business. After two years Mr. Stewart purchased this, continuing the same for about ten years, when he sold out to Peck & Sutherland, employes of his. Mr. Peck dying a year after, was succeeded by his partner, Geo. A. Sutherland. Prior to Mr. Stewart's retirement, another employe, N. J. McCarthy, started into business as N. J. McCarthy & Co., who, however, does not claim now to be a commission man. His usual method is to buy outright from growers, taking his chances of selling out at a profit, and he claims to make more money that way than he could on commission sales.

The Boston Flower Growers' Co-operative Association is composed of a number of growers, who, in old times, peddled their flowers from store to store, instead of through commission men. From congregating in a near-by saloon on Tremont street, like the Thirty-fourth street ferry case in New York, was evolved the housing of themselves in a sort of a market. They are now incorporated, grown considerably, pay good dividends, and are an established feature in the Boston trade.

At Philadelphia.

In 1878 W. E. Meehan started, and closed out in 1880. In 1881 Chas. E. Pennock started, was succeeded in 1887 by Samuel S. Pennock, who still continues and does the largest business in this line in the city. His cold storage is very complete and he does a very large shipping business. In 1885 Wm. J. Baker started, making a specialty of carnations, and now does a general business. In 1884 W. J. Stewart, of Boston, opened a branch store in Philadelphia, with N. McCarthy in charge, mostly used for exchange of stock between Philadelphia and Boston; in operation two and a half years. In 1886 La Roche & Stahl started a wholesale branch, confined to a few growers; in 1900 succeeded by Chas. B. Stahl, still in business. In 1889 Fred Ehret opened a store in the up-town district, and is still in business. In 1892 J. De Forest Ely, seedsman, opened a wholesale cut flower department, lasted two years, managed by Edward Reid, who afterward started for himself and still continues. In later years Dumont & Co., Leo Niessen (formerly with S. S. Pennock) and W. J. Moore started in the business. None handle supplies; a few handle plants on commission at the holidays. There is no flower market and around this city all the large growers still sell their own product direct to the retailers, so that the commission man gets very few near-by growers.

At Cincinnati, Ohio.

More than fifty years ago Cincinnati had the proud distinction of being the Queen City of the West, in the gardening line as well as others. It had its horticultural journal, a very vigorous horticultural society, a good horticultural library and fine flower shows for the time. It also had some first-class nurserymen-florists, who did the bulk of the trade in plants and flowers west of the Alleghenies. If Chicago and other smaller cities of the time had a call for fancy floral work, Cincinnati supplied them, as did New York east of the slope.

As time will not allow me to give a general history, I come at once to the wholesale cut flower business, past and present. The first to make the venture was one Frank Church, a well-known figure now in Chicago, who started in 1887, but the business had a short life. In 1887, M. J. McCullough & Sons telegraphed E. G. Gillett, then in Springfield Ohio to come on and take charge of a wholesale cut flower department the firm had opened on a very small scale. At first the only consignor was McFadden, then the largest grower in the city. Afterwards the cuts from C. C. Mitchell and others were added. A few months after this the late H. L. Sunderbruch opened to sell cut flowers at wholesale. At his death the business was sold to Albert, a brother, William Mann and Frank Ball, who ran it for about a year, when a stock company was formed under the name of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., which still does a good business on a regular commission basis for consignors from Ohio and nearby states. E. G. Gillett continued manager for McCullough for five years, but in September, 1896, started for himself in a small room at 113 East Third street. The business has greatly increased, requiring more and more space, with a good outlook for its continuance.

Mr. Gillett is one of the trustees of the Jabez Elliott Flower Market, the only building of its kind in the United States, exclusively used for the sale of plants and flowers. The market is considered a benefit to the trade and does no injury to the retail store business, as those having stands mostly cater to a different class of customers who, market-like, carry away their purchases, and as a general thing, of a cheaper grade than is handled by the regular retail store men.

St. Louis Enters the List.

In November, 1889, John M. Hudson opened the first wholesale cut flower store in St. Louis. Two years after he sold to Andrew Brandenburg, who in six months sold to S. Mount & Co., the "company" being Geo. Ostertag, who moved the store to 109 West Twelfth street.

In 1890 Wm. Ellison and C. A. Kuehn started up at 1122 Pine street, opening a general supply store for florists. In three years they separated. C. A. Kuehn continues at the old stand, doing a fine business. Wm. Ellison opened in 1893. S. Mount & Co. sold out to Fleckenstein & Co., who opened at 1325 Pine street, handling cut flowers exclusively. A year after W. C. Wors opened at 2728 Olive street, to supply the West End florists. In 1894 E. H. Michel opened what was known as the St. Louis Cut Flower Co., at 1620 Olive street. The same year Wm. Ellison gave up, two years after W. C. Wors, leaving the three. Then the Fleckenstein Company sold out to the Mound City folks, composed of Albert Bauer and the Fleckenstein Brothers. W. G. Berning bought the St. Louis Cut Flower Co., handling a limited amount of supplies. There is at the present time in St. Louis C. A. Kuehn, who carries a complete line of supplies and makes all the wire work for florists in the city; H. G. Berning, in a large way, with six regular hands, and F. M. Ellis, who handles a limited quantity of supplies, but is noted for being a shipper of good flowers.

No co-operative stores have ever been tried in St. Louis. Most of the shipments coming to St. Louis come from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Iowa, as well as Missouri.

Milwaukee, Wis.

The inception of the wholesale business in Milwaukee was in 1878 and took the form of an exchange with C. B. Whitnall as president. It was incorporated in 1889, under the name of The Wisconsin Cut Flower Exchange. The stockholders were not confined to home men and it was considered advisable to include the purchase of bulbs, seeds, putty, paints, etc., for the reason it was desired to spread over considerable territory. But it drifted into the ordinary commission business in flowers and florists' sundries in stock for sale. Mr. Whitnall says "the consignors soon got to be specialists and there has been a steady division going on for years, until now the florist is not a grower and the grower not a florist, and the commission house is paid 15 per cent. for taking the 'kicks' of both." The Exchange flourished for a while, became insolvent and in 1897 was sold out to Holton & Hunkel, at the old stand, 457 Milwaukee street, where they are still doing a good commission business. This firm the present year bought out C. B. Whitnall's greenhouse business, who is retiring, so, like other western houses, the firm will join the growing brigade of grower-dealers.

In 1896 Ellis & Pollworth, both old employes of the Exchange, formed a company under the firm name of Ellis & Pollworth and opened a commission house, including supplies, at 137 Oneida avenue, where it continues to the present time. Three years after its start C. C. Pollworth bought out his partner's interest, ran a short time under his own name, finally branching largely into greenhouses in an up-to-date condition of things, and incorporated, thus forming another of the grower-dealers in the wholesale class. Milwaukee wholesale men have always depended largely on consignments from other states.

Baltimore, Md.

The city of Baltimore, although one of the old ones, has no wholesale florists, and is at present looked after in this line by the Florists' Exchange, which is co-operative for mutual benefits. No member can hold more than three shares, entitling the holder to one vote. It was established in 1892, has about forty growers and does a business of from $37,000 to $40,000 a year. A large part of the flowers grown in and about Baltimore are yet delivered to retailers in the old style.

Two efforts have been made to start commission stores, but they could not find business enough to exist.

Detroit, Mich.

This city did not enter the list of wholesale florists until the first year of the twentieth century, when the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange came into existence under the management of Wm. Dilger, but owned by John Breitmeyer's Sons, as a wholesale depot for the sale of their own stock and consignments from outside sources.

At Retail.

By Geo. W. Wienhoeber.

Mr. President, Gentlemen:

Early this spring I went to Milwaukee to see what our close relatives, the nurserymen, were doing at their convention. I learned much and looked wise, but there was one incident which made me feel a little uneasy. One of the older and more successful looking men leisurely got up to address the assembly, in which time my close friend Mr. Sanders had time to whisper me: "Very droll old timer, listen," and I did. He began with an allegory, made classical allusions and I pricked up my ears not to miss anything so good, for it really was. Suddenly and without warning, and I believe he was looking directly at me, he said: "Gentlemen, the worst enemy that the nurseryman has to contend with is the young bugger. Entomologist, bugologist, bugger if you please. His alarms are enervating and we stand aghast as we read of the new insect pests which he has discovered and describes at length in the journals, and which are about to ruin us. We study the matter over and what we discover is the codling-moth or the woolly aphis which you and I have successfully combatted this past score of years." But he continued: "Once in a while this young "bugger" does find a new spot on the butterfly's wing and of course, he helps some."

I am not a "bugger" before "bugologists," but a newly initiated member in the Society of American Florists, and although my position comes dangerously near to that of the young "bugger," I still have courage to say what is to follow, and if I err in the minds of those of experience, please remember the proverbial grain of salt.

Mr. Sanders has said much in his paper on marketing of flowers at wholesale, and now that we are about to consider the marketing of flowers at retail, the first thought that occurs to us is what a vast difference there is between the grower of flowers and the one who finally prepares them for the reception table. The one is close to nature, practical and scientific, and the other unfortunately in many cases is a specialist in the decorating with flowers. To market flowers to him means the catching of people's fancies and stimulating them to buy what he has to sell.

The retail florist deals with people who not alone are demanding fresh and beautiful flowers, but also a "service" which will bring to them the flowers in the most attractive manner. The wholesaler knows nothing about service in the retail sense, and to the retailer it is part of his stock in trade, good will of the business, and it is the factor, the quality of flowers being equal, which gives him rank in the estimation of flower lovers. To some "service" means style, to others, courteous business relations with patterns, or artistic taste, when in fact it includes these and every other feature in the retail trade outside of the paying of dollars for stock and receiving of dollars in return. It is the essential feature in the marketing of flowers at retail, and grows out of the sentiment which the retailer has or must acquire. With florists is it especially true that prices are seemingly arbitrary, since they vary with a hundred conditions and then not simultaneously throughout the trade in all cases? If the prices then are not a fixed standard of comparison, then what is left but the service to determine whether we are a more desirable firm to deal with than our competitor whose prices seem equally fluctuating. The retailer must find a market for his flowers not alone by selling the best flowers at acceptable prices, but he must increase it by winning his patrons' good will and confidence by a disposition which is generous and which leans to the beautiful.

In considering the leading retail florists of the country, we have this generous way of doing business exemplified. They realize the necessity of education in every direction possible, for how are they going to be able to sympathize with a patron's wishes or tastes, if they have but one point of view, that of the business man's. Furthermore the florist is expected to be original and not a copyist and how can he be so if he does not learn to study the beautiful in all he sees, thereby cultivating his tastes and imagination. Let him become interested in the style of architecture of country homes that he may make himself interesting to his client, who wishes to have a border of herbaceous perennials planted so that they may be seen from the loggia on the east side of the house. Let him cultivate a taste for colors by strolling through the art galleries occasionally, where suggestions for color, design, and it is not stretching the point to say that a technique in the handling of flowers may be learned.

The florist has read in the papers recently that at King Edward's coronation, the programs were so designed in color that when the thousands of people in the observation stands used them, they unconsciously became a scheme in the grandly planned decorations. Again, he has eagerly looked over the last number of "Country Life in America," and that article in a spring number of "Atlantic Monthly" on Rhododendrons, did not escape him. But you are thinking that I have gotten off from my subject of the marketing of flowers, and I assure you that I have not. Every time that you get a new impetus of thoughts from the many subjects which stir the imagination you begin to work with renewed interest. These thoughts are the leaven which lightens the sogginess of the purely business life. It assists you personally, and what is a tradesman who does not make himself felt in what he sells or who does not arouse admiration in those with whom he comes in contact? An Italian inscription on a sun dial in a garden which I saw in France, translated, read thus: "Life is short, art is long." How easily this can be remembered, and what a consolation it is.

The florists of today and those of tomorrow will widen their horizon if they wish to anticipate their customer's wishes. Those who wait until customers force ideas onto them will soon find themselves forsaken as dead weight. Florists must be initiative and not content to follow. And in what field could a man find a better chance to derive pleasure and enjoyment than in the florist business. He has business relations with people of most cultivated tastes and they are willing to award his good taste with generous support and appreciation if he is deserving. In many cases they make the business almost ideal by waiving money considerations entirely. Flowers should be associated with all that is beautiful, and what a pleasure it is to establish a business which will not mar the illusion.

Essentially the retailer of flowers is the one who distributes them for final use. He is the fakir surrounded by his dense masses of flowers which brighten the streets in spring, or he is the established florist of undisputed reputation whose establishment we have known for the past twenty years. Both do a legitimate business, both sell commodities, have receipts and expenditures and both have profits. They are the extremes of a trade which disposes of vast quantities of flowers daily. How interesting these extremes are, and what a vast number of enterprises rank between them.

I have said that the fakir does a legitimate business but why then are city ordinances passed periodically to prevent him from hawking his wares?

It is because these ordinances do not reflect the true fakir question. These ordinances state under what conditions flowers may be sold, but in no case do they touch the essential point, that of selling flowers at prices which the florists believe are damagingly low. After the fakir has complied with the city ordinance, he is governed by the same business principles as is any other tradesman, and he should be allowed in trade competition unmolested. The store man sees him and he ought to reason philosophically this way: Is it possible that florists should have ever considered this poor fellow seriously in their business competitions by their trying to interfere with his earning a livelihood. Is it possible that we envy him of a cent of what he has earned by his persistent efforts of hailing every passer by with a bunch of flowers. Think of it! He makes many persons happy in a small way and he is able to gratify many wishes with his flowers for a penny.

We florists are not always generous. The very fact that the fakir disposes of enormous quantities of flowers is proof of his standing in the community. On a Saturday afternoon, what a pleasure it is to see the streets voluntarily decorated with bright flowers which make us forget that we are rushing along and know not why. For a moment we think of the Cafe de la Paix in Paris, where we buy nosegays from the flower girls and straightway our appetite is better. Be generous with the fakir for he never was your competitor and although alarmist florists talk of over production of flowers due to the fakir trade, do not believe that that is significant, because every time that a trade exigency arises business relations soon solve the problem.

At the other extreme is the distributor of flowers, who is successful, up-to-date and progressive, the retail florist. His prices are an afterthought, and his aim is to cultivate business integrity and to keep the best flowers only, which he presents attractively. As a business man he instils courtesy into his assistants and is generous in all his dealings. His transactions are principally with women, and he learns that to count pennies is poor economy. In case of mistakes, he makes every endeavor to correct them. If in any way he has been at fault or his customer thinks that he has, he graciously makes amends. Nor is he hereby humbling himself, but on the contrary he is liberal. We inspire in others the sentiments which we ourselves feel, or in other words, your customer won't be liberal if you are short-sighted, obstinate and ungenerous. Consider each customer's patronage as capital invested, which annually pays you interest, and you will guard this customer's wishes just as jealously as a cash investment. The florist is always willing to please, no matter how exclusive his position is, for he is not in business this year alone but for many more to come.

The practical handling of flowers for retail distribution has its many points for consideration. The keeping of stock is governed by local conditions. Flowers may be put aside from which orders are filled or they may at the same time become part of a display in a window or refrigerator. At all events they must receive the very best of care, although often in the commission houses they have received more injury than you can repair. In such establishments, where the trade comes largely from regular customers, it is well to get them accustomed to order their flowers in advance where it is possible. This will enable you to put their orders aside or you can fill them directly from the stock as it comes in, thus obviating unnecessary handling. This class of trade is very desirable, for its demands may be calculated quite definitely, and the handling of expensive flowers ceases to be a source of speculation.

The delivering of flowers is as important as is the selling them in the first place. If you send a special messenger, let him be intelligent and neat. Attire him as trade demands and have him reflect the character of your business until the flowers are finally at their destination. Florists' delivery wagons should be made attractive by their excellence in design and workmanship and not flashy so as to suggest vulgarity. Have good horses and plain harnesses.

Think of the beauty of the flowers which you are sending and the people who are to receive them, and the wagons which might be used to advertise chewing gum will seem cheap and tawdry. People on receiving flowers should feel that they are truly beautiful, so don't put the flowers to shame with rococo surroundings.

The presentation and arrangement of flowers at retail is an art in itself and the florist who does not employ the best talent possible will soon discover his error. People entering the florist's store expect to be refreshed and enthused for the few minutes that they are in it by the artistic display of flowers and plants. They expect to see the surroundings executed in the best possible taste. The decorations must be artistic and the furniture and wares must be of good design and color. All details will be noticed, even the stationery on the writing table. Your appointments should not be costly and elegant, but well chosen and good.

People of today do not want extravagantly elaborated stores, but want to go to a florist "shop." To them a shop is a place where the business is purely a specialty in its line, in distinction from the department store, and the shop's chief advertisement is good taste and originality. They feel that their orders are receiving personal care and they like to become acquainted with the clerks and the proprietor so that they may confidentially tell them how they may improve the business in this or that way. The shop accordingly becomes rather a small place to our notion; but as the underlying ideas are so good, let each customer think of it in this way and try to win their confidences. These people travel much, see much and their ideas may in many cases be of real value to you. But there are other branches in the business which you must impress upon them in a professional way. As a decorator your work has a professional merit, and in gaining a reputation for laying out city gardens and courts you become an Ornamental Horticulturist.

Make others feel the enthusiasm which you have in your business, and especially those who work for you. Make them feel some of your energy so that they will feel that they are associated with a progressive house. Your men should also have ideas so that your daily criticism won't be necessary. Give your reliable men an interest in the business as most business houses today do. People will soon notice this spirit which is characteristic of your business and their interest will tell others that roses coming from your place "are so much fresher than those from elsewhere." They will not challenge the way you do things as regards correctness. Let them feel that you are unrivaled and don't let any suspicions arise to the contrary.

Consistency is another factor in presenting your flowers. Fix a standard for your business and then live up to it, not in one branch alone, but throughout, so that your reliability won't be doubted in any part of your work. An expensively engraved bill-head sent out from your office will not offset a package carelessly put up. It were better to have less elaborate engraving and a better shipping clerk. Don't astonish people with extremes of lavishness or of thrift.

Just a word about advertising, before I conclude. As a member of the widespread commercial system in the United States, in this year of our Lord, 1902, I am forced to say, advertise. But first take an invoice of your wares, facilities, experience and ideas and what remains of these as salable commodities advertise before the community. Be honest and advertise only such things which you really have. Study all the text books on psychology for methods with which you can impress the human mind, but first have something and then draw attention to it honestly.

The florist should avoid broadcast advertising. Don't destroy the sweeter associations with which flowers are generally sent by undue publicity. There are so many ways of getting up winning advertisements that it is unfortunate that any of the commoner ways should be used. The florist has a dignified business, so let his advertising appear accordingly. Many mistake eccentricity and bizarreness for originality and that which is artistic.

The mailing list should rather be small than large. Each person on the list should feel that he is personally in touch with the business and not one of ten thousand. You make him feel this by sending such matter only as is carefully gotten up. By having a small list, you can afford to raise the standard of your advertising, your paper is better and your engravings used are the best and are faultlessly printed. The best is good enough. If your competitor "gets out" a calendar lithographed in fourteen colors, don't send one out in sixteen colors, but improve on his "ad" by distributing something more original. Have you ever thought how backneyed the custom of sending calendars on the first of January has become?

In the business in which I am associated I have tried to make the advertising feature seem as an undercurrent, not to be felt at once, but gradually. First of all our building, which is devoted entirely to the business, is rather quaint in design and is built of an English brick. Golden arbor-vitae in the window boxes in winter and dwarfed begonias and ivies in summer help to give it a distinctive air. Signs have been avoided and commercial earmarks are scarcely to be seen. The store is treated in a colonial tone, and the show rooms for pottery and other wares are in Flemish oak and are treated vigorously. In the photographic studio photographs of creditable work and those for illustrative purposes are made. From the photographs and from original sketches printing plates are made for folders and attractive sheets which we print in our print shop. By doing our own printing we are able to carry out the feeling which we are trying to establish in other branches of the business. We are not endeavoring to be aggressive in our advertising, but employing such means which will have a stimulating effect, so to speak.

To close, I wish to say that although I have taken liberties with the subject for discussion, I have had but one point in view, and that is the broadness of the retail florist's field. The details are only added to carry out certain lines of thought. I argue that the florist's market grows in proportion as his horizon of ideas and ambitions enlarges. So if by any means his imagination is brightened, his ideas increased, or his executive ability strengthened, the market will take care of itself. Practical details I have purposely avoided.

THE LAWSON CARNATION.

The illustration is from a photograph taken July 24. They were planted last summer about August 10, and began flowering middle of October. In December, January and February they were a cure for the blues. In March and April they were a little off crop because almost every shoot, either side shoot or leading shoot, had been pulled off for a cutting in February. Since middle of May they have been as you see them. Off 800 plants we get 200 fine flowers every morning, but they will soon have to go the way of all flesh and grass. Was there ever such a carnation! Here it is, no higher than it was in January. No red spider or any other trouble; and it has had no attention in the way of tying since last December. I hope the white Lawson will soon make its appearance on the market. W. S.

JOLIET, ILL.

A visit to the establishment of The J. D. Thompson Carnation Company revealed the fact that field carnations have done well there this season, there being little of the damage from surplus rains so notable around Chicago. The fields all had a gentle slope, and the water drained away without doing damage. In fact, many of the plants are rather above the usual quality at this date. Practically all the plants are now housed.

The most interesting feature was the large new house planted almost wholly with the new Enchantress. The fine growth the plants made in the field certainly speaks well for the variety. There were no better plants on the place, and we understand the plants were quite small when placed in the field last spring. Mr. Thompson says that when he saw what a splendid growth it made and how freely it was blooming during a visit to Mr. Fisher's place he could not resist the temptation to bid for the stock, even though the price was so high.

The new house containing this stock is 30x300, and has an iron frame of original design. There are no rafters, the cast-iron posts supporting a cast-iron plate designed for the house. The two purlins are of angle iron attached to the iron pipe posts by a specially made clip. The two lower purlins are connected at intervals by tie rods with turn buckles in the centers, and the two upper ones are fastened together by a short section of iron pipe. The supports for the heating pipes on the cast-iron posts are so arranged that they can be easily moved up or down and absolute trueness in the grade of the pipes maintained. The ventilation is continuous and on both sides of the ridge. The ventilator sections are spliced together so as to form practically three long ventilators of 100 feet each on each side of the ridge. The header is notched in only through the heads of the sash bars and not sunk level. It is believed that this will do away with any likelihood of drip. The ventilators open from the header and not from the ridge.

Of the 18,000 plants of Enchantress on the place 12,000 are for stock and 6,000 for blooming. In addition to this novelty the stock for blooming this season consists of 8,000 Lawson, 4,000 each of Crane and Governor Wolcott, 3,000 Lorna, 2,000 Apollo, 1,500 each of Estelle, White Cloud and Guardian Angel, 1,000 each of Marquis, Joost, Prosperity, Roosevelt, Queen Louise, Golden Beauty and Morning Glory, and 500 each of Harry Fenn, Stella, Viola Allen, Bradt, Nelson Fisher (a new pink a shade darker than Lawson) and Mrs. Patten (a new variegated). The two last named are varieties of Peter Fisher's that are not yet disseminated.

The foreman is Mr. J. E. Jensen, who was for a number of years with Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and he certainly has the stock in good shape.

The propagating house benches all have brick bottoms, it having been demonstrated that this bottom assures an evener degree of bottom heat and moisture.

The heating apparatus for the establishment is very effectively installed, both boilers and piping being supplied by the Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago. At the time of our visit a new steam gauge was being put in by Mr. C. W. Jones, the heating engineer for the above firm. It has an attachment invented by him which can be adjusted so that when the steam pressure falls below a certain number of pounds an electric current is connected which rings a bell in the room of the foreman until the pressure is raised above that point. It is certainly an excellent precaution and a good safeguard against the failings of firemen who sometimes suffer from sunstroke during the darkest hours.

A very great convenience is a switch track that enables them to unload their coal direct from the car to boiler house. They use the Red Jacket, a West Virginia coal that Mr. Thompson considers much the best and most economical of any fuel he has used. It is now $3.25 a ton, but gives much better value in results than cheaper coals.

The manure tank is placed at an elevation back of the boiler house and is fitted with steam pipes that enable them to keep the liquid at 70 degrees for 24 hours while fermenting. A straw partition in the center filters it so that the clear liquid can be drawn off on the other side when ready.

At the Joliet penitentiary we found Head Gardener Wilson Tiplady getting plump in flesh and strong in humor. The grounds look well and show that his increase in avoirdupois does not interfere with his keeping an eagle eye on the men assigned to his department. He has some odd material to work with. All are inmates of the institution, and few have ever had any experience in floriculture, but he finds them willing to learn, and the stock in his charge shows it.

Near the penitentiary is a large steel mill and the smoke from this has been a sufficient drawback to keep Mr. Tiplady from tipping the scales at too high a figure. The glass at the houses has to be washed with dilute muriatic acid several times a season to clean it from the greasy substance deposited by the smoke. Under the circumstances it is remarkable that the stock, both outside and in, makes such a fine appearance.

AUSTIN, MINN.

A Peculiar Accident.

The illustration on page 397 shows the calamity which befell A. N. Kinsman, of Austin, Minn. Mr. Kinsman had just completed three new houses and was about to place his residence, which he had moved from another part of the city, in position, and while the same was resting on jack-screws preparatory to putting in new foundations, it suddenly careened and dropped about eight feet at the rear end. It fell somewhat toward the greenhouses, which, being mostly of iron construction, were badly jarred from end to end. The front house, as shown in illustration, is 125 feet long, and was almost completely demolished. The entire glass was broken and the framework was thrown so badly out of plumb that it necessitated complete rebuilding. Some members of the family were in the house, but fortunately all escaped without injury. Little plaster was left intact after the fall. C. C. P.

CALIFORNIA PRIVET FOR SCREENS.

"Ivera" in Review Aug. 7 says: "Thousands upon thousands of California privet are being used for partition screens. It makes a cheap, rapid and most effective screen. More of it might be used thus all over the country, particularly out West."

I have grown this plant in the latitude of central Illinois for twenty years or more, and have never known a plant, screen or hedge of it to stand two consecutive winters without being injured by the cold beyond repair, unless very well protected by buildings or some thorough protection. The plant will not stand the winters about St. Louis or Kansas City. I know this is one of the best ornamental hedge plants near the Atlantic coast, from Boston to Jacksonville, but it will not stand the climate of the interior.

Spiræa Van Houttei is a most admirable plant for a screen, or low hedge, being hardy, tenacious of life, neat in habit, most beautiful in bloom, and in every way desirable. The best ornamental hedge plant I have ever seen.

BOSTON.

An old classic relates how a rooster approached the nest occupied by his sitting mate, stood on his right leg, closed his left eye and asked her what she expected to hatch out of a brick-bat, two rusty nails and an old door knob. She promptly replied "A brick block, old man! You go right on digging worms!" Now the business here gives me proportionately just about as much material to work with as the old hen had, but her hopefulness exceeds mine. I fear I can not hatch up much of a structure. However, goods are not so plentiful and I am not so sure that customers are either. One thing I notice concerning the customer. If he buys a few cents worth of material and really offers to pay for it at all, he proffers a big bill that he has been saving up ever since last spring, and a small syndicate has to be found to break it. The decrease in material has not been so marked that prices have advanced upon anything, as they still remain very low. Two or three rose growers have begun cutting from new bushes, and one, at least, upon a second crop, and later varieties of asters are becoming more numerous. It is about time for the sweet pea crop to go out of fashion, but no movement that way is noticeable.

The Waban Roses played base ball with a picked nine of Whitinsville florists and beat them severely, and claim they will do the same unto the Brimstone Corners from Park street upon the next set-to, coming off in a few weeks.

Pritchard's salesman, Denning, is off to the White Mountains for a couple of weeks.

F. W. Fletcher is back from a visit of some length to Nantucket with a quaint story of that quaint old place, and Wm. Anderson returns from Halifax even more enthusiastic over the beauties of that place, especially its public garden.

Dan Iliffe is mourning the loss of his seven-months old baby, and how sincerely only those who have sustained a similar loss can realize.

W. H. Elliott will very soon begin to move Beauties into that 800x54 house of his up on the slant of the Madbuy Hills. Another week is now the limit set.

F. H. Mead's host of friends are delighted to see him looking so extremely well in contrast to his wan appearance of a very few years ago. We now hope he will be able to disseminate his line of floral supplies during the greater part of the century.

Weather Octoberish.

J. S. Manter.

COAL AND COKE.

Is there any economy in using gas-house coke at 6 or 7 cents a bushel over egg hard coal at $7.50 a ton?

How long could I leave a coke fire on a cold night? I have heard that coke burns out the grate bars faster than coal. Is that so? G. A. S.

Replying to G. A. S., at the price named coke would be certainly cheaper to use than coal, the relative value of the two as a fuel being very nearly pound for pound, provided the coke is absolutely dry. It will, however, be necessary to fire very frequently with coke, which will necessitate the employment of a night foreman.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

Gleufield, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I take pleasure in expressing satisfaction in using your Zinc Glazing Points. They have outlasted all others used, therefore are better and cheaper. Their merit should result in extended sales. Sincerely yours,
THEO. F. BECKERT, Florist.

Berwick, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Enclosed please find M. O. for more Zinc Points, the same as others sent. They are decidedly the best we ever used.
Respectfully,
JOHN A. SMITHERS & SONS, Florists.

Bellevue, Pa.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used five different kinds in the past 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points to the last two years, and I am perfectly satisfied with them.
Yours truly, F. BURKI.

Cleveland, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—In our 25 years' experience with glazing points of all kinds, I can say your zinc points are the best to date.
CHAS. H. WILSON,
Mgr. for Grant-Wilson Floral Co.

Youngstown, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—Please find enclosed check for $3.50, for which send me 10 lbs. more of your Zinc Points. To my way of thinking, too much cannot be said in their favor.
Yours truly, E. HIPPARD.

Richmond, Va.

Chas. T. Siebert:—We have used the 20 lbs. of Zinc Glazing Points, and we think they are the best things we have ever used for glass. If we need any more we will order from you.
Yours very truly,
W. A. HAMMOND, Florist.

Bloomington, Ill.

Chas. T. Siebert:—The Zinc Glazing Points we received from you last season have given excellent satisfaction, as is attested by the order we here send you. Do not think we have ever used anything for the purpose that has given such good satisfaction. We wish you success.
PHOENIX NURSERY CO.

Lockland, Ohio.

Chas. T. Siebert:—I must say the Zinc Points have given great satisfaction. I have over 100 lbs. on my houses, and feel justified in stating that they are the best point on the market.
Yours respectfully,

Eucharis Grandiflora.

We have closed our retail cut-flower department and will dispose of our stock of the above fine money-maker to the florists who want a fine white flower for making up floral work, bridal bouquets and anything where a lasting, white, delicate flower is wanted. Have grown these for over 20 years and have cut thousands of blooms yearly. Will give 3 to 5 crops of bloom each season and with proper handling can be had at any season of the year. Have about 2000 bulbs in clumps and single. They need very little care and will grow in any shady, moist, warm corner.

Sample blooms will be sent to all who may order, and our plan of growing them will accompany all orders.

LARGE CLUMPS. 15 to 20 Bulbs, $2.50 each.

MACON, GA.

At the annual meeting of the Georgia State Horticultural Society the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, P. J. Berckmans, elected for the twenty-seventh time; secretary, W. M. Scott, of the board of entomology; treasurer, L. A. Berckmans, of Augusta. The vice-presidents were chosen as last year, one from each Congressional district. They were re-elected.

The meeting can be said to have reached the following conclusions:

Pecan growing is an untried industry, and no one in the horticultural convention knows anybody who has ever made a dollar out of the business in Georgia.

The Sneed and Triumph peaches are back numbers, and are no longer good for market.

Bordeaux mixture is found to be the most efficacious remedy for brown rot in peaches. Three to four sprayings during winter and spring are found to be best.

There is great need of encouraging forestry, and the preservation of thrifty growing trees in woodland, protecting the young switches from fire.

Irrigation is very profitable where it can be practiced without too much expense. This applies to truckers and small farms, but not to peach orchards. They do better on sandy soil than on clay lands.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

A subscriber writes that he was poisoned by Primula obconica last May, and that it has spread from his wrists to his face, forehead and chin, and is now spreading to his arms and legs, from knees to ankles. He says he suffers untold misery from the itching and burning, and that the remedies prescribed by his doctor and others have proved ineffective. He would like to hear from any brother florist who has discovered a remedy for poisoning by this primula.

As we understand it, the "poisoning" is due to the entrance into the skin of the fine, sharp hairs that so freely clothe the leaves and stems of this plant, but why it should spread (if the theory is correct) we cannot understand. Some people seem to be very susceptible to unpleasant results from handling this primula, while others seem to be perfectly immune. If any of our readers can throw any light on the matter or suggest a remedy for the sufferer above noted we shall be glad to hear from them.

HEATING.

How many runs of 2-inch pipe will it take to heat my greenhouse, 75 ft. long, 17 ft. 4 inches wide inside of walls? Walls are concrete; outside wall is 10 inches thick; inside wall 18 inches thick (between two greenhouses); glass on side 16x20; one-half pitch; 12½ ft. to ridge. Night temperature to be 65 degrees.

H. S. B.

Replying to the inquiry of H. S. B., he will require thirteen lines of 2-in. pipe to maintain a temperature of 65 degrees in the greenhouse he describes, using hot water system. The best distribution would be five lines under the outer bench and four each under the center and inner bench.

Lily of the Valley
From COLD STORAGE...

Cold Storage Valley should be used considerably more, particularly for Thanksgiving, Xmas, New Year and January. At that time even the very best selected newly imported pips don't bring any foliage, come uneven and hardly pay; very often they turn out a total failure, even with the best attention and very best arrangements.

Cold Storage Valley bring flowers and foliage without much trouble and without special arrangements. Care should be taken to grow them as cool as possible without bottom heat.

My stock is very fine this year and promises to give good results.

Montgomery, Ala.—W. B. Paterson is putting the finishing touches on three houses, each 22x150, built this season. His two houses of mums and three of roses are doing finely. Mr. Paterson will soon begin to house 10,000 carnations. Owing to the dry season (hardly any rain since April) carnation plants in the field are smaller than usual, but they are very healthy. There is no sign of stem-rot; out of 14,000 plants he has not lost 50.

Bristol, Pa. The seed houses of D. Landreth & Sons were burned out Aug. 14. The fire broke out in the carriage house in the rear of Burnet Landreth's residence at Bloomsdale, Pa. The flames quickly spread to the adjoining buildings, containing seed-packing machines, printing office and general office of the firm. The carriage house was burned to the ground and the packing house completely gutted, leaving but the standing walls. The loss will reach about $40,000, covered by insurance. Much of the contents of the buildings was saved.

500,000 PANSIES!

Finest Market Strain Grown.

Awarded First Class Certificate of Merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Attention is Called

TO THESE FACTS:

This strain is the result of over twenty years careful selection.

The seed was saved this year from over 12,000 plants, the finest among the 500,000 flowered and sold last spring.

Particular attention is always paid to form and substance as well as size and color. The colors will be found very evenly proportioned, including rich selfs, brilliant variegations and many novel shades—no dull mixed sorts.

Our pansies have for many years held the highest reputation in the Boston and Eastern New England markets and we confidently believe will be found the most satisfactory strain ever offered for florists' use.

Two of our customers write us as follows:

BOSTON, MASS.

MR. I. E. COBURN, Dear Sir:—The pansies you have supplied us with have been the means of largely increasing the demand for these plants. The colors, size and form have been the admiration of all our patrons who have had them.

Yours truly, SCHLEGEL & FOTTLER CO., Seedsmen, 26 South Market Street.

BOSTON, MASS.

MR. I. E. COBURN: — We have handled several thousand baskets of your pansies for the past four years and find them superior in size, color and variety to any grown in this section.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Carnations in this section have suffered somewhat by excessive rains, but not as badly as in the West.

John Coombs is busy housing this week. His Lawson has stood the test better than any other variety, Joost dying out the worst.

Mrs. Goodwin of Whiting street has a fine lot of plants, especially Floriana, Lawson and Queen Louise. Her violets are in the pink of condition as usual.

Mr. Whiting is rebuilding a number of houses this summer and keeping up to date in spite of his age.

George S. Osborn is all through housing carnations, having commenced very early, July 7. Lawson, Cressbrook, Queen Louise, Floriana, Marquis, Nelson, Estelle, Crane and others look promising. Murphy's White is being tried here, and is certainly a rapid grower; its progress will be watched with interest.

J. F. Coombs went with the Knights of Pythias on their trip to California.

James Young reports heavy loss on carnations from stem-rot.

"QUICK AS A WINK."

A sample of the "Quick-as-a-Wink" hose coupling sent us by the W. J. Clark Company, Salem, O., proved that this simple device is a great saver of time and labor. With this coupling a section of hose can be attached to the water pipe in a small fraction of the time it takes to use the usual screw coupling. As florists are continually making and breaking conplings in their work this little invention is of special interest to them. Time is money these days, and every inexpensive device for the saving of time must be employed.

CINDERS FOR PROPAGATING.

Replying to an inquiry Mr. Vesey writes that the cinders he used in his propagating bed were from soft coal. The roots made are more stiff and wiry than those made in sand. He has used the finely sifted cinders for four successive batches of cuttings, and has never seen any indications of fungus, and does not look for any unless the drainage of the bench should become defective.

West Pullman, Ill. C. C. Hess will build three greenhouses 18x300 feet each on his market gardening farm on the Calumet river. Frank Engle has the contract.

The Greatest Victory Yet.

THE PIERSON FERN, NEPHROLEPIS PIERSONI,

Awarded S. A. F. GOLD MEDAL, ASHEVILLE CONVENTION, August 20th, 1902.

READ WHAT THE JUDGES SAY:

"The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y. A group of Nephrolepis Piersoni. Many magnificent specimens were staged in various sizes, both in pots and pans. The committee considers this the finest decorative fern introduced in recent years. Among Nephrolepis it is what Farleyense is among Adiantum. The committee strongly recommend that it be awarded the gold medal."

EXPRESS PACKAGES.

We have received a report from a California subscriber which indicates that some Eastern shippers are very careless in the way they pack shipments of plants for the Pacific coast. The subscriber mentioned ordered plants amounting to only $2.50 and received the plants in a box built of two thicknesses of boards, upon which the express charges were $2.88. The box was one-third full, the rest of the space being filled with paper for stuffing. After the plants were taken out the box and packing material were found to weigh twelve and one-half pounds, while the weight of the whole package was only twenty pounds. In other words, the recipient of this package paid express charges on twelve pounds of useless matter, and even at this part of the plants were wrapped in paper only and were practically all dead when received.

It is possible that this package was put up by a careless employe, but it certainly should not have been permitted to go out by the firm receiving the order. As a result of this transaction, the California subscriber will naturally feel unsafe in ever again ordering any plants from the Eastern shipper mentioned, and the possibility of making him a permanent customer has been killed. Shippers should not fail to see that their customers are treated just as they themselves would like to be treated when ordering plants.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

CALL.

Organization of the American Paeony Society.

The undersigned, having combined to organize a society for the purpose of furthering the knowledge and interest in the paeony, cordially invite all those interested in the flower to join in said organization. The initiation fee will be $5; the annual dues $3. The general scheme of the organization will be upon the same lines as the American Carnation Society, which has been such a signal success, and which has produced a phenomenal improvement in the carnation flower. The Paeony Society will have ample financial backing and its success is amply assured. Those wishing to join may become charter members by remitting $5 membership fee to Alex. Wallace, temporary secretary and treasurer, Box 1697, New York City.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

With the longer and cooler nights greenfly will be sure to make its appearance.

Whilst this is one of the most annoying and persistent enemies of the rose grower, it is one of the easiest to destroy and hold in check, and anyone who has studied its habits and the various methods of eradicating it has no need to suffer from its ravages. Tobacco in its various forms is the most effective remedy known. For roses which are in bud or bloom vaporizing and smoking are the safest and most effective.

To derive the greatest benefit from fumigating it should be done in the morning before sunrise, immediately after the morning's cut is taken. At that time the glass is cool, the soil in the benches comparatively dry and evaporation is at a minimum, which allows the vapor or smoke to settle nearer the soil and to cling closer to the leaves and stems than if performed in the evening. By keeping the ventilators closed for twenty minutes or half an hour the fumes will have done their work, when syringing can be proceeded with. The ventilation required during the day will dissipate the odor of the tobacco before it is time to take the evening cut.

Fumigating, when done in the evening, is apt to leave a disagreeable, stale smell on the morning cut, which is very perceptible after the flowers have been packed and shipped a distance. The water from the syringe also adheres more tenaciously to the leaves and gives them a wet and bedraggled appearance, which is absent after a morning fumigation.

A system of periodical fumigating should also be adopted and strictly adhered to, once a week being sufficient to keep them in subjection.

If fumigating is only done when the fly becomes so numerous as to injure the buds the amount required to effect a remedy will be apt to spoil the luster of the petals. The coloring of such varieties as Meteors, Beauties and Bridesmaids will also lose its intensity.

THE HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The annual report of the officers of the Florists' Hail Association of America shows that on the first day of August, 1902, the 1,098 members comprising the Florists' Hail Association of America insured an aggregate of 16,376,507 square feet of glass, subdivided as follows: Single thick, 3,643,463 square feet; double thick, 8,670,634 square feet; single thick, extra one-half, 361,069 square feet; double thick, extra one-half, 830,993 square feet; single thick, extra whole insurance, 983,769 square feet; double thick, extra whole insurance, 2,482,610 square feet.

The receipts for the year ending August 1, 1902, have been: From twelfth assessment, $9,498.77; from new business, as per treasurer's report, $2,545.84; from interest on investments, $406; from reinsurance of glass broken by hail, $104.53; from repayment of loan, $400. Total receipts for the year, $12,955.14.

The treasurer has paid $8,483.25 for losses during the year; for expenses, $1,629.49; for investment on account of emergency fund, $6,400, making a total of $16,512.74.

The cash balance on hand at the close of the year is $6,116, of which $2,307.15 belongs to the reserve fund, and leaving $3,808.85 available for use in the emergency fund. To this should be added $6,000, which has been invested upon call, making a total of $9,808.85 for the payment of losses.

The reserve fund of the Florists' Hail Association now consists of $7,600, invested as per treasurer's report, and $2,307.15 cash in hand, making the total reserve fund August 1, 1902, $9,907.15.

Glass belonging to members to the extent of 86,261 square feet of single thick and 32,196 square feet of double thick was broken by hail during the past year and paid for by the Florists' Hail Association.

Since the first day of June, 1887, the Florists' Hail Association has paid over 600 losses involving an expenditure of about $53,000.

If you want protection from loss by hail send to John G. Esler, secretary, Saddle River, N. J., for rates, etc.

EXTRA CHOICE

Lilium Harrisii

(Bermuda Easter Lily.)

We have received from one of the most careful growers in Bermuda a grand lot of Bulbs. He writes us regarding the same as follows:

"I believe these Bulbs to be the very best stock leaving Bermuda this or any previous season, perfectly free from disease, no Longiflorum mixed with them and worth 50 per cent. more to the growers than nine-tenths of the stock leaving the colony this season."

The appearance of the Bulbs fully warrant the above strong statement. We offer them as under:

	Per 100	Per Case	Per 1000
5 to 7-inch, packed 400 in a case.....	$ 4 75	$18 00	$ 45 00
7 to 9 " " 200 "	11 00	20 00	100.00
9 to 11 " " 100 "	20 00	20.00	90.00

As the lot is not very large it would be well to order early.

WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS.

We have a good supply of the popular 12 to 15 centimeter Bulbs (packed 2100 to the case), price $24.00 per 1000. This price will be advanced shortly; save the difference by ordering now.

Other bulbs now ready—Pink and Blue Roman Hyacinths, White Italian Hyacinths, Freesias, Alliums, Narcissus Paper White, etc., etc.

Meeting of Canadian Horticultural Society.

The fifth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, which will be held in the city of Hamilton on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 3 and 4, will show a marked advancement over any of its predecessors. From its near proximity to Buffalo and other American cities, there is likely to be a good sprinkling of those who have not found it convenient to attend the S. A. F. meeting at Asheville.

The flower fete gotten up by the Hamilton Horticultural Society and Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be an innovation that cannot but have a beneficial influence.

The trade exhibit, too, under the able management of Mr. C. M. Webster, is an assured success. Already space has been applied for by a large number of firms. Several United States firms, who are not exhibiting at Asheville, have applied for space. Customs arrangements for the free entry of goods for exhibition have been made. The program has been arranged to cover a range of subjects that will give ample scope for instructive discussion.

An effort will be made to establish a trade paper under the patronage of the association, and last, but not least, the value of the social side is one that cannot be estimated too highly. The hospitality of the Hamilton boys is well known, and we are assured of a very pleasant time. One of the features will be a trolley ride through the Niagara fruit district to Winona and Grimsby; another to the mountain, the view from which is one of the best in Canada. From there can be seen the Niagara fruit district lying in the valley, with Lake Ontario on the one side and the mountain range on the other, the numerous rail and electric roads winding in and out, and at the foot of the mountain lies the city of Hamilton, bordered by the Burlington bay.

As the convention is being held at the same time as the Toronto fair there will be cheap rates on all railways. Single fare good for ten days and special rates on several days; about two-thirds single fare. Those attending should make inquiry from nearest agent, and those at a distance should buy a return ticket to Toronto and then go either by rail or boat to Hamilton.

The entertainment committee has provided an excellent program, and all who attend will receive a royal welcome.

HEATING.

I wish to heat, by hot water, a small place, 10x20, side walls 4 feet, 10 feet to ridge, south end glass, north end protected, to maintain a night temperature of 50 degrees. How many flows and returns of 2-inch pipe will it require? I wish to use same boiler that I heat my house with now. Top of boiler is two feet above floor of greenhouse and greenhouse is five feet away from house. Could pipes be run to it? And what is the best way to protect them. F. M. Ill.

Replying to F. M., a 2-inch flow pipe should enter one end of the greenhouse near the ridge, then dropping down under one of the side benches, branch into four 2-inch pipes, which should run along two sides and across one end of the house, then reducing into one 2-inch return and running back below the ground to the boiler in the cellar of the dwelling. The pipe must be down-hill from the time it leaves the main flow pipe in the dwelling until it reaches the boiler again at the return. The best way to protect the pipe above the ground is to wrap it with with ½-inch hair felt, over which should be placed the ordinary sectional asbestos covering for 3-inch pipe, which has a canvas outer covering that can be readily painted to make it water-proof. The return below the ground should be well wrapped with hair felt or asbestos, and enclosed in a wooden box of 2-inch thick plank.

If the greenhouse were heated by an independent boiler, three pipes under each bench would answer, but in a small house heated from the dwelling system, where the fire is usually checked at night, more heating surface is required in the greenhouse. Henry W. Gibbons.

VENTILATION.

A good deal has been said and written about giving roses and carnations plenty of air, especially the latter, but I believe the full importance of the matter has not yet been generally understood. I believe that few, if any, growers yet have sufficient ventilating space on their houses to enable them to give as much air in summer as they should.

On a house about 30 feet wide, and this is getting to be the most common width around Chicago, I believe that the ventilators should be four feet deep and continuous, and that there should be ventilators of this size on both sides of the ridge. They should open from the header and not from the ridge. The ventilators can then be kept open in rainy weather without admitting much of the rain. In ordinary summer weather both sides should be wide open, insuring a really active circulation of the air. In a few carnation houses I have seen where the summer ventilation was what seemed to be unnecessarily large the plans were so vigorous and produced such fine blooms on stout stems that the difference in their favor was strikingly apparent.

In winter time the expense of the extra ventilators will be well repaid also, for you can then nearly always put on a crack of air on the opposite side from that from which the wind comes, and get ventilation without any chance of a chill wind striking the plants. I believe that this double ventilation on the roof is far preferable to any attempt at using side ventilation, which has several drawbacks.

With eight feet of continuous ventilation on carnation houses the inside temperature in summer time could be kept nearly the same as in the open air and not 10 to 15 degrees higher, as is now the rule. And this would largely do away with any necessity of shading carnation plants after benching. Of course, a very light shade for a few days would be wise in hot, sunny weather, but only for a day or so, and so light that there would be only the slightest check in the sun's rays. Charles Handel.

Grinnell, Ia.—M. N. Confrey, florist for the Ladies' Cemetery Association, has now been appointed sexton of the cemetery also.

Chrysanthemums and Carnations.

This comes from WALLACE GOMERSALL, Superintendent of the famous "Wodenethe," owned and finely maintained by Winthrop Sargent, Esq., Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.:

"For Chrysanthemums, we use GRAPE DUST with the best results by freely dusting with it until the delicate blooms come, then we are a bit shy of it to prevent any staining of the petals, but during the green state, even in bad weather, there is no trace of fungus, and we keep free of the spot. I have recommended it to many gardeners, and so far my acquaintances have found it very valuable. In common with many Gardeners and Florists, I have found it of great value in checking the RUST ON CARNATIONS. It is not expensive to use, for by using in air bellows it diffuses itself everywhere, and is, in my judgment, a valuable every day article."

Dear Sir:—The refrigerator you built for us recently is proving entirely satisfactory. It maintains a very uniform temperature of 42 degrees, and flowers keep in it well.

We find it well constructed and a highly attractive ornament to our store.

Yours very respectfully,
E. Nagel & Co.

White Enamel Refrigerator Co.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florists and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

Yours truly,

Improvement is the order of the day in florists' circles in the Saintly City. Everybody engaged in the business is making some addition or improvement, some quite extensive, others on a smaller scale, but everybody is doing something, all of which would indicate a prosperous season just passed.

Reference has been made to the following buildings being erected: L. L. May & Co., 7 new houses; Holm & Olson, 4 new houses; A. S. Swanson, 3 new houses; Carl Peterson, 2 new houses.

In addition to these previously mentioned, N. C. Hansen is erecting a new house for carnations, 23x125 in dimensions. The material for this was obtained in Chicago, the best Louisiana cypress. The glass used will be 16x18 and butted, no putty being used. The glass will be kept in place by a wooden cap screwed on. Mr. Hansen has recently purchased three acres of land containing a neat dwelling and barn, situated on Dale street and Maryland avenue. It is his intention to eventually erect a large range. The location for his houses is ideal, the land sloping to the south.

Henry Krinke is also building one or two new houses to accommodate his rapidly expanding trade.

E. F. Lemke is tearing down some houses on his property on Hague avenue and is erecting three new houses, 16x85, 12x85 and 8x85 in dimensions, respectively. These will be planted to carnations and violets. Last year he erected a fine house at this place, 16x160, even span, 14x16 butted glass being used in its construction.

N. C. Hansen has a fine crop of sweet peas and is cutting from 5,000 to 10,000 daily. He is growing nineteen varieties and all are doing finely. As the list of varieties may be both profitable and interesting, I will give them here: Captivation, Countess Cadogan, Navy Blue, Firefly, Blushing Beauty, Blanche Burpee, Emily Henderson, Countess Radnor and Extra Early Blanche Ferry, all good and first class. Extra Early Blanche Ferry was in bloom this season June 16 in open ground. Considering the cold and backward spring, this is considered very early. In the second division we place the following: Eliza Eckford, Royal Robe, Peach Blossom, Aurora, Apple Blossom, Coquette, Black Knight, Admiration, Stella Morse and Primrose. Under different circumstances, with different growers, in different soils and localities, results might be different, so I pass this on, without suggestion, as one man's experience with these sorts.

L. L. May & Co. are benching carnations. These have made remarkable growth in the field and are in fine shape for planting.

Carlsen & Lauritzen have their rose houses all replanted and are putting in new benches preparatory to planting carnations. This firm has had good success with roses on their own roots, and claim more blooms than from grafted ones. All new building has been with butted glass, which method of laying they consider far superior to lapping.

At Como Park the cannas are bursting into bloom, furnishing a dazzling array of colors. The lily ponds are a great center of attraction.

Notwithstanding the heat and inactivity in social circles, there is still some trade, and white flowers are very scarce at times. Asters in particular are in very good demand and of excellent quality.

PORTLAND, ORE.

A stranger traveling from the East and accustomed to living in a thickly settled and highly cultivated country would not, on his first visit, be very favorably impressed with the prospect of some of the Western states. For hundreds of miles you can travel over the deserts of Wyoming, Utah and Idaho and see no signs of life, only a few herds of cattle and occasionally a forlorn-looking jackrabbit. Conditions change, though, on reaching the "Webb-foot State," and a half-day's ride over the Union Pacific takes you through a picturesque country along the banks of the Columbia river (the Hudson of the West), when you reach the beautiful city of Portland.

This city has a population of 100,000 and is almost surrounded with hills and dense forests. The climate is not uncomfortably warm and store trade has been active all summer with plenty of good materials to do business with, excepting roses. Here you see sweet peas, coreopsis, zinnias, asters, and, in fact, all garden flowers grown to any size you want them, and are being used extravagantly in making window decorations.

The firm of Clarke Bros. consists of three enterprising young men who started here ten years ago in a very small way and have built up an extensive business. They own a fine range of 40,000 feet of glass at Mount Taber, a suburban town, where the writer found Frank Clarke wearing the badge of authority, and saw carnation plants three feet high and blooms three inches across.

We learned that during the rainy season and winter months the cut is very light, but the plants make a healthy, vigorous growth, which accounts for the great feast of carnations from April 1 to September 1.

Five years ago this firm opened a store on Morrison street, and Albert Clarke, who manages this branch of the business, justly deserves the praise for his business integrity and for his efforts in advancing floriculture in Portland. The store is beautifully furnished, and is said to be the finest in the Northwest. They also own 35,000 feet of glass in Oakland, Cal., which was built to grow flowers for the Portland store in the winter months. Ralph Clarke has charge of this branch.

Another progressive firm which has established a good business here is Martin & Forbes. They met with reverses at first, but weathered the storms, and during the past five years have built a range of 35,000 feet of glass, which is equipped with all modern improvements. Mr. Martin superintends the growing and all stock shows good care. Mr. Forbes gives all his attention to the downtown store, and says that the business shows a satisfactory increase every year.

L. G. Pfunder is the oldest florist here, and has been doing well financially for twenty years. The grounds surrounding his residence and store are the prettiest in the city. The talented Miss Rose Pfunder looks after her father's interests at the store. H. J. M.

PIPING.

Please tell me how to pipe the house described below for hot water. House 20x76, with 10x20 boiler room. Want to use 1 1-4 inch and 2 or 3-inch feed pipes, whichever are best. Walls 2 1-2 feet from plate to ground. Rafters, 12 feet. Boiler is a Capitol Maseot, made by U. S. Heater Co. Temperature in coldest weather to be maintained at 48 degrees. Outside temperature sometimes falls to as low as 15 degrees below zero. Also please state how much, if any, the boiler should be placed below surface of ground. E. C.

In reply to E. C., for the heating of the house in question, twelve lines of 2-inch W. I. pipes should be used, two flows and two returns under each of the side benches and under the center bench, as indicated in accompanying figure. A 3-inch main flow and return should extend from the boiler into the greenhouse, there branching into three 2-inch mains, as shown. The top of the boiler should be not less than 10 inches below the floor of the greenhouse, and more if practicable. HENRY W. GIBBONS.

GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

Soon the generous government will begin its annual distribution of free seeds, and this year forty million packages will be sent out. The rumor that free flower pots would be sent with them proves to be a canard. Free hoopskirts and other cages are possible, however, but free beer seems a long way off.

Awarded the only first-class certificate of merit by the Society of American Florists, at Boston, Mass., Aug. 21, 1890, for Standard Flower Pots.

GENUINE KROESCHELL BOILER for your purpose.

PURCELLVILLE, VA., December 5, 1899.
KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: I write to state that the No. 12 Boiler we bought of you last summer is taking care of 30,000 feet of glass with great ease. Last night the temperature outside stood at 20 degrees with the wind blowing a gale, but the night fireman maintained an even temperature with but very little draught, and I believe it will give us all the heat we need in the coldest weather. The boiler is all and more than you claim for it and is entirely satisfactory in every respect.

W. S. DAVIS, Mgr.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 13, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. CO: Your Greenhouse Hot Water Boiler No. 3 is beyond question the best boiler made. It is taking care of 2,250 feet of 4 inch pipe with ease and I am going to build this season another house 18x112 which I expect to heat with the same boiler. There are a number of different kinds of boilers made and we have had some of them in use, but they will not do the work your boiler does. Should any florists want information as to what your boilers will do, please send them to me.
FRANK J. FINK.

BOWMANVILLE, ILL., April 10, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. CO.
The boiler I bought of you is supplying 11,000 feet of 4-inch pipe and would easily supply 12 000 feet. It heats a section of five houses or 35,000 feet of glass, 60 deg. or more if needed, and I have found the boiler perfectly satisfactory in every respect.
H. BAUSKE.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.
I can say that the two No. 12 Boilers we purchased of you last year proved very satisfactory indeed, heating our rose section of 50 000 square ft. easily. What would another boiler cost, only built 2 ft. longer, for delivery this fall? An early reply will oblige.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., April 11, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: We did not get the No. 6 Boiler we ordered of you; you could not make it on account of the strike in your shop. Am very sorry we did not get it, as yours are the best boilers made. We have one No. 5, bought almost five years ago, and we heat four houses 12x150 feet with it, or almost 3,200 feet of 4-inch pipe. When we are in need of another boiler we shall buy yours.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.: In reply to your inqury I would say that the last boiler you sold to us is giving the same uniform satisfaction afforded by the other three, purchased six years ago. Your boilers seem built for the purpose of causing water to boil, with economy in the use of coal. As our Mr. Louis M. Noe, of Madison, N. J., has this week placed an order for one of your No. 11 Boilers, further comment is unnecessary.

MEMORIES OF THE MOONSHINERS.

There were many florists journeyed southward, some from the far North, one from distant Los Angeles, several from way down East, and what was most gratifying was the good attendance of our brothers from widely separated points in the South. If the convention had not been the business and social success it was, it yet would have been a bright spot in the history of the S. A. F., for it brought from the truly South a meeting of the men engaged in the business that no other occasion could possibly have brought about. Yet we missed many familiar faces from the centers of horticulture, men who have been inseparable from our annual gatherings, and the reasons for their being absent were in too many cases only too reasonable. We missed the eloquence of Robt. Craig, the rotund and contagious geniality of Edwin Lonsdale, the humorous speeches of Warren Ewell, but above all we deplored the absence of the man who was elected last year to preside over us. Though absent from us, who at Asheville did not have him constantly in mind? And the action taken by the convention in electing John Burton again for our president was the most satisfactory, the most pleasant and altogether the most admirable that could possibly have been done. I care not about precedents. It is one that in our history for many years may never occur again, and was the most sincere and true evidence of friendship and appreciation of worth that we could possibly have given him. It was worth a hundred resolutions of sympathy and condolence for his and their bereavement, which sympathy may lighten but time alone can heal. To make amends for the absence of the hitherto faithful ones we still had with us the conservative brain and its product in the shape of E. Gurney Hill, the clear-cut parliamentary oratory of Patrick O'Mara, the argumentative, dogmatic opinions of C. W. Ward, the dignity and wisdom of W. R. Smith, the good sense and business of H. B. Beatty, the lovable, smooth Teutonic-faced Fritz Bahr, of Chicago, and our new baby member, who has entirely missed his calling, Philip J. Foley. But I am not going to give you a list of members present. That you will find in another column.

The lay-over in Washington en route was most enjoyable, and the gathering of the New York, Philadelphia and other Eastern delegates as hosts of the Washington gentlemen was a superbly managed affair and if the thanks for it were publicly given in scant measure, I tender mine now most heartily, as I know all felt like doing. The dawn of Tuesday (after the attractions of the baggage car of Monday night) was fresh and glorious and found us within seventy miles of Asheville. We were really in the land of the moonshiners, the rhododendron and azalea and kalmia and many other trees and shrubs not seen in our Northern woods. The windings and curves of our train, its proposed destination in some opposite cliff or hole in the mountains as we looked across some wild ravine was truly appalling, but we got there sound in mind and limb. Only don't think that you will be sure to get there. Insure your life when you travel on the Southern R. R. Wrecks come thick and fast, and frequently they forget that two trains can not pass each other on the same rails.

Do not be too profuse in offering to pay your friend's trolley car fare from the station to the hotel. It takes $1.25 to pay for five passengers. This advice is for the benefit of Mr. Wm. Dilger, of Detroit. It was too bad that more rooms had not been engaged at the Battery Park Hotel, a fine roomy building grandly crowning the summit of a hill and affording a view of the spread-out city and valley below. Not only those who had trusted to luck, but many who thought they had quarters secured there, had to shoulder their grips and seek another resting place. There was no lack of accommodation; what the hotels did not afford the private houses gave in abundance.

The Auditorium, where the meetings and trade exhibits were held, is a splendid building. We have seldom met in a more commodious and handsome structure, and the trade exhibit, although sometimes the cause of a little more talking and hubbub than was desirable during the business sessions, added greatly to the decorations and made the interior of the hall and the platform most attractive. Now if there was anything surprising, to me at least, it was in the excellence and extent of the trade exhibit. It was equal to many we have had in our good-sized Northern cities. It is not presumable that the exhibitors did this from any philanthropic impulse, but whatever the motive, they, one and all, deserve our thanks. We trust sincerely that it paid them well for the effort. It held up the reputation of the society, and the prospective business could scarcely have been the sole motive in going so far. There were fine assortments of palms and ornamental plants by Henry A. Siebrecht & Sons, Henry A. Dreer, Robt. Craig & Son, P. J. Berckmans Co., J. A. Peterson with his fine healthy Begonia Lorraine and pandanus, Chas. D. Ball and Lemuel Ball with splendidly-grown palms, and several others. Don't think I am making a pretense of giving a list of exhibitors, for that is completely done elsewhere.

Then the supply men made a fine display. Bayersdorfer, as usual, spread himself, as did M. Rice & Co., both of the City of Brotherly Love and business; and the more dainty article of ribbons was well represented by S. S. Pennock and Schloss Bros. The bulb industry was well represented by Vaughan's Seed Store, Cluecas & Boddington Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., Henry F. Michell and H. Siebrecht & Son. Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., made a fine display of gladiolus of the Groff hybrids. The collection was in charge of Mr. Cowee's brother and was the cause of the only "jar" that I experienced during the meeting. I thought I was doing my share for the firm when I told some admirers that Mr. Cowee grew twenty-nine acres of gladioli, but the brother present indignantly said it was a libel, they had sixty-five acres. The correctness of this we must leave to future generations. However, considering the flowers were four days on the train, they were fine.

There were greenhouses and boilers and ventilators well represented. Lord & Burnham Co., The Challenge Ventilator Co., J. L. Dillon, Chadborn Mfg. Co., all had working models. Jas. M. Lamb, Fayetteville, N. C., had a real collection of Sarracenia and Dionaea and other insectivorous plants, and perhaps for the first time some of our brother florists made their acquaintance with Venus' fly trap.

In a class rather by itself was the wonderful table of Nephrolepis Piersoni. This magnificent fern could get no higher honor than the society's gold medal, but it deserves the highest. It marks an epoch in ferns. And now it is a pleasant recollection to mention the splendid specimen of nepenthes and other choice and rare plants loaned by ex-President

Eating Watermelon on top of Sunset Mountain, Asheville.

W. R. Smith, of Washington, which greeted you and gave such a pleasant impression as you entered the vestibule of the Auditorium building. Last of this incomplete story (the best should always be left for the last) was the help given by Robt. Bottomley from the houses of Biltmore. Dozens of magnificent kentias adorned the hall and stage, but more notable than all were six or eight specimen kentias that were pronounced by all the largest and at the same time the most perfect specimens they had ever seen. One on each side of the stage was, for artistic effect, worth a carload of ordinary palms.

The attendance at the business meetings was above the average, and compared with larger attendance at larger cities, it was a much better ratio. Oh, for the ability to compose that well-rounded and poetical phraseology of a Mr. Barnard, and better still to commit it to memory! It was beautiful, and so was the reply of our gifted Patrick O'Mara. On cool reflection I think we will all agree that the meetings were as interesting and instructive as we have ever had. To get down to rock bottom truth the meetings must be made interesting, and if even lively and amusing it will appeal to many. Our meetings can be compared to the readers of a newspaper. Some will read only the sporting news, others will read the sensational stories of crime, folly and disaster, and a very few, not five per cent. will read the really important words devoted to the problems of the world and humanity. Few have the capacity to take it all in. So our meetings must cater to all classes, and it is only with a desire to be truthful when I say that the great majority of those attending our conventions go there for what is most laudable and natural—a few days' healthy recreation of mind and body. Learned essays if inaudible to 90 per cent of the audience are no attraction or amusement. Mr. Farquhar's illustrated lecture was a bright feature, as his similar contributions to the society have been. They are educators, and directly you acquire more knowledge of this kind you are a better man. The only criticism I heard of the fine talk and views of Mr. Farquhar was that it was a trifle too long.

Closer relations will come some day. If either of the reports had been accepted it is doubtful if any of the special societies would have availed themselves of the agreement or privileges. In my humble opinion the smaller societies, devoted to a special flower, are doing better and more vigorous work than any committee or section can or will; and while I believe there are few members of these smaller societies that are not also members of the S. A. F., and the best of members at that, these special or smaller societies will enroll members who will eventually be as devoted to our mother society as the most loyal. It was cruel to discharge the hard working committee with a bare vote of thanks. Yet I have not forgotten Cleveland, where, after the executive committee had labored and brought in a report, better, I think, than either of those reported at Asheville, the report was turned down without a word of debate and our labor went in vain.

There was no need of much entertainment at Asheville. We entertained ourselves with keeping off the mosquitos at night and gazing on the eternal hills at every spare moment during daylight. Don't you ever try to fool me any more about the delightful coolness of the mountain tops of North Carolina. To believe that I shall want $500 and a large bag of salt. You are so much nearer old Sol, you know. It can not be called a bowling town, although the alleys that the teams played on were about as good as can be found. Philadelphia had a walk-over. They had a trained and expert team, and when such experts as the venerated W. K. Harris, John Westcott and the youthful Gibson are not good enough for a place on the team you can guess how they were fixed. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord," and Milwaukee is still to come.

The shooting has never been equalled for its expertness. There has been more attendance, more conviviality and more fun , but never such remarkable marksmanship. There was a grand absence of a lot of greenhorns wanting to take a shot. A gun and well-loaded shell should never be in the hands of a novice. A misdirected ball at bowling may cause sore shins at the very worst, but careless handling of the shot-gun and a charge through the solar plexus would only give our secretary work to record resolutions of sympathy for the bereaved family.

It's delightful to think that outside of Philadelphia in the whole United States there actually exist three men who can shoot as well as George Anderson. Altick, of Dayton, Ohio; Hammond, of Richmond, Va.; and Brown, of Richmond, Va., are wonders, and shook up things considerably. When men break forty-eight or fifty targets you don't know what they will do next, and if Deacon Harris goes on improving with age, as he has done the past year, he will easily give a handicap to his brother Quakers. The gentlemen of Asheville, who beat the florists' one-half dozen, are gentlemen, and no one begrudges them their honor and emoluments. Major McKissick and his colleagues are gentlemen from the word "pull," and the major tells a story, too.

Brother Deake was all over where he could do the most good, and on Friday morning he concentrated all his efforts to take us to the top of Overlook Mountain. Up, up we went, winding around the side of the mountains. The scenery was grand when we reached the top, but not so grand as we went up; it was too often a rocky wall on our left and eternity on our right. Excuse the interpolation, but of all cities adapted to trolley car accidents Asheville is best equipped. If I wanted to realize quickly on my accident insurance I should reside and ride much in Asheville.

We were photographed in all sorts of positions and conditions. It would take an Austin Shaw to do justice to the distant mountain peaks in the far horizon and the beautiful valley below, and if you closed your eyes, your imagination could bring to you Mt. Peter, The Bowery, the Lake of Killarney, Niagara Falls, the Mosambique Channel, Chicago and the Hellespont.

The crowning piece of enjoyment was the carriage ride to Biltmore, the 150 square miles of mountain and woodland and water and the almost unequalled mansion of George Vanderbilt. The hennery and piggery and dairy departments are all wonders, but we are not in the live stock business, and although admiring the best products that artificial selection has produced in the lower animals, we were all absorbed in the countless trees and shrubs and herbs which border the roads, crown the hills and fill the eye everywhere in this marvelous domain. It is impossible to describe it; you must see for yourself. The view from the mansion is one of surpassing beauty. Time is up; I must close. The genial whole-souled Robt. Bottomley gave us a hint that the basement of the conservatory would be a cool place to assemble and we assembled. The fever was assuaged by a cool decoction and it was not from Milwaukee. Mrs. Bottomley took care of the ladies; the men helped themselves, and then Mr. E. G. Hill read the final resolutions, which were affirmed by all. William Scott, from Buffalo, tried to summarize the whole convention and made a learned endeavor so to do. He said in part that there had been larger conventions, many of them in time would be forgotten, but our visit to Asheville would stand out as a sunny memory, never to be forgotten. We had seen the country and made friends with a people that it was very unlikely we could ever have done without the aid and incentive of the S. A. F. and a visit to this wonderful spot. Mr. O'Mara spoke eloquently. Mr. Bottomley responded to well wishes for his health and long life in a most hearty way and hoped for our speedy return, and Mr. Deake brought this most enjoyable afternoon to a close by telling us how gratified he was at our presence in Asheville, and that all had gone well.

A Few Hints.

When a good and faithful wife hires a carriage to bring a husband home from the bowling tournament she should describe him as a tall blonde with pompadour hair, eagle eyes and aquiline nose, then a lot of commonplace Detroit florists would not seize on the carriage and leave the poor husband to walk a mile and a half home. Grant this lesson will do good.

Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer should provide her husband with several night robes, so in case he loses one he need not appropriate the Pullman bed sheet and have detectives following up the S. A. F.

The landlord of the Berkley must give Mr. Ward and me another room next time. We were awakened every morning at 6 a. m. by the daily slaughter of chickens; that staple of the southern clime. Knocked over with a broom, a rotary movement of the neck and soon the heads were in one place and our dinner in another. Man must eat animal food, but division of labor seems little advanced in the South, and I strongly object to a slaughter-house under our window.

Nothing else to grumble about and we shall always retain "sunny memories of a foreign (?) land."

We look forward to Milwaukee with the greatest pleasure and believe it will bring out one of the best conventions in the history of our society.

CARNATIONS.

In the Aug. 14th issue of the Review is an article on syringing carnations, by Mr. A. F. J. Baur, which I read with interest, as the subject is of much importance to me at this time.

I am satisfied that plants should be syringed more often when first planted, but as to the amount after they have been in the houses several weeks I am not so sure. I think I am the only one in this city who syringes after the watering in the morning. My plants are syringed after dinner and have been planted in the house some five or six weeks; in fact the ones inside now have not been in the field, but were kept in the house. They are in good condition and look healthy. I want to know whether by syringing them after dinner there is danger of getting too soft a growth, or is there danger of rust from it. The plants have not had a great deal of water in the field and I want to know whether it will be wise to syringe them in the same manner when I bring my outside stock in.

Of course our conditions here are somewhat different from the eastern growers, and one must know them to be able to form a really correct opinion, but I think one familiar with carnations would be able to give some points of value.

I would like to have Mr. Baur's opinion. COLORADO.

At this time of the year, while the days are quite hot and the sun so bright, I do not think any serious harm would result from a daily syringing about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. If plenty of ventilation is kept on the houses and the plants get the full sun the growth is not apt to become very soft, and I believe that on extremely hot days it can not help being a benefit to the plants to give them a light spraying overhead and to keep the walks damp during mid-day.

With as fine growing weather as I understand they have in Colorado's neighborhood there ought to be very little danger from oversoftness. It is during the cloudy weather we have during late fall and early winter that we experience the greatest trouble in keeping our carnations from growing soft and too rank.

If Colorado has not housed his carnations from the field yet he ought to lose no time in getting at it. They will need syringing and close watching for a couple of weeks, but as soon as they catch a good hold I would cease the syringing altogether except what they get in the morning in being watered, and I would also cease syringing the others, that were planted some time ago, after about Sept. 1st. During that month the nights are so cool and bracing and the weather in general so favorable to the growth of plants that nothing in the way of encouragement is required outside of plenty of water at the roots, plenty of ventilation and sunshine, with enough syringing to keep down red spider, which may possibly have been brought in from the field.

The Foster Fern at the Asheville Convention Exhibition.

But under no circumstances should the plants be wet over night, especially when the nights are cool.

We make a practice of going over our benches early in the afternoon and watering what dry spots there are and damping the walks at the same time; there are always places, here and there, that dry out quicker than others, and we consider it very harmful for a plant to be very dry over night while it is in a growing condition.

Right now is the time when your carnations should be starting into their strong fall growth and getting well established in their new quarters, and you should offer them every encouragement to make a strong but sturdy and well matured growth. After they have a good hold on the soil there should not be a particle of shade on the glass, and the ventilators should be up as high as you can raise them during the day and as high as you dare keep them over night.

About this time we are bothered most by that destructive little pest the sowbug or wood-louse. They seem to delight in chewing up the grass of the newly planted carnations, and we have seen plants totally ruined by them. Mix a little paris green in some sugar and sprinkle a little here and there on the edge board in the evening, and if you repeat this regularly for a week or two you will be rid of them. Don't lay it around once and expect it to kill them all, but keep at it until you are rid of them. The first time they may get only enough to make them sick, but the second or third time it will do the work.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Cold, damp, and muggy seasons, like the present, create just the conditions most suited for the germination, and favorable to the growth, of mildew, the spores of which are rarely absent from the soil.

The rose mildew (Uredo rosea) is always a parasite on a living plant, and appears in the form of a minute fungus. This originates for the most part within the tissues of living leaves and develops outward in pustules which burst through the cuticle. The filaments penetrate the pores of the epidermis, rob the plant of its juices and interrupt respiration. Every specimen of this fungus emits annually, myriads of minute spores, these are scattered over the soil and foliage and readily germinate when the conditions are suitable. They have also the power of stooling or spreading by offsets.

Plants which through any cause have their vitality impaired are the most susceptible to its attacks and ravages. Keep the plants growing vigorously and avoid all draughts and sudden changes of temperature, by keeping a close watch on the outside atmospheric conditions, and so regulating the ventilation that no sudden chill can occur in the house, especially during the time of watering and syringing.

Have the roofs of the houses tight, particularly so along the gutter-plate. The foliage should, under no circumstances, be allowed to remain wet over night, as this makes the foliage soft, and is a very fruitful source of mildew. By exercising due care along these lines the leaves will be of a rich green color and have such a firm texture that they will be nearly immune.

As a measure of precaution the sulphur blower should be used once a week by selecting a bright, warm day, when the leaves are dry (as it is only of benefit in a powdered form), and allowing it to remain on the foliage for twenty-four hours the full benefit will be derived.

If, as may happen, after all precautions, mildew does make its appearance, the most effective, safest and easiest applied remedy is still sulphur—two parts of sulphur and one part air-slacked lime, mixed with water to the consistency of paint, and put on the pipes at distances of a yard or so apart, and shutting the house tight for an hour and a half.

By selecting the coldest part of the night for this operation there will be no danger of injuring even the most tender foliage. If steam is the heating power, care must be taken not to paint the hottest pipes, as the sulphur may fuse and the fumes from sulphur in a state of fusion is death to vegetable life. The return pipes will usually give off sufficient fumes to destroy the pest. One application is usually sufficient to effect the purpose, but a repetition after a few days makes sure work. RIBES.

ROSES.

I have a small house in roses in solid soil. Have been planted one year. They are planted about one foot apart. They are growing very rank and the flowers are getting to be very small. I want to help them over another winter. Have every other sash off, so part of soil is wet with rains and the other part dry. The kinds are Liberty, Bride, Maid, Gate and Perle. Had I better take out part of plants or trim them back, or both? I do not need the roses for six weeks or two months. Soil has not been fertilized since roses were planted. Shall I enrich the soil now, or wait until after trimming them? H. B. R.

These roses should be dried off by gradually withholding water for three weeks, taking care not to get them so dry that they will wilt or shed their leaves, and the syringe must be kept going to keep down spider. After they are thoroughly ripened trim out all the weak, blind wood and cut back the stronger stems to four eyes; tie them neatly down, binding the stems to nearly right angles, as this will help them to break the eyes nearer the base of the stem. Give the benches a thorough soaking and keep the house rather close for a week, syringe twice a day; after the eyes have started gradually increase the supply of water and give more air. As soon as the young leaves have expanded give the benches a light, rich mulch composed of one part fibry loam and two parts well decomposed cow manure, adding to every bushel of this a six-inch potful of desiccated bone meal. Mix thoroughly and spread on the bench to the depth of an inch. Ribes.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Buds.

Just at this date the question of bud selection is the all-important theme of the mum grower, and though volumes have been written on this subject, there seem to be many growers somewhat at sea as to the proper bud to "take" to get the best results.

Chrysanthemums as generally grown—that is to say, young stock planted out from June 1st to 15th or thereabout—will produce three buds. An early crown (also often called a summer bud), about the end of July; a second crown about the end of August, and a terminal in September or later. There are of course exceptions to this general rule, such as V.-Morel and its sports, Chenon De Leche, and others which are producing buds all the time; but the most of the varieties will follow the lines indicated.

The early crown bud may be considered as useless, so far as producing a flower is concerned. It seems to be nature's method of checking the growth to enable it to catch up with itself, as it will be noticed that the plant thickens in stem and improves in foliage before the new shoots move up again. The second crown bud, appearing by the end of August or first few days in September, will, if taken, come out all right and produce a good flower on most varieties. This is the bud mostly used by the grower of exhibition flowers who desires to get his flowers as large as possible. Some varieties produce a better colored, neater flower on the later bud, such as the greater part of the pink varieties, which come pale and unsatisfactory on this bud, and also Colonel Appleton, Gold Mine, Mrs. Trainor L. Park and Chadwick, all of which we find do best on a bud taken well into September.

Those growers who complain of Appleton having a long, weak neck, coming deficient in petalage in the center of the flower, bad-shaped, etc., can put it down as their own fault in taking the bud too early. I mention Appleton more particularly, because it would seem that there are as many plants of Appleton and Eaton grown this year as of almost all the other varieties put together. Eaton comes all right on any bud taken after the 20th of August, though the flowers produced from earlier buds show more of the hollow center than flowers produced from later crowns or terminal buds.

The terminal bud is the last one produced, being, as its name implies, the terminus of growth. If previous buds have been removed this one must be taken, since no others will appear, the growth of the plant being completed. There are more terminal buds used in growing flowers for market than any other, the reason being that it is a safe bud in the hands of the veriest novice, while crown buds require more or less of experience to manipulate. The terminal bud always carries the foliage up close to the flower and will develop in a very low temperature, the chief objection to its use being that the flower is much smaller and lacking in depth and solidity, although invariably the pink varieties come cleaner and deeper in color. The variety Nellie Pockett is utterly useless on terminal buds, while the crowns produce beautiful, large, artistic flowers.

Plants grown for market are generally planted closely together, and in such cases, where the growth is drawn up it is not advisable to use the crown bud, because oftentimes it will run up with a long, weak neck, which is unable to support the flower erect, and a long naked stem is by no means inviting. There seems to be a very general idea that by taking crown buds, or planting out early, one is certain to get early flowers. This does not follow by any means. You are not likely to get flowers any earlier from stock planted in May than from plants put out in June or July, though you are certain, if you have sufficient head room, of getting much larger flowers from the earlier stock. Neither does it follow that by taking crown buds you will get earlier flowers. A crown bud takes much longer to develop than a terminal, and with the exception of a few early varieties the two buds will develop almost together.

A crown bud takes from eight to ten weeks to develop, and while the late bud has had to make an additional growth, thus taking much of its nourishment, the crown bud has been developing petals in the meantime, and consequently produces a much larger flower. It is perhaps unnecessary to remind the grower that disbudding is best performed in the morning, when the shoots are brittle and easily removed. Use the thumb nail and work from the bud downward; then if you happen to injure the bud you have a shoot beneath to fall back on. Disbudding is a simple operation, but don't forget that it should be attended to as soon as possible. Brian Boru.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

We have a house of yellow Bonnaffon and Jerome Jones chrysanthemums that seem to have a sort of rust on the leaves. I send you enclosed a sample of how it affects the Bonnaffon leaves. The healthy plants seem to be troubled with it more than the others. Kindly let me know through your paper if there is any way of getting rid of this rust, and what is the cause of it. H. F.

I regret that the leaves reached me in such a shriveled condition that a microscope fails to reveal whether H. F. is troubled by the genuine rust or not. It is, however, most likely that he is, since he calls it "a sort of rust."

The rust is easily identified, it being similar to the carnation rust in appearance, and appears on the foliage in the shape of small brown spots which are slightly raised above the surrounding surface. The spots or pustules are filled with a brown powder which consists of myriads of spores, and which, when scattered by syringing or the wind, fall on other leaves, and thus spread the disease. Where the leaf is wet, the spores pierce the skin immediately, and a new crop of spores will be produced in a week.

There was considerable talk a year or two ago about this rust, but it has never gained much headway, though I understand it is still virulent in England.

If H. F. will syringe his plants with a solution of potassium sulphide used in the proportion of one ounce in two gallons of water, he will keep the rust from spreading, and next year, if he propagates only from plants that were not diseased, he will have no further trouble.

In the spring, if young stock is sprayed with the potassium solution, it will kill off any spores that may have wintered over. We had rust some years ago and by following this treatment got completely rid of it.

As to what the rust comes from it is a little hard to say. It is claimed that the disease is common on many wild composite plants, and it may have been carried over in that way, appearing on the chrysanthemums when conditions were favorable for its development, or your correspondent may have brought in some young plants that were diseased.

One thing is certain—wet weather is the favorable time for the rapid increase of the disease, for I have seen it spread all through a batch of plants growing outside in a single week when we have had continuous rains.

Syringe your plants as little as possible and run them a little on the dry side at the roots, and particularly so when the weather is wet and sunless.

This treatment, with the use of the potassium properly applied—that is, spray both sides of the leaves—will keep the rust from spreading, and another year H. F. can rid himself completely of the trouble. Brian Boru.

VIOLET NOTES.

Writing notes for the Review sometimes elicits notes from growers that are both pathetic and humorous. I am tempted to say a little that is not exactly "cultural directions" which is brought out by the following, quoted from the letter of a Southern grower, received a few days ago: "Violets around here are generally looking badly, and of recent years we have gotten poor prices, owing, I think, to each grower selling for himself. I hear that you people in the North get good prices, scarcely ever less than $1 per 100. Ours get as low sometimes as 10 cents per 100, and scarcely ever as high as $1. Won't you tell me how you keep up prices; isn't it by unity of action on the part of growers? Washington is mostly our market, and our produce is pronounced particularly fine. I have tried shipping to New York. I sent to one florist there and he wrote me that he could not get anything for violets, and as I knew it was horse show week, I thought it strange. My brother was exhibiting some horses there, and went around to the same florist and he was retailing my flowers at $6 per 100, and I did not get a cent for about 3000 sent him. This has been my experience (in other houses there) or the equivalent."

Now, this party has my sympathy, and I am sorry that he has had such hard luck; still I would not believe that all florists and commission men in New York are like this man; in fact, I know they are not all this kind. But the point I wanted to make is this, that the grower must not lay everything at the city man's door. We growers expect almost everything of him, but I think there are some things that we should consider if we wish him to make us good returns, and the first is that we should find a man that we are sure is reliable and then make arrangements with him before the season commences for whatever we have to send to him, so that he will know about what to depend on, as in this way he should be able to get us better prices than when we send a large shipment one day and then hold off an indefinite time for the next. Of course, there are times when a grower has to make some special shipments, but if he has ordinary weather and understands his business, and how it usually runs, he ought to avoid these as a general thing, although it cannot always be done. Then the commission man ought to do better in prices by the regular shipper than the occasional shipper, selling the former's stock first if there is more than enough to go around, unless it is not up to standard. He must of necessity sell the best in order to hold his customers, if there is much difference in quality.

Like all growers, I have had my experiences at different times. One that comes to mind at present is a case of claims for violets that the consignee claimed were frozen. Now, I am as certain to-day that they were not frozen as I am that I am writing this, one good reason being that I had another shipment, packed by the same man, sent on same train, delivered by same wagon, to a party further down town than this, and it was all right. Now, it does not stand to reason, all these conditions being the same, that the box which was delivered first should be frozen and not the other. I always thought, though I could not prove it, that one of the boys in the store wanted those violets himself, and so said they were frozen, as I know that he unpacked them.

Again for the commission man, I think that when you have looked about and found a good commission man it is much better for both parties if you stick to him; you get to know what to expect of each other, and it should be to your mutual advantage. R. E. Shuphelt.

CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL CONVENTION.

The first session will be held in the Hamilton city hall at 2:30 p. m., Wednesday, Sept. 3rd, when Mayor Hendrie will welcome the association and give it the freedom of the city, and after the response President Joseph Bennett, of Montreal, will give his address. Mr. Bennett is well known as one of Canada's most forward men in the florist business, a versatile speaker and a practical man in every sense of the word. His address may be looked forward to as a masterpiece of eloquence and practical value.

The association headquarters will be at the Waldorf hotel. Members of the local committee will meet all trains and supply delegates with badges, and any information wanted. Delegates arriving before noon should go direct to the Exhibition hall, corner Park and Robinson streets.

The trade exhibit will be one grand feature of the convention. Already over four thousand square feet has been applied for, and it will afford delegates an opportunity of comparing stock; and to those building, or contemplating doing so, the exhibit of heating and building material will be of much interest, as will the display of florists' supplies, flowerpots, wire designs, and various other accessories, be to the general florists.

The city of Hamilton has its own peculiar beauty, situated as it is at the foot of the mountain, and almost surrounded by the Burlington bay. Its shaded streets are cool and refreshing; its parks are natural and of a large area. From the mountain top, where the Insane asylum is situated, the scene is one of picturesque beauty. The landscape from that eminence is one not soon forgotten.

Exhibit of the P. J. Berckmans Co. at the Asheville Convention.

In the valley to the west can be seen the town of Dundas, while across the bay is the town of Burlington, and across Lake Ontario in the distance, dimly seen, is the city of Toronto, while on the east, between Lake Ontaria and the mountain, lies the Niagara fruit district. But its scenery aloue is not all that Hamilton is noted for. As a manufacturing city it has a wide reputation, and some of Canada's chief industries are centered there.

Hamilton has a live Gardeners' and Florists' club, and on its roll are found over 90 per cent of those connected with gardening and floriculture in this vicinity. Its Horticultural society, too, is one that is alive to the necessities of the day, as shown by the flower fete given in honor of the C. H. A. meeting.

The entertainment committee has a well planned programme, and is desirous that every delegate should partake of its hospitality.

The association invites everyone in any way connected with the horticultural industry to its meeting. Its objects are to lift up and carry forward all that tends to advance the interests of horticulture. The roll will be open for membership at the meeting, or names may be sent to the secretary pro tem., Wm. Gammage, London, Ont.

PRIMULA POISONING.

In response to your request for information as to a remedy for poisoning by Prumula obconica, would say I have been poisoned several times. I used Luytie's Pinus ointment as a local application and sulphur and cream of tartar to purify the blood. I used one-third cream of tartar and two-thirds sulphur, mixed well. Dose, one teaspoonful every morning in milk. Also take good nourishment. I have never known it to fail.

MRS. M. T. WILLIAMSON.

Rochester, N. Y.

I have been badly poisoned by poison ivy several times, and one time it spread all over my body. I have been slightly poisoned by Primula obconica on the hands twice, but it left after a couple of days of irritation or itching. I learned when too late to try it, after my last experience with poison ivy, that the juice of Impatiens fulva (the common jewel weed) rubbed on the affected surface is a complete antidote. Perhaps it would be efficacious as a remedy for the primula poisoning. Another remedy for ivy poisoning that is effective with some is dissolved sugar of lead applied to the surface frequently. My family physician advised me to apply witchhazel, but it is worse than nothing, for like water it merely spreads the poison. Liquid ammonia will neutralize bee sting the quickest of anything I know of. Kerosene is the next quickest. Hope the patient will find something to relieve him, for I sympathize with him.

AMONG CHICAGO GROWERS.

Bassett & Washburn.

The carnations are now all housed at this establishment and the plants are in better condition than seemed likely in view of the unfavorable season for field growth. They have housed 76,000 plants in all, divided about as follows: 14,000 Lawson, 11,000 White Cloud, 9,000 Crane, 5,000 each of Prosperity, America and Flora Hill, 4,000 each of Norway and Marquis, 7,000 Morning Glory, 3,000 Bradt and Red Bradt, 2,000 each of Gold Nugget and Maceo, 1,000 each of Lorna (they intended to have more Lorna), Gaiety, Floriana, Cressbrook, Gov. Wolcott, Roosevelt and Joost.

Of roses they are this season benching 40,000 Beauties, 26,000 Bridesmaids, 23,000 Brides, 20,000 Liberty and 2,000 each of Meteor and Perle. The Brides, Maids and Liberty are all grafted plants. They are replanting quite a number of the old plants this year, and believe that the grafted plants give much better results when replanted than do own root plants when carried over. About 8,000 each of their Brides and Maids and 4,000 of their Liberty are replanted grafted plants. In replanting they merely lift the old plants, set to one side in the house, put in new soil and prune and replant the old plants in their former position.

They have one large house, 58x600 devoted to roses for summer bloom that has produced large crops all summer. The varieties are divided as follows: 8,000 Kaiserin, 4,000 Carnot, 3,000 Golden Gate, 2,000 Marquise Litta. They find Carnot a very popular summer rose and a good bloomer for summer work.

CLEVELAND.

The florist business is at a standstill as far as moving any stock is concerned; only now and then a funeral order to break the monotony. Most of the craft here at the present time are bent on getting in their carnations, which, for the most part, are about as good as usual, although some of the growers are complaining about their plants being very small. Asters are beginning to get a little scarce now, especially white ones. There is quite a demand for out-door lilies. Carnations are very small now, and roses also are a back number, as far as size and quality are concerned.

Mr. E. A. Fetters, of Smith & Fetters, is improving, and expects to be able to attend to business again the first of next April.

A Visit to Some Nearby Towns.

I paid a visit to John Merkel & Son's place, at Mentor, and found them busy getting in soil for their carnations. They have three benches planted in a new house they are building, on which they have not yet begun to put the rafters. The side and end walls are up, but they have decided not to put the glass on until later, preferring to give the plants a chance to get a good start in the open air first. They will carry over their two houses of roses, and have them dried off for that purpose. They have taken out about three inches of the old soil from the top, and are preparing to put on fresh soil.

Their violets are planted inside, and are looking very fine indeed. Their chrysanthemums are also in the pink of condition. They have a nice lot of rubbers about ready to take off, besides a lot that has been planted into pots. They use rather larger cuttings than most growers do, I think, using some as long as four feet. They have quite a novel way of starting these large cuttings, cracking a 4-inch pot down the center and fastening this to the branch where the cutting is to be made, and then filling the pot full of moss, so when the cutting is thoroughly rooted the ball of moss inside the pot is full of roots. Some of the largest cuttings had as many as six branches on them. This firm has made an addition to its asparagus house, besides the carnation house, of which I have spoken.

I also called at Carl Hagenberger's place, and found this gentleman away, as usual. It always seems to be my luck to call when Carl is away. This time he was at Perry arranging a wedding decoration. I found the place in its usual order. The men were busy staking mums and shifting "celestial peppers" from 2 to 3-inch pots for Christmas sales. He has five beds made on the ground and planted with carnations, expecting, some time in the future, to build some houses over them. He has none of the material on the ground as yet, but expects to use most of the glass from the Simmons place, at Geneva, which he bought when same was dismantled. Carl intends to build seven houses this fall.

The tearing down and removing of the Simmons greenhouses, at Geneva, marks the passing of one of the oldest establishments in this section of the country. This firm originated one of our best carnations, namely, Daybreak, and were pioneers in introducing new geraniums. Only a few years ago if Simmons advertised a new geranium as extra good, their word went, and everybody had to have it. To most of the craft around Cleveland it is a sad ending to what at one time gave promise of being a large and flourishing establishment.

I also stopped to see H. R. Carlton, at Willoughby. Here I found the proprietor at work with a shovel in his violet house, throwing out the old soil preparatory to making a new bed. I found all his carnations planted inside and looking very good indeed. He also has one house of roses that gives great promise for young plants.

At Bate Bros.' the boys are hustling in their carnations as fast as possible. The plants are of an average size, and are looking very healthy indeed. This firm has built a large new house for roses this year, and has 7,500 roses planted in it, which are looking very fine. It also has two houses of adiantum that are looking very promising. They have been cutting Brides and Maids from their old houses all summer, but will tear them out now very soon and plant carnations. Besides running their greenhouses, they also conduct a commission business on Euclid avenue near Erie street, where you will always find genial George, who is always ready to let you have anything in the florist line he has, and who is always ready to send out for anything he hasn't got.

A. Schmitt, of Glenville, who suffered a fall from one of his greenhouses, is not improving very rapidly. He struck on his left shoulder and it seems to affect his heart. He is also troubled some with rheumatism. Mrs. Schmitt is visiting at Peoria, Ill. TENEP.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Long-stemmed Beauties can now be had at from $2.00 to $3.00 per dozen. They are in demand and many more could be used. Fifty cents to $1.50 a dozen buys the shorter grades. In spite of the number of Kaiserins in market they sell well at from $3.00 to $6.00 per 100. John Burton is sending in Meteors and Golden Gates to Leo Niessen that are good for the season. Valley is not too plentiful at from $2.00 to $4.00. Asters, as a rule, do not grade high; $1.00 per 100 is about the price for the best. Fortunately carnations are becoming more plentiful, field grown Scotts and Hills at about half the price of asters being mainstays.

Convention Notes.

Philadelphians are very much gratified over the re-election of President Burton and by the graceful action of J. C. Vaughan in making his nomination. A party of twelve, including many Philadelphians, climbed Mt. Mitchell, 7,000 feet above the sea, last Saturday. They followed a zigzag bridle path for twelve miles, some on mules and some on foot, passing the night on top of the mountain with no shelter. One of the party describes the vegetation as more luxuriant than anything he had ever seen in a greenhouse. He considered this trip the crowning feature of a delightful week.

Pennock Bros. have good reason to be proud of their pair of bowlers—champion of 1901, W. R. Gibson; champion of 1902, B. Starkey. The sweep made by our bowlers is very gratifying. The Detroit cup now ornaments the trophy case. The other two cups are expected from New York shortly.

The Flower Market Co.

Two hundred and forty of the three hundred shares of stock necessary to start the proposed Flower Market Company have been taken. The interest shown by the growers warrants the belief that the meeting on Thursday night will see the new enterprise fairly launched.

Notes.

Richard Lange has given up his place in the city, which has been torn down and removed to Norristown, where he will start in business at 3601 Germantown avenue.

Fred Ehret returned from Europe last week after a great trip. He was warmly greeted on his arrival at his old home, the militia calling on him at once. His naturalization papers cleared up their doubts after an hour and a half restraint and he was once more a free man. He reports the outdoor flowers in Germany and France as equal to our greenhouse products, but that in England the cut bloom is far inferior. He did not find any retail stores on the Continent to compare with those in this country. Mrs. Ehret managed her husband's wholesale business very successfully during his absence. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The Market.

I believe trade is picking up a bit. Unfortunately I generally am obliged to get two or three backers to my statements to make them pass, and the idea of better business may arise entirely from a slight decrease in the general cut. But there is no marked decrease in the cut except perhaps in the matter of sweet peas, and, now and then, a bit of stringency in the carnation department, but no great panic has resulted in either case.

Later.—Larger, better asters are freely circulating. A large part of the carnations now are outdoor grown and a bit short in the stem. Roses are plentiful enough, with a bit of scarcity on white ones at the end of the week, and no one knows how the situation may develop.

Death of W. A. Bock.

This well-known plant grower died at his residence in North Cambridge the first of the week, of heart and kidney troubles. He had been established there about twenty-five years, being fifty-eight years of age. He began declining in health about two years ago.

Leuthy's Place.

This is a good place to visit, especially if in need of palms, ferns or other decorative plants. A good way to reach the place is to be elevated in the subway to Forest Hills, change to the Readville line, Canter-bury gracefully off when you get to a street of that name and keep an eye turned to the left for 25,000 feet of glass in several low-lying houses surrounded by a wealth of outdoor growth. If the houses are low they are also long, and are full of well-grown stock. Naturally you might wish to meet the proprietor, who is now "doing" Switzerland, but you will find his foreman, Mr. Henry Lenaerts, a gentleman all over, and he will courteously show you a fine growth of plants that will surprise you, and probably make your pocket-book sweat too. The concern is working up a mighty good reputation, and it is no wonder.

Thomas Capers, at Wellesley Hills, displays as fine a skeleton of a brand-new 250-foot house as one need see, with small L and fine, large boiler house adjoining. The house is planted but not glazed. His glass and his boiler are loafing aronnd in the shade of the bushes. According to his list of help there will be Wilde Capers around his place this winter. J. S. MANTER.

MILWAUKEE.

Last Tuesday night the Milwaukee Florists' Club tendered a reception and banquet to C. C. Pollworth, who has returned from Asheville since capturing the next convention of the S. A. F. Prior to this event the club held its annual meeting and elected officers as follows: C. C. Pollworth, Pres.; John Dunlop, Vice-Pres.; H. V. Hunkel, Secy.; Will Currie, Treas. Mr. Pollworth read a report of the work done in securing the next convention and of the general work of the Asheville convention.

At the banquet, which had been arranged as a surprise to Mr. Pollworth, Will Currie acted as toastmaster, and speeches were made by Mr. Pollworth, C. B. Whitnall, Wm. Edlefsen and Paul Foley. Among the guests were: John Arnold, B. Gregory, E. Haasch, F. Homes, C. Johannes, Fred Kaiser, P. Kapsalis, Fred Menger, H. Pohl, R. Preuss, F. Schmeling, H. Schwebke, A. Klokner, Edw. Stewart, N. Zweifel, A. B. Loofbourrow, H. Staeps, W. G. Schucht, Walter Halliday, J. E. Pollworth, and Walter Kreitling, the latter of Chicago.

Mr. Pollworth was congratulated on all sides by those present, and when he rose to speak his first expression was that the enthusiasm shown regarding the next convention was an assurance that it would be the greatest in the history of the national organization. He was called upon again and again, and it was a late hour before the party adjourned. It was a most happy and encouraging inauguration of the work of preparing for the convention of 1903. Milwaukee has decided that the convention of next year shall break all records both in point of attendance and value, and will spare no effort to this end.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Florists about town are not overly pleased with the business of the past week. The reports come from all over that nothing was doing but an occasional funeral design.

During the dull days the store men are making alterations and renovating their stores with fresh paint. The cool weather of late has improved the quality of stock very much, which is quite plentiful, but the demand very light. There is hardly any shortage in anything except first-class American Beauties, for which there is always a demand. Other roses are very plentiful in Kaiserins, Brides, Meteors, Maids, Liberties and Gates. The best bring $4, and from that they run down to $1. Perles are not overplentiful. Carnations are coming in more plentifully, but quality not good; stems very short, especially so in white; 75 cents and $1 is all they bring.

Asters are a glut and plenty of the colored ones are dumped. They bring from 50 cents to $1; much cheaper in 1000 lots. Gladioli are hard to sell at any price. Hydrangeas and tuberoses sell fairly well. Good smilax is in the market at 15 cents a string.

Convention Notes.

The Review, as usual, brought the first news of the convention to the city, which was read with great interest. The telephones kept ringing all day, congratulating the S. A. F. in selecting a western city in which to hold its next convention. Milwaukee was entitled to it, and got it, thanks to the great work of Brother Pollworth, the vice-president elect. Of course Philadelphia had a walk-over, which was expected. St. Louis was out, but we will be on hand next year and Capt. Moss will have to have a stronger team to be in the hunt. We were much surprised at the poor showing of Capt. Lang's team by letting that scrub team from Chicago beat it.

Notes.

Charlie Ford, representing A. Herrman, of New York, was the first of the drummers to call on the trade after the convention.

Henry Berning and wife returned last week from their trip to California. Henry reports a pleasant trip.

George M. Kellogg passed through the city on his way from the convention.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers returned on Friday from her trip to New York just in time to help make up a large amount of funeral work.

Wm. Adels, who spent a week in Chicago, has returned home and reports a good time with the craft.

C. C. Sanders, the first of the St. Louis delegation to return home, reports that they had a great time and that Asheville is all that is claimed for it. He saw stars every time he fell while bowling, but no angels' feet to tickle.

Eddie Gerlach has returned to his post at Kuehn's after ten days' vacation, as happy as ever.

The Gardeners', Farmers' and Fruit Growers' Association held a meeting last Friday night. Ninety-seven applications for membership were received. A resolution was adopted providing for a bill to be introduced in the municipal assembly for the establishment of a central market for gardeners and fruit growers. A picnic will be held at Roth's Grove on the Olive street road September 7. The next meeting of the association will be held on Saturday, October 4, at 8 o'clock.

A meeting of apple growers was held last Tuesday at the Southern hotel. Delegates from Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Nebraska, West Virginia, Alabama and New Mexico were present. The object of the meeting was to arrange a preliminary organization and to formulate a call for a congress of American apple growers to be held in St. Louis, November 18 and 19 next. Henry C. Cupp, of Fall River, Ill., is president; George T. Tippin, of Springfield, Mo., is vice-president, and F. C. Wilson, of Hannibal, Mo., is secretary. All apple growers are eligible.

Club Meeting.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Thursday afternoon September 11th, at 3 o'clock, at the regular meeting hall in Odd Fellows building. The meeting will be very interesting. The installation of officers will take place. The trustees have arranged with Brother Barnes of the Missouri Botanical Garden to show the lantern slides of the gardens. President Meinhardt hopes for a large attendance. Ex-Presidents Fillmore, Ammann and Halstedt will install the new officers. J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The convention is over and all the boys who went from here have returned and are busily engaged getting things in shape for fall trade. All report an elegant time and say they were well paid for the trip. Despite the fact that it was rather hot, things moved along so nicely that every minute of the time was greatly enjoyed, and all vote the convention at Asheville to have been a great success.

Cincinnati did not get the convention for 1903, and there is some disappointment felt; but the timely action of Mr. E. G. Gillett in withdrawing Cincinnati from the competition has made hosts of friends for our city, and when Cincinnati again asks for the honor of having the S. A. F. O. H. to meet in our city, the chances are that the invitation will be warmly accepted, and rightly so.

Business is about as dull as it ever gets. There is but a very feeble demand, and it is just as well that it is so, as the stock that is coming in is scarcely the kind that would sell at any time. Of good stock there is scarcely any, and, what little there is, is readily sold and at very good prices. The majority of the present supply consists of short-stem roses, any quantity of them; also asters of a poor grade, a few carnations, mostly cut from the field, and a lot of mixed stock, such as balsams, candytuft, dahlias, gladioli, etc.

There are a few good roses, but the supply is limited; 2 to 4 cents is the price, and short-stemmed ones at $1.00 per 100. Some Liberties are beginning to arrive, and they show signs of rapidly growing into good stock. At present they are somewhat single and do not hold well. Some Beauties meet a good demand and bring $1.00 to $2.00 per dozen; shorts, 50 and 75 cents. Brides are very scarce, and good ones are almost impossible to be obtained. Maids are more plentiful and some are very fair in quality.

Carnations are beginning to come in increased numbers, and the quality is much improved. As indoor carnations are now about ready to be cut, each week will see a vast improvement in quality, and the price will advance in proportion. Carnations have been scarce right along, the demand being far ahead of the supply. Whatever place in the floral world you place the carnation, whether first or second, it is still a fact that if you do not have a supply of carnations to sell, your business will be poor, even if you have an ice-box full of roses. The carnation is a seller itself, and it helps sell other stock. In this respect it has no superior among flowers. Prices quoted are 50 cents to $1.50 per 100.

Gladoli bring 2 to 3 cents. Dahlias, 1 to 2 cents. Asters, 50 cents to $2.00. Very few good asters are now being cut about this city. Those that do come in are of a poor grade and sell slowly.

Notes.

Charlie Jones of the Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar and Jones the Florist, Fourth street, has just returned with his family from a visit at Columbus, Ind.

Fred Gear and wife are having a two weeks' outing at Atlantic City.

The Montgomery county fair at Carthage was held during the past week, and Mr. J. T. Conger of Hartwell took everything in sight in the way of premiums for plants and flowers.

Mr. B. Rosens of Brooklyn was a caller. C. J. Ohmer.

CHICAGO.

The Carnation Outlook.

This is a busy time for carnation growers, even more so than is usual at this time of year. Planting in is comparatively an easy matter if you have an ample stock of your own to select from, but when you are short of stock and find it difficult to procure the most desirable varieties such as you want to plant, then the problem becomes embarrassing. From a superficial point of view it would appear that the early prediction of a decided shortage of stock made early in the season, and based on the prevalence of excessive rain, was more or less erroneous. As a matter of fact a number of local growers are offering a surplus for sale. But on investigation you will find that very few of the most desirable sorts are to be had and the few thousands offered are being held at prettty steep prices. The stock for sale is largely of the older varieties which might do in a pinch, but except in case of great scarcity would hardly be considered by the up-to-date grower. Still, aside from choice of varieties, there appears to be stock enough to plant most of the houses intended for carnations.

It remains to be seen to what extent the much dreaded stemrot will lessen the stand after planting in. In a number of establishments this disease has already made its appearance, and if, as a number of growers are afraid, it will prove worse this season than formerly it will be a far more serious matter than the drowning out of stock in the field. On the whole it would appear that the output of carnations the coming year will be fully up to that of the past season, but owing to the scarcity of the choicer varieties the general quality may not show that improvement over the past season that undoubtedly would have prevailed under more favorable conditions.

The Market.

Roses keep gaining very steadily. In Beauties the cut is increasing daily and prices this week have sagged considerably. Teas are coming in in largely increased quantities and meet with a very indifferent demand. A few choice grades may reach top quotations but the bulk of the stock is jobbed off at very low figures. In outdoor stock the glut of asters, gladioli, hydrangeas, etc., continues. In asters this market has never seen the like in its history. The stock shipped in daily is enormous. In quality the average is of a higher grade than was ever noted before, but even the choicest blooms often go begging. The same might be said of gladioli, hydrangeas, Rudbeckia Golden Glow—quantities of fine stock and few buyers.

Various Items.

The latest reports regarding the condition of Edgar Sanders are very encouraging. He is making such continued progress toward recovery that the physician in attendance is now calling only every other day. It is believed that only continued rest and quiet are necessary to give him strength to leave his bed.

Walter Mott, Jamestown, N. Y., was a welcome visitor last week.

Those who attended the Asheville convention have nearly all returned. All report a good time. The special train went through in fine shape, but there was some difficulty in getting satisfactory sleeper accommodation coming back.

Albert Fuchs, Fanny Fuchs and John Hrudka, creditors of Walter Retzer, have petitioned to have him declared a bankrupt. The total liabilities, according to the creditors, are about $20,000, while they assert the assets amount to about $5,000. Several years ago Albert Fuchs sold his florist business to Retzer. His claim is $13,500. Henry L. Wilson was appointed receiver with $8,000 bonds. He will continue the business with the assistance of Mr. Retzer until action is taken by the court.

NEW YORK.

Last week, convention week, was a "frost" in the wholesale and retail florist trade of New York. Stock was abundant, prices too low for utterance, business hard to discover.

In Small's window the fountain and water lily effect still draws the pedestrian to the glass and holds him.

Thorley leans to Davalliodes and Farleyense. There isn't much novelty anywhere just yet.

Soon there will be the coal problem to solve by the multitude of growers who want to lay in their winter fuel. We have no natural gas down this way and haven't begun to burn oil. If the strike doesn't end soon we are surely "up against it!"

The "Ashevillians" are back, most of them well and happy. Not a word of complaint has been heard from one of the conventionists; everybody was delighted and surprised. The only "regretters" are the ones who did not go. I prophesied the choosing of Milwaukee in my notes last week. Now I ventur to predict an atterdance of 2 000 there, and 10 per cent of it from New York alone. It will be the convention of the generation.

H. H. Berger & Co.'s importation of over 150 cases of Holland bulbs, tulips, hyacinths and narcissus has just arrived in fine condition. Their supply of Harrisii at import prices is exhausted.

W. J. Elliott is at Northport, L. I., for a week's recreation.

Mr. A. Lange, of Chicago, and Mrs. Lange are visitors this week.

Miss Kitty Dowd, the popular bookkeeper at Chas. Millang's office, has returned from a two weeks' visit to the Catskills much benefited.

Jas. McManus exhibits in his Twenty-ninth street window a specimen of the new fern, "Anna Foster," which attracts much attention.

Miss Currick, bookkeeper for Young & Nugent, is summering at Newport and other eastern resorts.

The new firm of Bradshaw & Hartman, at 53 W. Twenty-eighth street, should make a strong combination. Mr. Bradshaw is one of the progressive wholesalers, who has rapidly built up a fine business.

The weather continues cool and agreeable. It's a year without a summer sure enough. We have forgotten what "100 degrees in the shade" means.

The convalescence of your venerable Edgar Sanders is very gratifying to his many friends here. We all hope to see him in Milwaukee in 1903.

Next comes our great flower show in Madison Square Garden. From now on there will be constant preparation. We expect to make it the greatest success in flower shows ever seen in America.

Millionaire Brokaw, of New York, has a fine country estate at Great Neck, L. I., which he is beautifying in a unique way by constructing a Japanese garden at a cost of $25,000.

AUSTIN SHAW.

BUFFALO TO DETROIT.

It was with considerable regret that I bade "Great Scott" a pleasant journey to Asheville. I felt I was a victim of circumstances in not being able to accompany him thither, feeling assured of a jolly and profitable time, for who has ever attended any of our gatherings without deriving some benefit therefrom. Mr. Scott's route lay south; I was heading westward, Jamestown being the first stop. Here I met genial Fred Dorner, son of the carnation wizard and active manager of the mammoth plant at La Fayette. We visited the Lake View Rose gardens, which in the distance has the appearance of a sea of glass. Carnations have suffered by the extremely wet season, but we consoled the indefatigable manager, Mr. Roney, by telling him that there are a host of others in the same boat. The new range, almost completed, was admired. In construction it is L shaped and comprises 100,000 square feet. The whole plant now forms a square and compact range of 600,000 square feet of glass, completing the original plan laid down by Mr. A. N. Broadhead, who has every reason to be gratified with the effect. After spending a pleasant hour we parted.

Erie being my next stop, I found Herbert Tong had left for Asheville to divert his thoughts from his hail-stricken place. His boys were diligently engaged in repairing, and by the time he returns all will be shipshape.

J. V. Laver was busy building a house for carnations, anxious to get it finished and planted in season. He has been in business three years and has built up a nice connection.

S. Alfred Baur is rebuilding about one-half his large place. Stock looks well. Carnations have done splendidly. I had no time to call on others of the craft, being bound for Cleveland, where I found a similar condition of affairs to those of Erie. Messrs. Hart and Graham were attending the convention. Isaac Kennedy was as busy as a bee on the new block of houses at Rocky River, where Mr. J. M. Gasser has run the original plant for several years most successfully. He is now taking a well-earned rest, leaving the care of the business in the capable hands of Messrs. Kennedy and Darnell. Rocky River is a romantic spot. Kennedy says it reminds him of the Wissahickon, and the fine Beauties he grows are fully equal to those that flourished under his care at John Burton's Directly east and distant about nine miles is the busy place owned by Aug. Schmitt, at Glenville. Here son Charlie, another Philadelphia gradnate, assists in the management. New houses are going up and everything is up to date. Stock looks fine.

On my way cityward I looked in on James Eadie, who was housing carnations, fine plants, Gov. Roosevelt especially so. Store men are not busy.

Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters, was away on an eastern trip. Miss Lulu Schmitt is leading saleslady at this flourishing establishment.

A most enjoyable sail by boat brought me to Toledo, where I found that industrious lady, Mrs. Suder, rushed with funeral work, having the lion's share of a large order. There were many artistic pieces.

A. F. Schramm has severed his connection with the old firm, being now located a short distance above on Cherry street. Says he has no kick coming, business being very good.

I missed Geo. A. Heinl, but understand he is as busy as ever.

At Detroit I found the genial Phil Breitmeyer and hustling Wm. Dilger had gone to join the hosts at Asheville.

Wm. Beard, the newly elected president of the Florists' Club, graced the meeting, at which I happened to be present, with his presence. I there met Walter Mott, of Jamestown, who had stopped off en route to Chicago and the corn fields of Nebraska. Walter reports encouraging business, especially in bulbs. Their local trade is increasing and is well taken care of by John A. Smith, another Philadelphia graduate.

George Rackham, the "Rag" of Detroit, led the way to the bowling alley, where we put up a good game and imagined what would be the result had we been with the craft at Asheville. Young Norman Sullivan is a demon bowler, a worthy son of a worthy sire. BISON.

GUTHRIE, OKLA.—The territorial convention of the agricultural and horticultural societies was held at Shawnee Aug. 13 and 14. The meeting was a very important one and was attended by delegates from all portions of the two territories. Joseph Meibergen, chairman of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, was in attendance, interesting the delegates to become exhibitors at the exposition.

THE SHOOTING CONTEST.

In the shooting contest at the Asheville convention the first event was for 15 birds, and the scores were as follows:

W. A. Hammond	14
W. K. Harris	14
Geo. Anderson	11
H. Brown	14
H. M. Altick	13
Edw. Reid	11
A. B. Cartledge	11
Wm. Scott	10

In shooting off the tie between the first four, Mr. Hammond won first, Mr. Harris second and Mr. Anderson third.

The second event was a shoot at 25 birds and the scores follow:

W. A. Hammond	24
H. M. Altick	24
W. K. Harris	23
Geo. Anderson	23
A. B. Cartledge	22
Edw. Reid	20
H. Brown	17
Wm. Scott	15

In shooting off the tie Mr. Altick won first and Mr. Hammond second. Mr. Harris was third.

Then came the match between a team composed of florists and another of Asheville shots, the latter winning by ten birds. The teams shot at 50 birds in two series of 25 each. The scores follow:

FLORISTS.

Geo. Anderson	20	19
W. K. Harris	24	23
Edw. Reid	15	18
W. A. Hammond	23	21
A. B. Cartledge	23	23

J. D. Carrier	23	22
D. Miller	21	23
W. S. Lusk	21	24
Totals	129	139
Grand Total		268

At the conclusion of the match the winners conceded that they had found worthy antagonists, and through Colonel Lusk expressed their pleasure and gratification in meeting their friends from the north. It was a very happy conclusion of a most enjoyable event.

BOWLING.

At Asheville the Cincinnati team arrived too late to play Wednesday evening, and by special arrangement they were allowed to play their series of games on Friday evening. The scores, which follow, did not, however, change any of the results announced in our report last week.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

State Vice-Presidents' Reports.

New Hampshire.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I take the keenest pleasure in doing a duty to the S. A. F. or any member of the same. As state vice-president it devolves upon me to perform a duty in making a report which I am in no wise competent to do: First, as a gardener on a private place I am not in close touch with the ups and downs of the trade. Second, to numerous letters of inquiry I received but one reply, which is disappointing to me, and a bad handicap besides; still it goes so far in showing us the "spirit" of the New Hampshire florist of today.

Within a short space of time, perhaps a little over a year, there has been considerable glass added. Manchester, Nashua and Dover take the lead in this respect, with the increased glass area; suffice it to say the trade must also have increased to support it, and trade is, I am happy to say, largely in excess of previous years in most localities, if not in all. A step in advance was taken by some of the largest places in this section last spring, by allowing eight hours to constitute a day's work every Saturday instead of ten hours. And to my way of thinking the florist and his men could accomplish more by working shorter hours and devoting more time to reading the trade journals, the daily papers and such literature, or, as Oliver Goldsmith has once said:

For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those that toil;
And all that freedom's highest aims can reach
Is but to lay proportioned loads on each.

There is not a florists' society or club of any kind in this state outside of the New Hampshire Horticultural Society. But I think it would be an easy matter to secure a goodly number of members, if such an organization were formed. And I will say with a reasonable assurance that we will have a lot of the New Hampshire boys woke up, ready to join you when you meet again on the New England end of Uncle Sam's domain.

BERNARD MORRIS,
State Vice-President for New Hampshire.

Wisconsin.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

The past year seemed to be one of general progress in the florists' trade. Nearly everything which was well grown found a ready market. The most noticeable increase was in the bedding line. Many of the smaller localities ties, where formerly little outdoor work was done, are now following ideas laid out in larger cities, and the demand for plants was in excess of supply. Growers and retailers all had a profitable season; and many new names appear in the list of florists. New establishments have been opened in cities where formerly there was no florist. The increase in glass throughout the state may foot up about 200,000 square feet. The continued high price of glass, however, deters many from making new additions.

Blooming plants are being called for as well as palms and ferns at most of the holidays, almost in excess of cut flowers, especially when prices for the latter are high. The outlook for next season is prosperous.

C. C. POLLWORTH,
State Vice-President for Wisconsin.

Canada.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

It is with pleasure that I report the most marked advance in the florists' business over any former year, the Christmas and New Year holiday trade being fully fifteen per cent better than ever before in our leading city, as well as country trade. The public seemed willing to pay any price for first-class stock, thus strongly supporting my contention that good work and service will always find appreciative and profitable recognition.

This happy condition of affairs will be an incentive to the trade to make quality the first consideration.

The supply of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in pans fell far short of the demand in Hamilton, Ottawa, Toronto, London and Montreal. Pans of primulas, three or four plants each, sold well, also all staple lines in cut flowers and decorative plants.

Palms, azaleas, ferns, cyclamens, primulas and bulbous stock sold well, and larger sales were made at advanced prices for high quality in roses, carnations and chrysanthemums.

The trade during January continued most satisfactory. Mignonette, sweet peas and bulbous stock were in small quantity, with an unusual supply of freesias, and plenty of violets and carnations. In Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa the supply of orchids was much under the demand.

Toronto trade was not affected by the Lenten season, and St. Valentine's day created exceptionally heavy demands for violets.

With the advancing season greater activity and hopefulness was manifested in all lines. Retail trade was good, with a plentiful supply of roses, carnations, violets and bulbous stock.

Montreal trade was dull after Easter, with an ample supply of all stocks, particularly bulbous, which was over-abundant. Violets sold well; asparagus and smilax were scarce.

Toronto business after Easter was good. Stocks were plentiful except violets, which were scarce and in good demand. Roses ruled somewhat cheaper. Sweet peas were coming in early in April.

All Toronto florists rejoiced over the Easter business, the aggregate sales in which were twelve per cent higher than last year, and never before had an Easter season shown better stock. Carnations were not over plentiful, but the fancies were splendid. Lily of the valley sold well and violets at good prices.

In plants there never was a better variety, and the appearance of the stores was never excelled.

Ottawa's Easter trade was very good, with the supply of stock equal to the demand, and all of which was of a satisfactory character.

With the opening season for outdoor work, the sale of bedding plants was very satisfactory, but I regret to report serious damage by late frosts to carnations in the field, as well as other stock.

On the whole, the season was backward, the severe late frosts being followed by continued cool and showery weather all through the month of June.

While not able to report any building of special note, I am able to refer to a general improvement and extension in existing plants, showing a general tendency toward increased facilities and production, with a healthy and hopeful progress all along the line.

H. H. GROFF.

Western Pennsylvania.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

The past season has been a highly successful one in every particular. Flowering and bedding plants sold away beyond expectations with red geraniums and French cannas in the lead. In the decorative line, palms and bay trees of larger sizes held first place. John Bader, of our city, having a large importation of both, sold out completely as did numerous other firms here.

I may mention that of the commonly-called "rubber plant" the sale reached such proportions as to make one think this plant has become almost a household necessity.

WILLIAM LOEW,
State Vice-President for Western Pennsylvania.

Connecticut.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

The reports from the leading florists of our state pronounce the year just passed a prosperous one in all respects, and the amount of cut flowers sold during the principal holidays, such as Christmas, Easter and Decoration day, is said to have exceeded by far all previous records, placing demand above supply.

The carnation keeps its place as most in demand and use, and a marked improvement in quality obtained of late has advanced the price in some places. During the entire winter season the demand for carnations in our cities exceeded the local supply, which was partly due to the fact that in spite of the healthy and promising condition of plants, flowers were not freely produced during the early part of the season. At the present time plants in the field and housed look very promising, and no complaints are heard or stem-rot and other diseases. George Osborn, of Hartford, has grown the best carnations in this section of the country. His Lawson, Estelle, White Cloud, Queen Louise, Mrs. Bradt, Eldorado, California Gold, etc., were of unusually large size and simply perfect in build and color, and they commanded advanced prices. The orders received by him in advance exceeded at all times the possible output of his establishment, which clearly shows that the flower-loving public appreciate good products and qualities and are willing to pay for them.

Roses, violets and other cut flowers held their own well, and products and sales were satisfactory. Considering the advanced cost of material and labor, affecting all trades alike, there should be an all around increase in the price of cut flowers and plants, but, generally speaking, such advance is not noticeable. Pot plants have been somewhat in increased demand, especially in rubber plants, begonias, hydrangeas, and, above all, ferns, the Boston fern leading as favorite.

The sale of bedding plants has been in most places about the same as in previous years, and but a small increase in that line is noticeable in some localities. On the other hand, the demand for hardy plants shows a decided advance, and the nurserymen have been doing a good business along all lines. Ornamental shrubs and trees, both coniferous and deciduous, are used profusively in the decoration of home grounds all over the country, and the homes are very few which do not show some acquirement from the nurserymen which a few years ago were little or unknown. True, such plants as Crimson Rambler rose, Clematis paniculata, Hydrangea p. g., etc., are used so universally as to justify the term of "overdoing it" by the cross country traveler, but from a point of view of the individual owner his selection and taste is good and his progressive spirit to make his home attractive, praiseworthy. The demand for herbaceous plants is steadily increasing and the hardy flower garden is coming more and more into deserving prominence.

Greenhouse building has been going on all over the state, although possibly not in the measure which the prosperous business period just passed and the confidently expected increased demand for cut flowers would seemingly warrant.

In Hartford, J. Coombs has added another carnation house to the two built a year ago, 27x150 feet, and has now 90,000 square feet of glass, the output of which covers only two-thirds of the sales at his store.

G. F. Heublein & Bro. are building a handsome store and adjoining conservatory opposite their hotel on Gold street. The structure promises to be the handsomest building of its kind between New York and Boston. This attractive new establishment is expected to fill a long felt want in the keeping of larger palms and other ornamental plants for decorative purposes, and under proper management the undertaking is promised a bright future.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, built one house 50x60 for lilies, one 23x400 for general plant stock, and one 35x400 for rose stock, all at his old plant, where he is at present constructing a new central heating system with nine tubular boilers to take care of the whole 300,000 feet of glass. His new plant built some two years ago contains 200,000 feet, and the output of the whole establishment, both in cut flowers and plants, is something enormous. It might be interesting to give a few figures, viz.:

June 1, 1901, to June 1, 1902.

Cut roses	1,077,574
Cut carnations	246,913
Chrysanthemums	70,094
Lily of the valley	741,867

In Bridgeport, Stephen D. Horan is rebuilding about 10,000 feet of glass; and other new houses and improvements are going on in a number of other places, showing progressive times and people.

Social organizations for the betterment and advancement of our noble profession and the creation and furtherance of good will and sociability amongst the craft, our state has but few, and the want and need of such is fully recognized by some of the leading and progressive florists and horticulturists of the state.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society is the leading society in the state, is doing good work at its regular meetings and through its exhibitions, and is at present preparing for the largest and most complete show in the history of the society, to take place this coming fall.

Out of the ruins of the once flourishing Connecticut Horticultural Society at Hartford has come a new growth of seemingly vigorous, ambitious blood, with modern tendencies and ideas, progressive qualities and intentions. This young plant has been christened the "Hartford Florist Club," and although its members are but few in number, the club can look back with great satisfaction upon the work accomplished during the short period of its existence.

These two associations it is hoped will establish and maintain closer relationship in the future, a beginning to that effect having been made, and a notable event in the history of both societies, the memory of which will long live with those that took part, was an outing to beautiful "Hubbard Park," Meriden, Conn. Meriden being half way between New Haven and Hartford, the two clubs met at the park, where they were received by Mr. Walter Hubbard, the board of park commissioners, and the mayor.

Under the kind guidance of those gentlemen, this magnificent Mountain Park, containing in all over 1,000 acres, the generous gift to the prosperous, progressive town of Meriden by its first citizen, Mr. Walter Hubbard, was inspected in all directions, and the climbing of the lofty heights of Fairview, Castle Craig, and West Peak on the famous hanging hills of Meriden, 1,000 feet above the sea level, was accomplished in good time and with the enthusiastic spirit of an advancing unresistable army corps, at the head of which was our W. J. Stewart, who, by the way, acted as chaperon by bringing the New Haven boys on and the Hartford boys home. The magnificent view over the hilly country for thirty miles around, together with the attractive natural sceneries of the park itself, was greatly enjoyed and admired by all those present, and the splendid and liberal hospitality shown us by our hosts could not help but overcome all feeling of tiredness and exertion of even the unexperienced mountain climbers.

This sociable outing and meeting of our two societies will lead on to combined working in the large field of possibilities before the craft in general, and the occasion very forcibly impressed on me the thought what good work florist clubs and horticultural societies could do in interesting themselves and in taking the creating and leading part in all movements for municipal improvements, especially in the development and ornamentation of public grounds and streets.

The far-reaching educational value of parks and well-developed and maintained public grounds and streets is recognized by all observing people, and our small state of Connecticut is in a position to show the beneficial influence such improvements have on the home grounds of its citizens. Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport, New London, Middletown, Waterbury and Willimantic can give convincing proofs for this statement.

True, not many towns and cities are so fortunate as to have so public spirited citizens as has Meriden and Hartford, for instance, where the gifts of noble men have not only opened the way for such acquirements and improvements, but have developed them to stay and to be forever a blessing to the human race, but every city, town and village has endless opportunities and possibilities for municipal development on such lines, and it is astonishing to see how in many instances the progressive and active leadership of a few men can awaken public spirit and pride to such an extent as to make the seemingly impossible not only feasible, but even easily accomplished.

The close, intimate relationship to nature which we all enjoy in the following of our chosen noble profession does not only qualify us to take a leading part in all such improvements, but strongly suggests that we take the initiative in that direction. Let us think of the good we can do by showing how to take care of our trees, at this very time when numerous devastating insects are threatening to shorten their lives. Let us show what can be done for the present and coming generations by improving and planting our schoolhouse-grounds, giving thereby object lessons which will surely bear fruit, since they will be started in the retentive and productive mind of what will some twenty years from now be the hopeful, progressive working element, the stay of our nation. Let us branch out of the narrow single track of progress, which has as its destination commercial advancement of our trade and personal gain to the acquirement of professional knowledge and experience, and let each society that follows the banner of our national association adopt as one of its fundamental aims the ideal purpose of being a strong helping hand in the municipal development of our communities. It will not only be to our credit and of benefit to our beloved country, but it will bear compound interest in return. I do not say that nothing is done in that direction at present, but I do say, let us do more of it.

THEODORE WIRTH,
State Vice-President for Connecticut.

District of Columbia.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I have the honor to report that the past year has been extremely satisfactory to the florists of the District of Columbia in many respects. All report business for the past year as very satisfactory and all are busy preparing and planning to handle the expected increase of trade during the coming season. Several growers are adding new houses to their present range this year, and others rebuilding old houses in order to keep up with the demand for cut flowers and plants.

Extensive alterations are going on at the White House greenhouses at present. Nearly all of the old houses will be pulled down and a new range of houses erected at another location of the grounds. This was made necessary by the building of new offices for the President which will occupy the ground where part of the greenhouses were located. The removal has caused Mr. Pfister, the head-gardener, considerable trouble, as he had no other houses to move his splendid collection of plants to, but had to stand them around the grounds underneath trees, etc., until suitable quarters could be completed to house them.

Florists who have handled rose, Queen of Edgely, report sales of this rose as good and think that there is a place for it. Killarney is another new rose that has been much admired by ladies of good taste and the florist who grows for the better class of flower buyers should give this rose a trial. It is a fine shell pink, shaded silver, with a good stem, and of fine lasting qualities. Some object to it because of its being a semi-double rose and not quite full enough, but here lies one of its good qualities. It is a departure, or, if you prefer, a retrogression from the florists' rose of the present day, but this is what we need—greater variety of flowers in color and shape, and I believe this a break in the right direction. The new rose, Ivory, is one of the finest forcing roses that has ever been introduced. It is a sport from Golden Gate and is identical with that variety in growth and free blooming qualities, but the color is a fine ivory white, hence its name. Another rose that will be introduced soon by the same firm who introduced Ivory, is Alice Roosevelt. This rose made its debut in Washington last winter and has been much admired by the elite of Washington society; it is a sport from Mme. Abel Chatenay. With all this variety's good points and being of a glowing pink color, it is especially desirable for night work. In new climbing roses of recent introduction, Dorothy Perkins stands out preeminently. It is a hybrid between Rosa Wichuraiana and Mme. Gabriel Luizet; it has the climbing or training habit of Wichuraiana with the beautiful lustrous pink of Luizet; it flowers in clusters of from twenty to forty, the individual flowers averaging one inch in diameter; it is of similar habit to Crimson Rambler and will prove an excellent forcing rose as a pot plant.

Another new plant of recent introduction is Philadelphus Boul d'Argent, or double mock orange. This will prove to be a desirable plant for winter forcing; it is dwarfer and more spreading than P. coronarius with smaller leaves flowering in terminal corymbs of four or more flowers, each about one inch in diameter.

Peonies have been coming rapidly to the front during the past few years. Blooming as they do with us about Decoration day, they prove very acceptable at that time. Several of the florists are adding to their collection of this desirable plant.

An interesting and successful experiment was made here last spring in the shading of hybrid perpetual roses in the open ground. The aim was to keep off our hot suns that prove such a drawback to the successful culture of the rose in the open ground around Washington. A frame work of pipe was erected and over this cheesecloth was stretched and by means of ropes and pulleys the cloth could be rolled up or down at will. The results were larger flowers, longer stems and very much better color. The experiment was so successful that more roses will be covered next year in the same way. The first cost of the material is trifling compared to the fine results obtained and the cloth will evidently last for several seasons. I would strongly advise florists to give this method a trial and I am sure they will be well repaid in the finer blooms obtained.

In dahlias a few of our growers have been growing Standard Bearer with good success and have never been able to fill the demand for this variety. This is one of the true cactus type, flowers of brightest scarlet, and seems to quite capture the ladies' fancy. You hear exclamations of delight wherever this variety is shown. It succeeds very well here, flowering continually, and, unlike most cactus dahlias, the flowers are born on long stems and therefore prove a good florists' flower. A fine companion to the foregoing is Mrs. Peart, also a true cactus dahlia; color, creamy white; a very satisfactory sort. A fitting companion to the preceding two, but of the decorative dahlia type, is Grand Duke Alexis, of large size and distinct form; color, pure white delicately tinged with pink; it proves a fine selling flower.

No report from the District of Columbia would be complete that omitted mention of the great work being done by the Department of Agriculture for the benefit of the florist. I am indebted to Prof. A. F. Woods, Pathologist and Physiologist of the Bureau of Seed and Plant Introduction, Department of Agriculture, for the following synopsis of the work of the department on the nematoid of the rose and violet.

For the past year the pathologists of the department have been endeavoring to find some method of fighting the eel-worm, or nematoid. After testing a great many substances supposed to kill these worms, it has been found that the best material to use is a diluted solution of formaldehyde, about one per cent solution being sufficient to very quickly kill any nematoid touched by it. On extensive experiment in the treatment of the root nematoid of roses carried out by Mr. J. Louis Loose of Washington, in accordance with the directions furnished by the Department, was very successful. The treatment was made on February 10th, including plants of several varieties, namely, The Bride, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Nephetos, American Beauty, Liberty and Meteor. The solution was made up on a scale of four pounds of the commercial formaldehyde to fifty gallons of water. Fifteen thousand plants were treated, requiring about 200 pounds of formaldehyde, costing 18 cents per pound. The mixture was applied with a hose connected to a force pump. While at first all the young feeding roots that the plants had, as well as the nematoid galls and nematoidea in the soil were killed, the treated plants soon grew out of the set-back and formed fine, new feeding roots, while the untreated plants remained stunted and diseased.

For bud nematoid of the violet, they have found that this nematoid is also very easily killed by formalin, although it is not practicable to use formalin on the plants. About all that can be done in order to fight this pest is to carefully throw out of the stock every plant showing any sign of bud nematoid; it should be pulled out and destroyed, otherwise the disease will spread from plant to plant. It does no good to cut out the diseased part. Nematoid is easily killed by drying and it is therefore suggested that houses in which the disease has appeared be run rather dry, especially permitting the surface soil to dry and keeping it in the form of a dry mulch. Heavy shading is undesirable in cases where the disease has appeared, as under such conditions nematoidea getting upon the surface of the soil and on exposed places on the leaves will not be destroyed, whereas, if they are exposed to the sunlight they are likely to become dried up and die.

I am very glad to be able to say that at a meeting of the florists of the District of Columbia held on the 31st of July, the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., was once more brought to life and started on what we all hope will be a long life of usefulness and prosperity for the good of the trade in general, and welfare of its members in particular.

PETER BISSET,
State Vice-President for the District of Columbia.

Northern Ohio.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

Another year has passed around since the Society of American Florists met in convention at Buffalo, N. Y. I, as your state vice-president for northern Ohio, am pleased to say that with the florists about here this year has been a prosperous one, and the twentieth century opens with prosperity for the florists who are alive and up-to-date, and who keep pace with the times. You can easily tell the florist who is not prosperous by his surroundings. Enter his establishment, and we find everything topsy-turvy—old wire designs lying around, broken glass, old boards, piles of broken pots, etc. His make-shift of a desk is covered with old papers, letters, books, catalogues, etc., and all this covered with dust and cobwebs, and with barely room enough on which to write an order when he gets one; tools lying about; with no special place for them, they are dropped wherever the person using them happens to be, and the next one wanting the tools will have to spend half of his time hunting for them. This kind of a place reminds one more of a second-class junk-shop than a prosperous greenhouse establishment, and indicates a slovenly, shiftless business man. We have many such in our ranks, and I hope if any of this class read these lines they will take the hint that they are meant by these remarks to profit by the same, and will try to bring themselves and their business up to the standing at which they ought to be in the commercial world—in the foremost rank. For is he not the cultivator of the beauties of nature? Therefore he should by his surroundings show the truth of this, and that he appreciates the fact that the florist business is one of the most elevating and refining of all occupations.

There was a marked increase in the demand for first-class flowers during the holidays. Nothing was too good, and stock brought an equivalent price. The holiday business, in fact, the florist business during the whole year, has been much better than formerly. I think I can with safety say that there has been an average increase of 25 per cent over that of any previous year.

At a Farmers' Institute held in Tiffin by the Agricultural Society of Seneca County, under the auspices of the State Agricultural Department, an article on floriculture was delivered by your humble servant, in which particular stress was placed on beautifying the grounds surrounding farmers' homes. Among other things mentioned were rose beds, in which the plants from the benches of our rose houses were recommended. This proved very fruitful. We succeeded in selling about 2,500 of Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate, Perle des Jardins, which paid very well for the time it took to get up the address before the Institute. We sold the plants at the rate of 15c. each, whether one or more was taken; and selling the number we did in so short a time, it paid much better than throwing the plants on a heap and burning them up. I have made it a point to inquire as to the result, and universally the buyers are well pleased, as the roses are blooming profusely. This sale of stock which is usually considered worthless assisted very materially in replanting our rose houses for the coming season.

There is an increased demand for perennials, especially among the farming community.

The season was very backward, cold and rainy weather prevailing, which, when it did let up, brought the work all into a bunch. Everybody wanted their bedding done first. The increased demand for porch and window boxes, hanging baskets and general bedding, made the florist who had a good deal of that kind of work to do exert himself in order to please all his customers. The demand has been so brisk with most of the florists in this section that by the first of July they were all pretty well sold out of bedding stock, getting better prices, and having less trouble to collect outstanding accounts.

Those of the craft who more or less extensively grow cut flowers have at this date nearly all of their rose houses planted, and some are making preparations to house carnations. So far as I have heard, the carnations in the field are looking well, with few exceptions, where they were planted on low land, and were covered with water caused by the overflow of streams swelled beyond their capacity by the rains. In such places the growers are losing some plants by stem-rot. With me, the overflow took the soil from one end of the field, leaving the plants upon stilts, as it were, and burying them at the other end, so that after the water had receded one could see only an occasional leaf sticking through the mud. These had to be uncovered, and the surplus soil hauled back to where the water had brought it from and put around the plants from which it was taken. Doing this work promptly and carefully, my loss was but slight. Had the sun shone my loss would have been greater; but for three days following this severe rain storm the weather was cloudy, so that the plants which had their roots exposed did not suffer. I lost a few plants which were covered with soil too long; we could not handle them until the water had drained off, which was a slow process in some parts of the field, and the plants rotted.

Quite a number of florists about here are very much troubled with thrips on their roses and carnations, principally the latter; we never before have known the pest so destructive as this season.

LEWIS ULRICH.
State Vice-President for Northern Ohio.

New York, East.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

As state vice-president, it is again my privilege to make a report of the work of the past year.

Generally speaking, trade has been satisfactory in all lines connected with the florist's business.

Among the greenhouse builders business is now brisk. While there has been a considerable increase in the building trade over last year, there is very little difference in New York State, the increase being elsewhere. In our section no commercial greenhouses of any consequence are being erected, but in New Jersey several contracts have been given out for large ranges. The product of these will be shipped to the New York market to be sold; in fact, most of our roses come from New Jersey. This season's building among the private estates has been an exceedingly busy one.

There is no likelihood of a reduction in building material, but it looks very much as if there will be an increase in wrought and cast iron and steel, and all articles made therefrom before the end of this year. While the price of glass was down a little, it is now rumored prices will be advanced considerably.

In cut flowers the fall trade was very good until the chrysanthemums arrived; then business slackened up considerably. Thanksgiving day turned out the same as usual, with plenty of flowers, and quantities of chrysanthemums, prices being fair. Chrysanthemums this season were cheaper than ever before, and the supply lasted far into December.

Large quantities of Boston ferns and rubber plants were sold last year, some being disposed of very cheap.

Christmas trade was satisfactory. On that day the cut flower business was very slow until after midnight, then it improved, with a rush for high-grade stock, which brought exceptionally good prices, a few choice Bridesmaid roses bringing 75c. each. American Beauties were overstocked and prices were lower than last year.

The supply of carnations was satisfactory, the fancy grades bringing high figures.

Christmas greens were cleaned up in most places.

The plant trade, which exceeds the cut flower trade at Christmas, was very heavy. Poinsettias, azaleas, Lorraine begonias, peppers, aucubas, dracaenas, ardisias, heaths, orchids, and crotons were in evidence, and sold well. Oranges and imported hollies found a ready sale.

The demand for fruiting plants seems to be on the increase.

New Year's trade amounts to a good Saturday's business, no preparation being made now for this holiday.

The Easter trade, which was the best on record for the plant grower, experienced a set-back through the rain on the previous Friday and Saturday.

Lilies cleaned out well at good prices, as did azaleas. These two plants exceed all the others combined in quantity. There was the usual number of genistas, Crimson Rambler roses, hydrangeas, lilacs, rhododendrons, bougainvilleas, hybrid roses, acacias, hyacinths, daffodils, lily of the valley and violets in pots to be sold.

There is not much to be said about the cut flower trade, as most of the stock had been held back, and no reasonable offer was refused, although the better qualities of roses and carnations sold well.

There were cartloads of violets shipped, some of which had been held back for weeks, and sold for $1.00 per 1,000. After the weather cleared and the sun came out, and the retailers felt it would remain so, good violets were called for and found to be the scarcest article to be had.

Bulbous stock, cut, was a complete drug.

The florists' supply dealers speak encouragingly of the business they have done, and from all reports it is on the increase.

The auction houses have been well attended this year. While the prices were not up to those of last year, the number of plants sold exceeded that of all previous years, and the outlook is very encouraging for a good fall business. The demand for salvias seemed to be in the lead, with named cannas a good second.

The seedsmen report a brisk spring business.

There appears to be a special demand for shrubs and hardy plants; also seeds of the latter.

In suburban gardens the tendency is to plant shrubs and hardy herbaceous plants which do not require to be transplanted each year. The prospects for the fall seem bright; advance orders are being placed more freely for all lines of bulbous stock, and in most cases at higher prices than formerly.

The demand for hardy lilies has been especially noticeable; amongst these are all the native lilies of California.

The retail trade has had its share of prosperity. The Bridesmaid is still the most popular and best-selling rose with them; American Beauties and orchids are in greater demand with the leading florists. Lily of the valley was in large demand, but the sale of general bulbous stock is falling off with first-class houses.

The demand for cut carnations has greatly increased, good people refusing to buy the cheaper varieties.

Rose growers have had a good, steady sale for their stock; while prices were not so high as in former years, they were firmer throughout the season. New plantings are doing well. Some rose men are growing American Beauty extensively this year, as that rose was in brisk demand the past season.

Carnation men have passed through one of the best seasons that they ever had, and are now preparing for a better one. The stock in the field is looking very fine, and by this time most of the houses are planted. The varieties that will be grown extensively next year will be Mrs. Lawson, Gov. Roosevelt, Wm. Scott, Corna, Harry Fenn, Viola Allen, J. H. Manley, G. H. Crane, Morning Glory, Golden Beauty, Mrs. Bradt, Prosperity, Floriana, Flora Hill, Lizzie McGowan and White Cloud.

Some men who have experimented planting direct into the greenhouses have been successful in getting a full growth. The carnation center for the East is now on Long Island.

Violets have maintained a good price throughout for first quality. The crop the past season was very large. The violet center to-day is at Rhinebeck, N. Y. One builder alone got out material for 75,000 square feet. The plants are looking very well at present, and the violet men expect a tremendous crop for the coming year. We have reached a higher standard now, and the public is educated right up to the mark, and will only buy the best; so if the small grower will continue to produce inferior blooms, he will surely go to the wall.

Through the efforts of the Department of Agriculture at Washington it is possible to-day to grow violets in old houses year after year, by using a remedy in hydrocyanic acid gas, that destroys all insect life. Violets will not stand tobacco in any form. With plenty of new soil and your houses so arranged that you can ventilate from the outside, you ought to have no trouble to get the quality.

The American Rose Society held its annual show at the Berkeley Lyceum, New York. It was a creditable show, with a fair attendance. The society meets in Philadelphia next year, where its exhibition will also be held.

The Horticultural Society of New York, in conjunction with the New York Botanical Garden, held an exhibition in the museum of the garden in June last, where the $50 award of the society was made to Nephrolepis Piersoni, a sport of the well-known Boston fern.

The New York Committee of the Chrysanthemum Society of America met at its usual stated periods, and awarded certificates to the following varieties: Chemo and John R. Weir. Fewer varieties were exhibited before this committee the past chrysanthemum season than heretofore.

The New York Florists' Club will hold a grand exhibition of flowers, fruits, plants and vegetables in Madison Square Garden, October 30 to November 6, 1902. In connection with this show the American Sculpture Society will make a display of sculpture work, the combination creating an exhibition unexcelled in the metropolis.

The club now publishes in pamphlet form the papers read before it during the year; exhibitions of flowers are also made monthly. The attendance has been gratifying, and the association continues on a good working basis.

A plant-breeding conference under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held in Manhattan in September next. Prominent scientists and practical horticulturists will read papers, and a most instructive program has been prepared.

The Brooklyn Horticultural Society was organized in June last, to carry on the work preparatory to the coming convention and meeting of the American Carnation Society, which will be held in Brooklyn in February next. A grand display of the divine flower will be forthcoming. The Horticultural Society will be a permanent institution.

The death roll includes the following names:

Chas. H. Downie, prominent seedsman.

John Fitzgerald, wholesale florist, New York City.

M. J. Lynch, of Poughkeepsie, violet grower.

A. C. McConnell, retail florist, New York.

Victor Dorval, salesman.

The New York Cut Flower Exchange has taken quarters in the Coogan Building, Sixth avenue and Twenty-sixth street. The market is now opened at 6 a. m. The East Thirty-fourth street market is still continued. Respectfully submitted.

ALFRED H. LANGJAHR.
State Vice-President for New York, East.

New Jersey.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

Lying as our state does in the direct line of communication between two great cities of America, with four lines of railways crossing the entire state, it finds a ready market for its products in both. This has tended to make it an important factor horticulturally, floriculturally and commercially.

In the elevated and rocky districts comprising the north and north middle counties known as the Newark and Orange Mountains and the Palisades of the Hudson, are found many of the largest rose growing establishments in the country, while the broad sandy plains of the southern part is favorable to the carnation and growing of nursery stock. We have three of the largest orchid raisers in the country and our three largest nurseries of trees and ornamental plants have a universal reputation. While closely allied to its two near neighbors, whose market is also ours, we yet have much that is characteristic and individual. Our state has furnished a president to the S. A. F. and O. H. and helped to officer both it and the Rose, Carnation and Chrysanthemum societies.

For her private estates and the skill of her private gardeners she has always been celebrated, and her parks, though recent, will be visited for the great beauty of their natural scenery and remarkable extent of view. One of these parks it is said, overlooks one-quarter of the population of our country and the prospect is limited only by human power of vision.

During the past year the output of roses sent from some of its rose-houses to the New York market has doubled. The flowers consist of the usual varieties. Its yield of carnations and chrysanthemums has grown and its trade from latest reports is steadily increasing. An advance is claimed in improved cultivation of the orchid so as to control the season of bloom, and orders are reported from outside the state as far as New Orleans and Chicago, one wedding bouquet last winter returning the grower the sum of fifty dollars. During the past rainy season the growth of labiata has been considerably retarded.

The influences which have helped this increase of prosperity are due to the superior organization of the commission trade assisting the shipments from one market to another, and rendering prices of staples less variable; to the floral press in an increased opportunity of reaching distant points; to the growing love of flowers in those communities where so-called nature study forms part of the school curriculum; the activity of our experimental station in the use of bulletins and public addresses given by its staff, and the increased attention of current periodical literature to flower cultivation in the house. One indication of this is the appearance of plant room and conservatory in the new houses now building even at the seashore, where the use of the house is for but a portion of the year.

The increase of local trade can be clearly traced in neighborhoods where there are active horticultural societies and clubs whose addresses and exhibitions are frequently society features, and very largely to the influence of our public parks, particularly in Essex, Passaic, Hudson and Monmouth counties, though in the first the matter has been overdone and is suffering a reaction at the present time. Any effort made to further the work along these lines by the S. A. F. and O. H. must tend to materially benefit, individually, and our standing, horticulturally.

While there has been a decided falling off in the small grower (that is, under 1,000 square feet of glass), except where saved by a local trade, and also a few florists, this has been compensated by the increase in glass area by larger concerns. The incorporation of one stock company with a capital of $85,000 is to be noted, as also the phenomenal growth of some of our youngest houses in the trade, notably in decorative plants. There is no reason why with four of the largest houses, three in the eastern and one in the western part of the state, that New Jersey should not largely influence the market in the coming year.

An increased demand for young apple and pear trees for fall planting is reported even to the extent of exhausting the stock of firsts, and a decided increase in herbaceous plants and hardy annuals, particularly the Japanese iris. There are still three active Japanese firms in our state, but the business in Japanese freak products has lost its grip and now the sales are assisted by the "Japanese ball game," with plants as prizes. Introductions of Japanese products of merit by our own trade are meeting with fair sales.

While we have no public botanical garden, and have received only the most meager state encouragement, the appropriation voted for our State Horticultural Societies' display at Buffalo, being ridiculously inadequate, yet our Agricultural Experimental station during the past year has prosecuted its investigations still further into plant diseases and has furnished bulletin and address whenever applied for. One house will be devoted to remedies for mildew this coming season, and much space to the crossing of ornamental plants. Much of the energy displayed being due to the activity of an able superintendent. Attention of legislatures should be brought to the importance of our horticultural and floricultural interests to the state, and copies of our proceedings should be placed so as to be accessible to them.

Both of our private and commercial houses have been schools in the past and have furnished growers all over the country. At the present time in one of the largest rose-houses are young men "doing time" from New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Michigan, while many very interesting papers covering a wide range of subjects have been given before our own societies, and also given by Jerseymen before societies in other states, and duly noticed by the floral press, yet only one published book in the past year is to be reported by a Jerseyman, notably, "Live Covers for Country Homes," by Prof. Byron D. Halsted.

Many prizes have been taken during the past year, among others for merit may be mentioned John N. May, J. R. Mitchell, Robert Simpson, E. Waller, H. C. Steinhoff, Dale Estate and Peter Duff.

Among those who have introduced new flowers are John N. May of Summit, rose Mrs. Oliver Ames, and J. H. Horsburgh, of Elizabeth, a new geranium, J. F. Cleary. Inventions have been made by Theron Parker of Harrison, of a glazing point, a tomato support and a folding trellis.

A few have passed away, but since the death of William McMillan, none have been followed with more respect to the grave than Thomas Young, Sr., in May last, at the age of 84 years.

The donation of land by private citizens for public parks should be mentioned. While many have taken place prior, yet during the past month, Mr. C. W. Anderson of Upper Montclair has donated a strip of probably twenty acres to the township.

On the whole the business of the past year marks an advance in glass surface and an increase in production with steady prices. It is impossible to discriminate by name any flower, so much depending upon the skill of the grower, and any healthy plant of acknowledged merit will bear continuously and brings a price. Educational influences are at work, not alone as part of school and high school curriculum for children, but our societies are doing much by furnishing speakers, our agricultural station by bulletins and speakers, our own society by its report so widely distributed and noticed, and by an intelligent and ever practical floral press. This with the objective teaching of our public parks and private estates is over and over advancing the importance and excellence of the craft we love so well.

Material assistance is recognized to Messrs. W. J. Stewart, Alexander Wallace, Patrick O'Mara, Prof. Byron D. Halsted, the Universal Horticultural Establishment and Chestnut Hill Nursery.

JOSEPH B. DAVIS.
State Vice President for New Jersey.

West Virginia.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I have the honor as well as the pleasure of making the first report from our small but prosperous mountain state. This state has passed through one of the most prosperous years in the history of horticulture; all florists seem to be well satisfied with the business done the past year.

Bedding plants were sold out cleaner than ever before; cannas are taking a leading part in bedding plants; prices have been satisfactory. In cut flowers this state has never been able to supply the demand and a great many are shipped here from adjoining states. In cut flowers carnations take the lead and bring good prices; during holidays good carnations bring as high as $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen, the average price during the winter being 75c. to $1.00 per dozen. There was a big demand for cut flowers until late in the spring. Easter trade was very good; there was a great demand for potted plants and everything in that line was sold out.

There has been a great deal of glass added by several firms this season, one firm alone adding about 10,000 feet of glass.

Chrysanthemums are looking well. There seems to be a better sale for them in the last few years than there has been. Carnations are doing fine; the season here, it seems, has been just right with a good rain about once a week.

There has been hail all over this section this summer, but the florists have been lucky enough not to be damaged much by it. Brother florists, "better lock your stable before the horse is stolen."

Would like to mention that this state shows good opportunity to some enterprising young men who would like to start into business for themselves, as this state is growing very rapidly and many small towns could and would support a florist, for each new greenhouse in a new town creates a demand for more flowers.

It is very hard to get new members for the S. A. F., but I think we have some of them stirred up and by keeping at them may yet succeed in lining them up and bring them into the society that they may be benefited by our organization.

G. OBERMEYER.
State Vice-President for West Virginia.

Rhode Island.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

Trade in general has been up to the average, the prevailing feeling being that we have had a prosperous year. Although business was dull during the early fall, after Thanksgiving it kept up quite well. Chrysanthemums came in during their season in fine shape but the market was overstocked with them and consequently the prices were not up as high as they ought to have been.

After Thanksgiving business took a start and kept up well even through Lent. Christmas trade was very good with a scarcity of finer flowers and an over abundance of bulbous stock The plant trade was an increase over last year and anything with fruit or flowers sold well.

After the holidays there was not as much of a check in business as in former years and with a steady supply of first-class stock business held up well through Easter.

The weather conditions before Easter were very fine and consequently the market was supplied with first-class stock. Lilies, in pots as well as cut blooms, sold very well. Had it not been for a stormy Saturday preceding Easter Sunday, there would have been still more business done; but thanks for so many orders being taken in advance, stock was pretty well cleaned up during Sunday morning.

The spring trade started late on account of cold weather, but when the warm weather did come plants sold very well. On Decoration day there were a great amount of bouquets, ready made up, sold in the city of Providence on an advance over the price of former years. This was brought about by the retailers combining and arranging a price which was fair and which allowed them to make a creditable bouquet.

Trade held up well into the summer and our numerous fashionable shore resorts still take care of any good stock to be had. American Beauty and Liberty roses find a better market than in former years and Boston fern is still a great favorite.

The florist business is on the increase in Little Rhody; there is an abundant supply for our own state and still enough of first-class stock left to ship into other states.

Before another year, if material is in reach, we expect to have some additions as well as new places to report.

LOUIS REUTER.
State Vice-President for Rhode Island.

North Carolina.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

Only one new point has come to our notice, the Abies Arizonica argentia (silver cork fir), introduced by Pinehurst Nurseries.

The largest increase of glass structures is at Pomona. J. Van Lindley & Co. have added two new houses; one for general stock, 16x84, and one for carnations, 16x216. There is also increase of glass at Raleigh, Wilmington and other points.

There is an increased demand for roses, evergreens and shrubbery, showing a healthy growth of the desire on the part of our people for permanent improvement of their houses. There is also an increased demand for palms, ferns and other stock for house decoration, and a slight decrease in the demand for summer bedding stock.

The demand for cut flowers shows a healthy and steady increase, especially for funeral work. There is call for a better quality of stock. This branch of the business in North Carolina had a long and slow struggle for existence. With a climate that gives flowers outdoors for about ten months in the year, and every home in city, town and village with more or less pretension to a flower garden, it was hard to make people believe that flowers had any money value, but some of us have been sowing seed for the last thirty years and the reaping day has come at last, and others have entered into the harvest and we will all rejoice together.

The struggle for existence amongst our people for the past thirty-five years has very largely prevented much being done in landscape gardening, but our people have met with good success in their business and are now turning their attention to building fine houses and surrounding them with beautiful grounds. The work done at Biltmore, which we will all be privileged to see, has done very much to revive the love for this branch of horticulture. I say revive, because in the old days it was here this work flourished, and we will again take our proper place in the front in gardening out of doors

The extremely dry spring and summer has, we fear, cut short the prospect for a full crop of bulbs. And just here we would say that the desire to get cheap stock on the part of at least some of the wholesale houses at the North has done much to demoralize this branch of the business. Giving contracts to farmers having no knowledge of the work has flooded the market with very inferior stock and has run prices below what really carefully grown bulbs can be produced for. Be careful, gentlemen, or the goose may be killed. And now, lest I weary you, I will close by saying: Welcome to North Carolina, the only state in the Union that can fill every blank sent out by the Department of Agriculture.

JAMES M. LAMB.
Vice-President for North Carolina.

Indiana.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

Amount of glass erected this season is 89,000 square feet.

Horticultural events: Meeting of American Carnation Society, Feb. 17 to 20 last.

Progress: This season has proved most remarkable in several respects. First, for general excellence of stock grown; second, for phenomenal amount of business done; third, for unprecedented demand for first-class stuff.

Easter and spring business was the best in the history of the trade.

GEO. B. WIEGAND.
State Vice-President for Indiana.

Iowa.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

The reports from a large percentage of the florists, covering nearly all sections of the state, show the past season to have been a prosperous one and averaging better than 1901, the greatest gain being in the cut flower department. The increase in sales, from reports now in, is about 27 per cent., with some advance in prices. There has also been an increased demand for palms and ferns, and bedding plants show some gains, while miscellaneous plants, etc., barely hold their ground. Carnations in the field are generally reported in excellent condition with very little loss from the heavy rains of the past three months. Other growing crops are also in good condition generally.

The losses by hail so far are very light, but Bro. Esler will know better about this. The amount of building reported so far is about 100,000 feet of glass, but this will probably be doubled, besides a considerable amount of remodeling and repairing done However, the high price of glass and iron will prevent some from enlarging their plants for the present.

W. A. HARKETT.
State Vice-President for Iowa.

Kentucky.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I herewith submit to you a brief report of the condition of floriculture in Kentucky. To arrive at a reliable knowledge of the trade conditions in our state I mailed a circular letter to every florist establishment in Kentucky whose address I could obtain, asking for all information they could give regarding trade. From the answers received, and from personal observation, it is again my pleasure to report satisfactory conditions in the florists' business generally. Nearly all the retail florists report satisfactory business, with good returns from both cut flowers and plants. The growers seemed pleased with the returns from cut flowers, but think better prices should be obtained for plants, especially blooming stock. As far as I can learn, all the Kentucky members of the S. A. F. have renewed their membership for this year, including one life membership. There has been a limited increase in the interest in the state society, but not nearly as much as should be. This fall there will be held in Louisville a chrysanthemum and floral exhibition under the auspices of the Louisville Business Women's League, but under the management of one of the local florists. While new glass is going up only in limited quantity, many establishments are rebuilding old houses into modern structures.

Trusting that the first convention held in our south will be so successful as to insure future visits, I beg to remain,

AUGUST R. BAUMER.
State Vice-President for Kentucky.

Missouri.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I, as your vice-president of Missouri, am pleased to report a very prosperous year in most of the branches of our trade.

All our local growers, as well as those of our cities and my state have profited by the increased demand and good prices during the whole season. Our retailers, a number of them, report a most successful season, while others are not so well off. In fact, the floricultural business all over our state, from the reports that I have, has been very satisfactory; nearly all of the growers are adding new glass, and this alone shows that the season has been a good one.

I know of nothing that would call for special mention from Missouri; I only regret that I cannot be with you in person, and that not more from our state have joined this society and that the delegation from here is so small, as we would have been pleased to have had a large attendance at the Asheville convention. I trust that you will have an interesting, pleasant and profitable meeting.

CHAS. A. JUENGEL,
State Vice-President for Missouri.

Colorado.

To the President and Members of the S. A. F. and O. H.:

I have the honor to submit the following comments regarding matters of interest to this society in Colorado during the twelve months past.

Trade has been satisfactory in nearly all lines with a moderate increase in the total volume of trade over the year previous, with collections generally good. There has been a noticeable tendency toward a more careful grading which has resulted in better prices and less fluctuation for the best grade. The poorer grades have sold at less prices, and this has probably had something to do with the establishment of two or three concerns dealing almost entirely in the cheaper grades. Spasmodic attempts have been made to establish a street trade by fakirs but without success. One department store has made a persistent effort for several years to sell plants and cut flowers, but without any appreciable effect on the trade of exclusive florists.

The retail trade is becoming more critical each year and the better class of this trade now demands a strictly first-class article. This is especially true in regard to blooming plants, and the quality now produced by the florists of Denver and Colorado Springs will compare favorably with any other section of the country.

The sale of palms and ferns is not what might reasonably be expected, the public showing a lack of appreciation of this class of plants. There has been a noticeable falling off in the demand for ficus and araucaria. Dracaenas and pandanus have never sold in this market to any extent. Owing to climatic conditions which make irrigation necessary, the sale of bedding plants has never been as important as in eastern states. This is especially true as regards window boxes, which are hard to keep looking presentable during the hot, dry summer months, when it is almost impossible to keep down the red spider. Still there has been quite a noticeable increase this year in the call for the more common sorts of bedding plants, such as geraniums, for both lawn planting and window boxes.

The increased demand for shrubs and for hardy herbaceous plants has been very marked. This has been almost altogether from owners of small places, as there are very few private places in this state where extensive planting is done. Probably we will have to wait years for any considerable development in that line, until those who have amassed large fortunes have died and the money has passed into the hands of the younger generation.

The public parks have, in the main, been under able management, and although hampered somewhat by the usual political interference, good results have been obtained and the parks have really been an educational feature creating a demand for plants from private parties.

No very extensive building has been done in the state during the year. N. A. Benson has erected about 20,000 feet in South Denver; Ed. Hubbard, of Boulder, has torn down and rebuilt his place of about the same size, and Wm. Clark, of Colorado Springs, has made some additions to his already extensive place. Several diminutive places have been erected in the mountain towns. In Denver and vicinity there is at present about 400,000 feet of glass devoted to the florist business; at Colorado Springs 150,000 to 200,000, and in the state outside of these two points less than 150,000 more.

The question of the establishment of some sort of a wholesale market in the city of Denver has received considerable attention, but nothing definite has been determined upon. Several attempts have been made in the past to establish a commission house but these attempts have always failed. It is doubtful whether the volume of business will yet justify such a venture. The nearest source of supply from abroad is five hundred miles to the east on the Missouri river with the supply at those points uncertain, and the shipment of a thousand miles from Chicago is attended with many disappointments. The result is that very little in the way of cut flowers is shipped in from outside the state. American Beauties form the only noteworthy exception. The quantity of cut flowers grown has been sufficient to supply the demand in the main all through the year. The trade in blooming plants has reached such proportions that the demand for cut flowers at Christmas and at Easter has been very materially reduced.

Most of the newer varieties of carnations are to be found in the market, but the variety of roses grown is not as large as it is around eastern centers of population. Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle, Liberty, Meteor, Wootton and Madam Chatenay have been in the market the past year and this summer's plantings show that Helen Gould will be added to this list the coming season.

There is no state organization of florists, and but few local societies. In Denver The Denver Floral Club is in existence and holds meetings at stated intervals, but the interest shown is not very great. No fall show was held by the society last fall but a spring show was given in the city park with free admission. The attendance was large, but the display of bedding stuff was rather disappointing. In Colorado Springs the El Paso County Horticultural Society is very active and great efforts are made to interest the school children by the distribution of seeds and the offering of suitable prizes. Prizes are also given for the most attractive door yards and lawns and competition for these prizes has been quite active, resulting in a decided benefit to the appearance of the city at large. The state Horticultural Society and State Board of Horticulture are both doing good work, and while their efforts are not directed along the lines of work most directly interesting to the florist, the indirect benefit to the florist trade is considerable.

The distance is so great and so much time and money are consumed in attending the annual meetings of the S. A. F. that the society has not much of a membership in this state and it is doubtful whether this condition of things can be materially changed unless at some future time the society should see fit to establish district conventions for different sections of the country in addition to the annual national convention; and it is doubtful whether the time is ripe for such a move so far as this section is concerned even if it should ultimately be deemed advisable.

FORT SCOTT, KANS.

Business has been very quiet of late; no funeral work at all for the past few weeks. Roses and carnations are looking splendid for next season. We are getting plenty of rain and outdoor stock doesn't suffer for moisture.

Mr. M. J. Coventry's new crop for the coming season is looking very fine, and he has almost everything on the benches again.

Mr. Postma is very busy repairing the old Patterson place. He has added a 50-foot addition to it, and has his hands full to get things in good shape before cold weather sets in. DUTCH.

EXTRA CHOICE

Lilium Harrisii

(Bermuda Easter Lily.)

We have received from one of the most careful growers in Bermuda a grand lot of Bulbs. He writes us regarding the same as follows:

"I believe these Bulbs to be the very best stock leaving Bermuda this or any previous season, perfectly free from disease, no Longiflorum mixed with them and worth 50 per cent. more to the growers than nine-tenths of the stock leaving the colony this season."

The appearance of the Bulbs fully warrant the above strong statement. We offer them as under:

	Per 100	Per Case	Per 1000
5 to 7-inch, packed 400 in a case.....	$ 4 75	$18 00	$ 45 00

9 to 11 " " 100 "	20 00	20.00	90.00

As the lot is not very large it would be well to order early.

WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS.

We have a good supply of the popular 12 to 15 centimeter Bulbs (packed 2100 to the case), price $24.00 per 1000. This price will be advanced shortly; save the difference by ordering now.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

A destructive wind storm visited this place on the morning of the 10th. Not much loss resulted to the florists from broken glass, but the damage to the trees in the parks was heavy.

Most of the carnations in this locality have been planted, and the places are being sticked up for the winter's business. Eastern growers will have to look for competition from Kansas City that will give them something to think about when they go into the all-American flower show this fall, for at least two of the growers here, Murray and Barbe, have fine stock that at present gives every indication of being in it when the premiums are distributed.

Barbe is adding a new house for carnations. He is building a new 70-foot smokestack, his old one not having capacity enough to take care of the plant.

Rock is building a conservatory at his store on Walnut street. This will give him a much needed place to handle his palms, etc. He is also putting in the fine refrigerator formerly in the Eleventh street store.

The Midland Hotel is keeping up with eastern ideas, and has each window of its cafe filled with boxes of plants.

SHRUBS FOR A HEDGE.

Please give a list of hardy shrubs suitable for a hedge 100 feet long between two city lots, said hedge to be composed of as many kinds of shrubs as possible and having a long season of bloom, harmonizing colors and white. H. W.

A hedge, properly speaking, should be composed of but one kind of shrub or evergreen; if the latter, either Norway spruce, American arbor-vitæ or hemlock spruce. If of deciduous shrubs, the California or English privet is ofttimes seen, but there are other shrubs that make a fine hedge. Pyrus Japonica and Spiræa Thunbergii are both excellent. There is much to be said both for and against hedges. Where a fence is a necessity then surely a well-kept hedge is far more sightly than either wood, iron, or brick, but a hedge should not be planted just for the sake of appearance.

It is evident that H. W. does not want a hedge proper, but more what should be called a belt of shrubs. If a single line of shrubs is intended to be planted in a straight line 100 feet long by all means let them be of one kind. A mixture in a single straight line would look absurd. If a variety is desired, then let the line consist of one shrub in some spots and in others let them be two or three deep; break up the line as much as possible. At the rear or on your neighbor's side the line can be straight, but on your side let it be as informal as possible.

The variety, both of genera and species, of hardy flowering and ornamental leaved shrubs, is fortunately very large. The following twenty-five omits many beautiful kinds, yet it includes those that should be in every collection. I have not given height, because height of shrubs is a fallacy. You must control height by the annual pruning.

Spiraea Anthony Waterer, deep red.
Althea, double flowering.
Viburnum plicatum, white, purple fruit.
Pyrus (Cydonia) Japonica, red.
Elaeagnus longipes, red fruit.
Hydrangea pan. grandiflora, white.
Lilac, Persian, purple.
Purple fringe, smoke tree.
Spiraea Van Houttei, white.
Cornus elegantissima, var. foliage.
Deutzia crenata, white and pink.
Elder, golden, fine yellow foliage.
Forsythia Fortunei, yellow.
Honeysuckle tartarica, pink and white.
Prunus Pissardii, fine purple foliage.
Symphoricarpus racemosus, pink flower, white fruit.
Mahonia Aquifolia, yellow flower, and this is a true evergreen.
Berberis Thunbergii, dwarf, spreading, most suitable for prominent points.
Weigelia rosea.
Tamarix Africana, very ornamental foliage.
Rosa rugosa.
Ribes (currant) flore plena, crimson flowers.
Syringa coronarius, white.
Xanthoceras sorbifolia, white and pink.
Barbery, purple leaved.

I have not included in the above short list the glorious rhododendrons, kalmia, azalea or any of the ericaceous shrubs, because they are a dead failure with us, but I believe that in the vicinity from which H. W. writes they will thrive. If so, by all means plant them.

William Scott.

CORRECTION.

In the classified adv. of Mr. Chas. D. Ball under the heading palms a typographical error made him offer 2½-inch Kentia Belmoreana at $4.00 per 100, when it should have read $12.00. The adv. is correctly printed in this week's issue.

HEATING.

I have two houses, which I wish to heat with steam. They run east and west, opening from each side of shed or boiler room.

Number 1 is 22x145 feet, no glass except on roof; is three-quarter span; north side, 6 feet high; south side, 4 feet; north bars are 7 feet; south bars are 17 feet 6 inches.

Number 2 is 30x125 feet, 6-foot walls; north bars are 15 feet 10 inches; south bars are 19 feet 10 inches; one row of 24-inch glass in south wall and glass in one end.

Number 1 is 3 feet lower to ground line than number 2, as the ground slopes as you go east. All the pipes in both to go on the walls and on the purlin supports, as I shall use brick and tile benches. I wish to use a tubular boiler, and to have the house heated to a temperature of 60 degrees. How many pipes will it take, and can I use 2-inch for the flows, as I have a great deal of it in good order? LOCKPORT.

In reply to Lockport's inquiry, for the heating of house No. 1, which is 22 feet wide and contains about 24½ feet of glass across the roof, two 2-inch flows and nine 1-inch returns will answer, or two 2-inch flows and six 1¼-inch returns. For house No. 2, which is 30 feet wide, having about 37 feet of glass across the roof and one side, three 2-inch flows and fifteen 1-inch returns will be needed, or three 2-inch flows and ten 1¼-inch returns, to readily maintain a temperature of 60 degrees. A 20 horse power tubular boiler would have sufficient capacity for the above work.

PANSY PLANTS.

For Pansy Seed see under heading "Seeds."

500,000 PANSIES, finest market strain grown. Awarded first-class certificate of merit by the Mass. Horticultural Society.
ATTENTION is called to these facts:
This strain is the result of over twenty years' careful selection.
The seed was saved this year from over 12,000 plants, the finest among the 500,000 flowered and sold last spring.
Particular attention is always paid to form and substance as well as size and color. The colors will be found very evenly proportioned, including rich selfs, brilliant variegations and many novel shades—no dull, mixed sorts.
Our pansies have for many years held the highest reputation in the Boston and Eastern New England markets and we confidently believe will be found the most satisfactory strain ever offered for florists' use.
Two of our customers write us as follows:
Boston, Mass.
Mr. I. E. Coburn. Dear Sir:—The pansies you have supplied us with have been the means of largely increasing the demand for these plants. The colors, size and form have been the admiration of all our patrons who have had them.
Yours truly, SCHLEGEL & FOTTLER CO.,

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We are now experiencing the luxury of a drouth, not having had any rain for three weeks, and everything is drying up. Just to think of having averaged twenty-three days a month of rain and then going without any for so long. It makes one feel dry. The weather is warm with cool nights. Carnation benching goes merrily on, although great care has to be exercised in lifting from clay soil, so as not to break the roots. Flowers are still scarce, about equal to the demand, as trade is sleeping these balmy days.

Peter Blanksma has decided to grow carnations as well as lettuce, which he has grown heretofore. He is located near East street, south of Burton avenue.

Eli Cross is building a brick chimney and a coal and boiler room. He has torn down the frame structure that formerly answered that purpose. He will have his office in the same building.

Recent visitors: Geo. Hancock, of Grand Haven; Harry Smith and Henry Fruck, gardeners to Jos. H. Berry on the Grosse Point Farms; Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill.; C. Gentle and his foreman, Wm. Scott, of Benton Harbor, Mich.

We were sorry we were not at Asheville, but are delighted to think that Milwaukee has had justice done her.

G. F. C.

TRENTON, N. J.—Florist Wainwright suffered serious loss as the result of the storm on Aug. 10. Much glass was broken and the heavy rain destroyed many plants. A barn at the rear of his residence was unroofed. A tin roof from a house on a neighboring street dropped in his yard.

RACINE, WIS.—L. W. Mason, alias H. C. Jones, who is said to be a florist of Lexington, Ky., pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny and was sentenced to two years in the State prison. He obtained a motor cycle on trial and shipped it away. He was caught after boarding a train for Chicago.

TROY, O.—L. A. Thomas is adding two new houses, one 20x128 and the other 20x116. He now has eleven houses. His business is expanding rapidly.

STOCK GERANIUMS.

What is the best way to carry over stock geraniums? I have a nice lot in field, and after taking the cuttings this fall would like to take up old plants, but have no room on greenhouse bench for them. M. W. W.

If M. W. W. can't give his old geraniums, that he has taken cuttings from and intends to lift from the field about October 1st, a light bench in a cool house, then it is not worth his going to much trouble over them. We seldom lift any old plants unless it be of some variety of which we are short. If it is necessary that you must lift the old plants, then get some boxes of convenient length and breadth, say 2 feet by 1 foot and 5 inches deep. Lift the plants about October 1st; plant them in the boxes quite thickly, and after a good soaking leave the boxes out of doors as long as you can. When frost compels you to remove them to the house, place the boxes along the edge of the paths in a cool, light house. Keep them very dry and the plants will remain almost dormant till end of February, when they can be shaken out, potted and started to growing. Plants to be treated this way should have all the young succulent growth cut off before boxing. W. S.

Milton, Ind.—William Moore is erecting a greenhouse here.

GREEN DAHLIAS.

Replying to the inquiry of John H. Vesey would say we have a green flowered dahlia here. It is listed as viridiflora.

A peculiarity of this freak is to sometimes have a flower with the outer petals of a deep red color. The plant is of compact growth and the flowers are borne on stems too short to be useful.

L. A. Martin.

Greenwich, Conn.

We had a dahlia plant that bore perpectly green blossoms the season of 1901. Whether it will repeat itself another season remains to be seen. The flowers were fully developed and double.

E. S. Thompson.

South Haven, Mich.

I am not a dahlia grower but I know of parties in this state that have had green dahlias for several years.

R. S. Hoxie.

Mattapoisett, Mass.

The variety is probably the viridiflora, known among dahlia growers for many years. I received my first stock from England twelve years ago and it was then an old variety. Strictly speaking it is a botanical monstrosity. Its flowers are not composed of petals but are simply a much enlarged calyx. As the green bunches get older a few red petals will often appear. Twice I have had sports from the variety that produced perfect red flowers. W. W. Wilmore.

Denver, Colo.

HEATING.

I have a lot of 1½-inch pipe. Can I use it for heating, and how many lines will I have to have to hold a temperature of 60 degrees? We have a drop every once in a while that will reach 10 or 12 degrees below. Bellefontaine.

Replying to Bellefontaine, to heat a little greenhouse 16x30 by water circulation to a temperature of 60 degrees, he will require, assuming there be glass on the roof and gables only, 15 lines of 1½-inch pipe, or if there be glass also on the vertical side walls, 17 lines of 1½-inch pipe would be required.

New York. Henry W. Gibbons.

Berlin, Conn.—Carl Merchant has moved away and is reported to have purchased a greenhouse property in New Haven.

DENVER, COLO.

The greenhouses are beginning to look like business again, since nearly all of them have been repaired from the effects of the hail, and the stock of roses, carnations and mums is looking good in most of them. Asters in general have been a failure, both through disease and the beetle, and I also find that they have another enemy, as our esteemed friend, Adam Balmer, can testify. He had a large patch of asters, from which he expected to get at least half a crop, but when he came out one morning he found that the third enemy had appeared during the night in the shape of some cows which had broken in and eaten or pulled up the whole business.

The new foreman, Mr. Smith, of Detroit, has assumed his duties at the Park Floral Co.'s.

On Tuesday, the 19th, a jolly lot of florists left for Colorado Springs as judges of the flower show held under the auspices of the El Paso Horticultural Society. They were John Berry, Adam Balmer, Robert Kurth, Phil Scott, E. Flohr and F. T. Rushmore. They were royally entertained by the florists of that place, and as the boys of the Springs are noted for their hospitality, one could not help enjoying himself.

We visited the establishments of Smith & Wright, Evans and William Clark and found them all busy, for the Springs being a summer resort and filled to overflowing with visitors, the summer trade is about as good as the winter. Smith & Wright are about to form a partnership with Mr. Evans, and as they will be backed with unlimited capital, we expect to see them the leading firm. At Crump's everything was in good shape, and especially the mums, and as Mr. Crump is one of the most genial and popular of florists, he has no trouble in getting and holding a large trade. We were particularly indebted to Messrs. Crump, Johnson and Smith for courtesies extended to us while at the Springs, and may their shadows never grow less.

We understand that Ben Boldt is having trouble with his artesian well, and they have to use water from the lake, which is full of alkali. They will most probably have to put down another well.

Not very much doing in the way of cut flowers, though first-class stock of roses and carnations is scarce and brings good prices. THORNE.

WHITEHALL, MICH.—Thomas Denham of Chicago has purchased the C. W. Redfern greenhouses, also Thos. C. Rogers' lease of same.

Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

The month of September ushers in a great deal of work, and for the next few weeks the foundation is laid for many of our next spring's crops. As important as any is the ever-popular zonale geranium, of which, if color is desired, there is no rival. Early September is the time to put in your main crop of cuttings, which will furnish you with strong flowering plants next May. It seems many months to grow a cheap plant, but they do not take up much room or fuel during winter, and can not be grown into a good plant in a few weeks as many of the bedding plants, such as salvia, heliotrope, etc., can.

For the benefit of the beginner I will repeat the oft-told story. Do not put them in the sand in a propagating bed. It may be quicker work at the start, but more time and labor later on; and what is of more consequence, they draw up weak and never make as vigorous and hardy plants as those put into pots; 2¼-inch pots will do for most of the varieties, and for the stronger growing sorts 2½-inch. A good loam, not too light or sandy, and a fifth or sixth part of well-rotted and sifted manure, is the right compost. You don't want these young plants after rooting to grow vigorously. You want them to get well rooted only and to remain rather dormant until the New Year.

The geraniums in the open ground that I have noticed this year have made a most luxuriant growth, more than is desirable for their flowering. The continuous rains of June and July account for that, so the cuttings will be soft and more liable to rot off than usual. A high temperature is also a help to this trouble. Be sure to pot these cuttings firmly; much depends on that. I will repeat once again that it is not on the surface that the soil need be firm; the watering does that. It is down in the soil where the bottom of the cutting rests that the soil should be compact and firm, and that is done by using your fingers as a wedge, and not just "thumbing" on the surface.

One good and thorough watering a few hours after being potted is sufficient for several days, but that will depend on their location and exposure. Don't water them again until they are decidedly on the dry side. They should have a light bench in any house where you have plenty of ventilation. The ideal condition for these cuttings is the same as that for many of our plants, which we don't give them, namely, shade for a few hours when needed and the rest of the twenty-four no shade. A light shade on the glass for the first ten days is all that is required; after that the full sun. I dare say there are lots of florists who have their benches so full of mums, etc., that there is no space to spare. Then a cold frame will do just as well for these cuttings, and with the sash raised back and front, and the facility for shading when necessary, it is just as good a place as the greenhouse.

I have been talking about zonale geraniums, not all our bedding geraniums, and some of them are better handled differently. The variegated and scented types we prefer to put in the sand in the propagating bench, or if the propagating bench is not convenient, then a flat two or three inches deep and filled with sand will do just as well. The ivy-leaf section should always be put in sand. I have recommended early September as the right time to propagate the most important section of these popular plants, because we never have cuttings enough, and by cutting the plants now you will get another fair lot of cuttings in October. Or, if necessary to lift the old plants, they will be in the best condition for so doing, and you have all the cuttings you can use; then two or three weeks later they will root just as well. The ivy-leaf varieties we seldom put in till near frost time. Remember, however, that the florist is too often a procrastinating creature, and the first intimation of frost finds him in a muddle with fifteen days' work crowded into one.

Pelargoniums.

I spoke some weeks ago about pelargoniums, saying that early September was a good time to propagate. It is, and now it should be done. Putting the cuttings in the sand is rather the surest way, but if that is not convenient pot them in 2¼-inch pots, as you do the zonales. The greatest mistake made by those growing pelargoniums without experience is that they are afraid to cut down the plants. Cut them down to within two or three inches of the top.

Cyclamen.

As the cooler weather approaches it will be easier to manage your cyclamen. It is about time the earliest had their last shift, either a 5, 6 or 7-inch pot. A frame with a little bottom heat will suit them well for another seven or eight weeks, and in the frame covered by sash you have the means of shading when necessary better than a house, but are more likely to neglect them in watering and syringing. A bench in a house where they will get the fullest light and plunged in a few inches of tobacco stems is a very safe place for them from now on. Some means should be provided to give them shade on sunny days from 10 to 3. Syringe every bright morning and never let up on the fumigating.

Crowding is with cyclamen as big a mistake as with other plants, only a little more so. Plenty of room must be given so that the form of the plant will be naturally developed, and if crowded together it is difficult to get at the aphis with smoke. Remember that if plunged in tobacco stems, and you have occasion to fumigate only once in two weeks, so much the better, because we do not see actual damage to our plants by fumigating. We are apt to think that they enjoy it. Not so. When fumigating strong enough to kill aphis we are also giving the plants quite a setback. Although it is not plainly visible, it is a check on their vigor, and in plants like cyclamen, that can be so easily surrounded by tobacco stems, it should always be done till flowering time.

Bouvardia.

It is now time to lift the bouvardia. It is a tropical plant, and, although submitting to a lower temperature when flowering than it would get in its native clime, it should never have the roots disturbed in cool weather when growing. If you grow this pretty flower lift them at once and plant on a bench in five inches of soil (light and well manured). They must have shade for at least ten days, after which when established in their new quarters they want only the fullest light. I noticed last winter that the bouvardia was offered in our commission houses. It is a beautiful flower, but the craze for carnations and the ever universal rose and the quantity grown have put the bouvardia in the background. It is chiefly valuable at the holidays, and when once rooted on the bench, if you think any of the strong shoots will flower before Christmas, pinch them about half way down.

Thistle Curling Rink, Hamilton, Ont., in which the Trade Exhibit and Floral Fete of the Canadian Horticultural Association was held this week.

PALM TROUBLES.

I send you two pieces of palm leaves. The leaflets of one are covered with small, black lines running lengthwise; the other has its leaflets curled in the same direction. Please tell me if the leaves are diseased, and if so, what remedy to apply. Also please tell me how to get rid of the scaly bug and mealy bug. A. L. A.

The specimen palm leaves sent with this communication are very badly infested with insects instead of being diseased, and prompt treatment will be required in order to control the attack. The "small, black lines" referred to are scale insects of a species that is hard to eradicate, and if the entire plant is as badly infested as the leaf in question, I should be strongly tempted to burn it rather than to attempt cleaning it. This scale is more often seen upon the leaves of phœnix and licualas than upon those of Areca lutescens, but whatever be the host plant this insect propagates very rapidly, and also sticks closer than a brother.

A strong solution of whale-oil soap in which to dip the affected leaves will tend to loosen the insects, after which they may be sponged off, or else rubbed off with a soft tooth brush, but the leaves are very likely to be injured by the operation, and it is also a very tedious job.

The second specimen has suffered from a severe attack of red spider, and there are also indications of the small yellow thrips, and some soft scale and mealy bug are also in evidence. Sulpho-tobacco soap in solution, or a mixture of whale-oil soap and tobacco extract used as a dip or else applied to the leaves with a sponge would correct this trouble, but in case a strong soap dip is used for an areca it is wiser to give the plant another dip in clean water about one hour afterward, the leaves of this plant being somewhat susceptible to injury from strong applications of soap.

Regular and forcible syringing will also do much to prevent attacks of red spider and thrips, and the preparation known as "aphis punk" is very useful in killing off the mealy bug.

CARNATION MURPHY'S WHITE.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a portion of a house of the new white carnation raised by Mr. William Murphy of Cincinnati, O., and named Murphy's White.

The plants in the house shown were lifted from the field and benched on July 1, and the photograph was taken on Aug. 12. The condition of the plants and the number of buds certainly speak well for the variety.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

If there are any thrips in the Beauty houses the evidence of their presence will soon become apparent. The buds in their earlier stages will assume a blood-red color, and instead of being nicely pointed they will look as if they had been shortened with a knife. As the petals develop they will be crumpled and off-color.

On the first appearance of this pest no time should be lost, as they increase very rapidly. Fumigating lightly, frequently and persistently, will in most cases keep them so much in check that the damage will be light. As the insect leaves its shelter and works mostly during the night this is the best time to do the fumigating.

All buds which show signs of having been attacked should be picked off and destroyed. The benches, walks and ground under the benches should be kept clean of all rubbish and decaying leaves, as this affords a good shelter.

Those who are growing grafted stock would do well to watch for those shoots or suckers from the Manetti stocks. These, if allowed to make any headway, will quickly rob the scion of all nourishment. They should be carefully removed with a sharp knife, and not torn off, as is frequently done, as this leaves a ragged wound, which takes a long time to heal. Ribes.

CARNATION RECORDS.

Thinking it might interest the readers of The Review, I send you a copy of our record of blooms, picked from 1,000 carnation plants, all in one house, during the past winter.

The varieties were: 300 Flora Hill, 100 Evelina, 175 Bradt, 125 Jubilee, 100 Joost, 100 Crocker, 100 Daybreak. The Evelinas were thrown out soon after Easter to make room for the bedding stock. The plants when housed last fall were very small on account of the dry weather preceding. The quality of the blooms was as good as that of any we have seen of the same varieties and a great deal better than blooms of these varieties that we bought last winter. We received 50, 60 and 75 cents and $1 per dozen for them, getting the $1 only at Easter, while some we bought at 60 cents a dozen were hard to sell at 50 cents a dozen.

The Evelinas have not shown a particle of rust with us, and the blooms were as large as those of Hill, but the stems were much shorter. Ethel Crocker gave a number of splits during midwinter, but the most of them sold for 75 cents a dozen. On the whole, we were very much pleased with the number of blooms picked, considering the size of the plants when benched. This year our plants are much larger, and we hope to pick more this season.

BUSINESS METHODS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

X.

Loss and Gain Account.

Of whatever nature a business may be or in whatever manner it may be conducted, there comes a time once a year, when accounts should be balanced, inventory taken and the "loss or gain" for the year ascertained. Business system requires a balancing at least once a year, and no careful manager will think of conducting a business without a systematic "round up" at the end of the season.

In the florist business the most appropriate time for balancing the books is July 1st. Trade is then the dullest, stocks are lowest and time for the work more plentiful than at any time during the year.

The first thing to be considered in closing the books is the inventory. A correct list of all merchandise handled by you, should be made out carefully, with the cost price attached—unless goods are shop-worn or damaged—in which case a reasonable reduction from cost price, for depleted values, should be made.

If you keep a store and handle baskets, jardinieres, fern dishes, etc., etc., their cost price is easily determined from the invoice. When growing plants, however, the case is different. Their value depends largely upon the care and attention bestowed upon them. Most growers will have one or more houses of roses for summer blooming, with perhaps several just replanted for winter blooming. Or they may have a house of ferns or palms or mums, or several acres planted to carnations outside, the actual value of which it will be difficult to determine. In the case of blooming plants not yet in crop, the market value at the time of planting, plus the labor of planting and caring for them and the cost of soil and fertilizers, will give their approximate value for inventory purposes. The actual cost of blooming plants in benches is determined by deducting from the cost of the plants and the labor, soil, etc., used in planting and growing them, the total proceeds from sales (wholesale) at that date, minus a fair percentage of profit.

For fear this is ambiguous I will illustrate: On July 1st you have house No. 13 in summer roses, containing 2,000 plants. These plants at time of planting were worth $70.00, labor in planting and caring for them has been $50.00, soil for benches cost you $10.00, fertilizers used $10.00, and coal for heating $25.00 more. As they stand, they represent a total cost of $165.00. You have sold from this house 4,000 roses, for which you received, at wholesale, $150.00.

From previous years' records you ascertain that roses can be grown for $2.00 per 100 for the season's average. The 4,000 already sold have therefore cost you $80.00. Deducting this amount from the $165.00 invested in the crop, gives you $85.00—the inventory value of the roses in No. 13. The market value of pot plants should be taken as their inventory value.

Your empty pots constitute another asset, the value of which will depend upon their age and condition. I think it is a fair figure to deduct 33 1-3 per cent from the first cost of all pots after being used once, and 50 per cent after twice using. Paper, twine, boxes, tools, etc., should also be inventoried, as they are assets at the beginning of the year's business.

The next, and usually most valuable items of the inventory, is the greenhouse plant; the ground they occupy, the buildings erected thereon, the boilers and all other property connected with the houses. To determine their value, no set rule can be laid down.

All greenhouses depreciate in value from year to year; some more, some less. The wooden greenhouses erected 15 or 20 years ago depreciated in value much more rapidly than the modern steel and glass structures. A house kept well painted and in repair from year to year, depreciates less than one which is never repaired: but whatever the material used in construction, or the repairs annually made, every greenhouse depreciates somewhat in value from year to year, and a certain percentage of its cost should be deducted each year for depreciation. If you have been in the business 15 or 20 years your past experience is a very good criterion for the present.

If a house has to be rebuilt in 20 years it depreciates 5 per cent each year. If it only lasts 10 years it depreciates 10 per cent annually, and so on in like proportion.

Your horses, wagons, harness, etc., should be depreciated in the same manner, though of course they will not last as long as a greenhouse and the shrinkage is that much larger.

Having completed our inventory, the next step towards closing the year's business is to ascertain our total outlay or expense. If an accurate account has been kept the total can be easily determined.

Our merchandise account can be totaled in the same manner, and the amount of the inventory deducted therefrom.

The sales' account having been kept from month to month, can be easily arrived at. If you do a cash business only, you know at the end of each day and month just what your sales have been. If you do a credit business you must make some allowance for bad debts, or in other words, anticipate your losses at the end of the year. As to what that will be, each one is his own best judge.

Some concerns lose as high as 5 per cent, but they are rare cases. I do not think the average retail florist loses more than 1 per cent of his sales each season. If he does, he should improve his methods. This anticipated loss should be deducted from the total of your sales' account, leaving a net sales' balance. The difference between this net sales' account and the sum of your expense and merchandise account constitutes the year's profit in business. If the sales are smaller than the expense of conducting the business a loss is shown. If the expense is smaller than the sales there is a gain. The net profit in the business ought not to be less than 10 per cent of the gross sales, and your annual sales ought to be from 100 to 200 per cent of the capital invested. Unless a man in business can make 10 per cent on the invested capital each season, he ought not to remain in the business.

SYSTEM.

CONVENTION MEMORIES.

The Idlewild journey to Overlook Park on Sunset Mountain with its glorious panorama, its exhilerating ozone, and its watermelon festivity, will never be forgotten. Most of the "400" climbed the high tower and "viewed the landscape o'er." When shall our eyes look upon so glorious a vision again! As Alex. Wallace sang it, so say we all: "Oh, the beautiful hills!" It was worth all the long journey, that morning on the mountain top "nearer heaven," as William Scott put it, "than many of you will ever get again!"

That "Baltmore" experience seems like "a dream," so unreal, so impossible. This great mansion, the wonderful verdure, the forest, the finished driveway skirted for miles by exuberant vegetation, the perfection of everything in this far away country, so modern, so dissimilar to all its surroundings. What can compare with it in all the world. Miles upon miles of mountain scenery with Mount Pisgah reaching its giant finger to the heavens far away.

The dances at the Battery Park hotel were well attended. Several of the florists participated. Senator Charlie McKellar was the "observed of all observers" and in his silk hat and swallow tail was a "bird!"

Young Mr. Wienhoeber of Chicago did his alma mater—Cornell—honor, as well as himself, by his scholarly essay. He is a credit to the rising floricultural generation, and several of the young lady visitors seemed to agree with me.

Mr. Sullivan of Detroit made a creditable debut as a presiding officer. His fine voice could be easily heard all over and under the auditorium. If he could bowl as well as he can "put the motion" Detroit might not have occupied the lower rung of the ladder.

J. F. Wilcox and Mrs. Wilcox of Council Bluffs were greatly missed and the sympathy and love of the whole convention go out to them in their great sorrow.

A telegram from Edgar Sanders, announcing "I am getting well," was received with uproarious cheering. Edgar has grit enough to get to many more conventions before he joins the larger one, where we shall all meet again.

The business meetings of the convention were never better attended anywhere. The excitement over the contests for place of meeting and secretary was intense, but good natured.

The remarkable phenomenon of cool weather in the shade while it was "scorching" in the sun, was realized for the first time by many. Nowhere else except in Denver have I found this strange contradiction. On the whole, the weather was charming, the nights delightfully cool and refreshing, the air was dry and pure. Sleep was such sweet rejuvenation that everybody went to bed early, with the possible exception of the bottomless pot man.

It was a fat man's convention. Several 300 pounders were there. "Baby" Foley of Chicago was the especial pet of the ladies and of course "took the cake," and also a little of what made Milwaukee famous, and his speech in behalf of Milwaukee also made him famous. But Mr. Foley was not the only fat man, and there were ten of 'em that weighed a ton! It was an oversight to have no fat man's race for all over 200. Next year I will offer a $10 prize to the fat man who runs 100 yards the fastest.

That bowling contest was too one-sided. Those fellows from Philadelphia have been practicing day and night for a year back. They had us all shaking before we threw a ball. But they can't do it again. Their private supply of "nerve tonic" was hardly a fair advantage to take over opponents whose inspiration was founded on cheese, crackers and ginger ale. But let that pass. It will never happen again!

Many realized the meaning of "Southern hospitality." The best homes were thrown open for the accommodation of those who found the hotels crowded and the charges for rest and comfort were nominal. We all fell in love with the big-hearted, genial residents of Asheville.

C. W. Ward accompanied Harlan P. Kelsey, the galax king, to his nursery at Kanawa, N. C., 2,000 feet nearer the clouds than the convention city.

One of the best known of the southern visitors was Caldwell, the Woodsman, of Alabama, the wild smilax discoverer.

The orators of the day were, as usual, O'Mara and Scott. Their speeches at Biltmore were great. O'Mara's response to the eloquent address of welcome was one of his best. Robert Bottomley was a delightful host and overflowed with smiles and hearty greetings. Pollworth's talk for Milwaukee was a masterpiece of practical argumentation.

The journey home was delightful. A happy trainful enjoyed the mountains, the mist clouds rising in the early morning, the quaint cabins, the pickaninnies, the chicken dinners, the trout streams, the muddy rivers and the old battle grounds.

AUSTIN SHAW.

MIL-WAU-KEE—NINETEEN-THREE.

During the selection of a city for the next convention at Asheville, a new departure was introduced by the Chicago "warm bunch" that elicited tremendous applause and developed a great deal of interest.

After the invitations had all been read, and during a lull in the speeches for the various cities, suddenly five figures arose simultaneously from one of the rear seats, each with small flags that were waved back and forth in unison, and the five recited together in voices of surprising strength this little sonnet of Shakespeare McKellar's:

In nineteen three,
We'll go to Milwaukee.
In nineteen three,
A bright spot for me.
Milwauk, Milwauk,
Milwaukee.

This was repeated, and then followed a verse of similar tenor sung to the air of a popular tune. The perpetrators were E. F. Winterson, C. W. McKellar, Fritz Bahr, Philip J. Foley and James Hartshorne. They put a lot of welcome life into the proceedings and even the advocates of other cities could not help enjoying the situation. The humor was contagious.

By the way, the warm interest taken in the selection this year was an excellent contrast to last year. Such contests put life and interest into the conventions. One gentleman spoke to the writer afterward of "the great amount of time wasted over the selection this year." The time wasn't wasted. It was the best used time during the convention. And those who have complained of the lack of attendance at many of the sessions have had their answer. It would be a black day for the S. A. F. were the selection to be placed in the hands of the executive committee, and that is what it would have amounted to had the suggestion of recommendations by the committee been carried out. It is an encouraging sign of vigor and strength in the membership that this movement was buried so deeply. All the wisdom of the society is not in the executive committee and the members do not need nursing nearly so much as some people seem to imagine. Keep up the interest among the members on the floor if you want to keep up a live interest in the society and its work.

The action of the representatives of Baltimore and Washington in moving to make the selection of Milwaukee unanimous was most graceful and shows the spirit of the membership. Cincinnati's action in withdrawing earlier was also done in a way to make her remembered later. "We could be happy with either were t'other dear charmer away." Their turns will all come.

WILLIAM G. BERTERMANN.

[Address read by E. G. Hill at the Memorial meeting of the Society of Indiana Florists at Indianapolis, in honor of the late William G. Bertermann.]

It is impossible to do full justice to the memory of William G. Bertermann, for he abounded in excellent traits of character, and I hesitate to undertake the task assigned me, fearing I may not be able to do him the honor due his character and life work. Most of those present have had the pleasure of knowing him intimately and well, and, like myself, thoroughly appreciated and valued his unchanging friendship.

My acquaintance dates back some twenty years, but not until the founding of our state society did I come to know him thoroughly. One of his finest qualities was the intense earnestness with which he went into an undertaking; every one who knew him was impressed by this marked trait of character. From the very inception of our state organization he threw into it every force and energy necessary to make it a success, sparing neither time, labor nor money to carry out the plans and purposes of the society. As our faithful and painstaking secretary for so many years, we owe him and his memory a large debt of gratitude for the success which crowned our many undertakings.

William G. Bertermann was both thoughtful and resourceful. It was my pleasure to be taken into his confidence and to have explained to me his ideas and plans of his vigorous mind, especially in regard to matters pertaining to the holding of our annual meetings and exhibitions. Very few of us realized the great amount of thought which he gave to our interests while serving us. I was very often surprised and delighted with the novelty of his plans and the energy with which he carried them to a successful conclusion, for many of the problems presented to him were intricate in the extreme. He was pre-eminently practical in his planning, and the fame of our exhibition was in a large measure due to the wise forethought, discretion and energetic work of our secretary. He dreaded ruts, and his effort was always for the novel and the artistic, and he possessed a knowledge of the public taste which was really wonderful.

He had the welfare of the profession ever at heart, and one of his oftenest expressed and most fervent desires was that the members of this society and the craft in general might come to a better appreciation of our profession in relation to the natural and artistic development which has been taking place in this country of ours and which is still going forward. He thought that the majority of florists should be more careful in their dress, in the appointments of their places of business, and as to the dignity of demeanor as befitted those who were thrown in contact with the most beautiful things of nature. This thought was constantly with him and he often spoke of the reform necessary in these particulars.

William G. Bertermann was appointed on the executive committee of our National Society while I was serving as president, and I was amazed at the time and thought he gave to this office. Through a reorganization of the executive body we were favored with his services for one year only; it would have been well for the society if it could have had his services longer.

He planned large things for the firm of which he was a member, and the large share of trade which the firm enjoyed came from the fact that the public had learned to know him and gave him and his brothers the fullest measure of its confidence and trust.

William G. Bertermann was an observant man and he profited by his travels and journeys, never failing to bring back ideas and suggestions which he could incorporate into his own work in the way of elevating floral art.

William G. Bertermann's ideas regarding the need of a close study of decorative art, and the insistence of putting into practice his thoughts and ideas on this line relative to hall adornment and decorative effects led at times to harsh criticism and words of disapproval from many of his florist friends; but looking back over the past, I think that we are all agreed now that he was right in insisting that our annual meeting place should be so beautiful that it should serve as an educational factor with the general public as well as with the trade.

I shall ever remember with pride and pleasure my acquaintance with William G. Bertermann, the warmth and strength of his friendship, his sunny disposition, his even temper. I shall always value the pleasant hours of companionship spent with him.

My last converse with him was late last autumn when we went over most minutely all the details of our last exhibition, he giving his ideas as to what should be done at another time, should an exhibition be held, and on this same occasion he spoke of the carnation meeting to come and unfolded his plans concerning the entertainment and work incident to that most interesting occasion. Alas! we were not favored to have him with us last February in person, but we of the state society know that he was present with us in spirit.

William G. Bertermann was possessed of a noble, generous spirit and his kindness of heart made for him many true friends. We shall mourn his loss. We have to-day a better and keener appreciation of the motives which actuated him, and I know that his memory will be a pleasant fragrance filling our minds with better thoughts and higher ideals concerning the things which are vital to our profession.

The tributes of esteem which surrounded our brother's bier and which bedecked his covered grave in peaceful Crown Hill cemetery were most fitting testimonials to the esteem in which he was held by his family, his friends and his professional brethren. His life work was cut short; his courageous battle against disease was fought valiantly but in vain. May he have sweet peace such as is given to those who are loyal to truth and right.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market is quiet now; a holiday beginning the week was not conducive to a very brisk start, still a fair amount of business is being done. Some really long Beauties can be had now with 30-inch stems and fair flowers. Asters are not as plentiful as at this time last year. Kaiserins are plentiful and of every grade from great long stemmed extras down to little weak stemmed buddies. Valley is very fair. Lubens is sending some nice stock to Leo Niessen. Outdoor stuff can be had at very moderate prices and helps to fill out a design or an order wonderfully.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

The fourth meeting, held last week as announced, was the best attended and liveliest of all. The committee, after a month's hard work, was unexpectedly defeated at the very moment when success seemed assured. This was accomplished by the prestige of H. H. Battles and the enthusiasm which his eloquence inspired. It is probable that this will strengthen the market though it will require more time to carry out the new plan. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, W. K. Harris; Secretary Rust read the minutes of the previous meeting and the report of the Boston market.

H. H. Battles claimed the right as a grower to be heard, which was readily granted. He elaborated a plan which would include all branches of our business in one great market. J. W. Young replied that the suggestion would be gladly taken up by the directors later; now, the committee wished a temporary treasurer and board of directors elected with power to incorporate, sufficient stock and stalls having been taken, but Mr. Battles was on his feet in an instant; the plan was not broad enough; the capital should be $500,000, not $10,000. Joseph Heacock said people thought so much money was not needed; the present plan gave ample scope. Mr. Battles replied that Philadelphia ought to have a market worthy of her great industries in all lines, where buyers from all over the country would congregate. W. K. Harris said he would subscribe $500 to the enterprise organized on a broad basis. L. H. Tull said his firm, the H. A. Dreer Co., would take 50 shares if plants were admitted. H. C. Geiger said his firm, the Floral Exchange, would take at least 10 shares on the broad lines.

After further discussion the committee was increased from three to seven, the chair appointing H. H. Battles, John Burton, Frank P. Myers and L. H. Tull, with instructions to formulate a plan in conformity with Mr. Battles' ideas. It was stated that S. S. Pennock had withdrawn from the committee owing to the feeling among the growers that commission men should not be connected with the market.

The next meeting will be held at Horticultural Hall, Broad street, Thursday, September 11, at 8 p. m., and it is expected that the organization of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market will then be perfected.

White Marsh.

It is a pretty trolley ride out old Germantown avenue past many historic places up to Chestnut Hill. You leave the cars at their terminus at the Wheel Pump tavern and strike out the Bethlehem pike for half a mile. On the top of the second hill is a five-acre lot, overlooking the White Marsh valley. Here is a busy scene in the quiet country. A pretty house, large and convenient, is nearing completion; further back two greenhouses are planted and three more are being built, while on one side a large tent affords temporary shelter for a family, evidently enjoying the novelty of camping out. This is the new home of George E. Campbell, where for two months he has been working hard to get things in order for the winter campaign.

His ground is high and level; his houses are 16x21, two are planted, one with Maids and one with Brides in solid beds, two others in course of erection are for carnations, chiefly Joost, Hill and Lawson, all now in the field. The fifth house is narrower and will be used for propagating. Water is obtained from a well 74 feet deep by means of a gasoline engine at a minimum cost. A large tank will be used as a reservoir. A nine 50-horse power return tubular boiler is ready to lower into pit, which is 11 feet deep and 4x10 feet, piping soon for heat. There is every reason to believe that Mr. Campbell's energy and industry will make him even more successful here as a cut flower grower than he was in the city as a plant grower.

Our Seedsmen.

I have been ask'd to write
Over my evening weed,
'Bout bisness men so bright
Who deal in bulbs and seed

I want to make a noise
To give a mighty cheer
For all those hustling "boys"
Who form the firm of Dreer

Then too, for handsome Fred
Who pulls so strong and well
Under the brainy head
Of Henry F. Michell.

Market street near Third, that's Place where Johnson & Stokes
Show Spark's early tomat's
To all good Jersey folks

In gardens we should see
Each grand new Eckford pearl.
For these go to Burpee
And ask for Howard Earle.

Moore, Simon; nor will a List contain nearly all
Thougt, Buist, Landreth, Philler,
Waterer, Watson and Maule.

They love a change—one day
They'll dine on oyster stew,
The next at la Francaise
At the Hotel Bellevue.

Sometimes they're "up" you'll think,
But ne'er will they "go down."
All real good chaps, the pink
Of our old Quaker town.

Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are very busy. The senior partner has returned from Europe.

William K. Harris won three prizes at Asheville, two for shooting and one for bowling.

C. F. Knorr & Bro., Fox Chase, have a great reputation for fine tea roses. They have five houses, three of Maids and two of Brides, all in benches with outside walks. The stock is in good condition.

John Savage is rebuilding one house.

Phil feels that he owes an apology to Captain Moss and the members of the Philadelphia bowling team for not "rooting" for them more. Really, gentlemen, the way the scrub tore holes in you was discouraging. That third game in the first match and then those seven little pins! But never mind, you did nobly, and so we are all proud of you. PHIL.

Correction.

Through the accidental omission of a few lines in these notes last week two items were badly mixed. The first paragraph under "Notes" should have been divided into two as follows:

Richard Lange has given up his place in the city, which has been torn down and removed to Norristown, where he will start in business.

C. H. Campbell has succeeded his brother in the plant business at 3601 Germantown, Ave.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Things are really getting summer-like after all! The thermometer is beginning to sit up and take notice; the frequent little rainfalls have ceased; the quality of indoor flowers is seriously affected and the voice of the harvest fly is heard in the land.

Roses are plentiful enough but most of them are very poor, Kaiserins and Carnots running the best of anything. Very good white pinks are fairly plentiful, but colored ones are rather scarce and prices upon them are reviving. While the white ones sell for a cent to a cent and a half, color affects the price to a possible two and a half.

Earlier varieties of asters are getting fewer and smaller, but arrivals of large later kinds much more than keep the balance of trade on the aster side of the question.

Hopes and fears alternate as thoughts bend towards the probable approach of cooler weather, and the probable danger of a warm fall to offset the cool summer.

Here and There.

Richwagen has been tuning up his place to accord with the music of the coming season. His houses were exactly on the line between ancient and modern, and consequently well worth modernizing. He has pulled the heating apparatus all over and worked the kinks out of it, thereby hoping to do away with two out of three old boilers; put in more than double the old number of ventilators, and attached latest devices for raising; clewed all up tight, set 21,000 carnation plants and looks so infernally serene about it that I'll bet he has got money left yet!

It is rumored that Mr. Molloy, formerly on the Boston end of the Waban Rose force, is to take the road again with a similar line.

The Waban Rose baseball team ambushed the Brimstone Corners at Natick on Saturday last and nearly annihilated the whole outfit. They must have scalps to burn, but all hands are reticent on the details of the casualty list. A score of 28 to 5, however, takes the pain out of the place where the Brimstones hit them so hard a few weeks ago.

The annual sale of the choice of stalls in the Boston Flower Market will take place Saturday, September 13, 1902, at 9 o'clock a. m. By vote of the board of directors, no bids will be received from persons in arrears for rent. All premiums bid for stalls at this sale must be paid on or before October 1, 1902, or no lease will be issued, and the stall will be let to other parties.

J. S. MANTER.

BUFFALO.

Very beautiful summer weather has blessed us for the past two or three weeks and it seems to have come when most people were taking their summer vacations. Perhaps, after all, it was a warm wave from the south that made Asheville so blistering, and the warm came north, for we have had many hot days since then. The correspondents of our contemporaries report little doing in our city, and they are doubtless right, and we don't expect much for a month.

Mr. Kasting is expected home from Europe about the 7th, and to learn that, I visited his emporium. It was loaded down with asters and only the very best are of any value.

Rudolph Boettger, of Eggertsville, just outside the northern city line, is the king of aster growers. It must be Semple's strain, but Ruddie has saved his own seed for several years and it's not all in the seed; culture has much to do with his success. He sends them into town with 3-foot stems, and white, pink and purple flowers 6 and 7 inches in diameter. This naturally puts the fairly good asters in the shade.

Charlie Gunther, of Hamburg, is sending in his usual fine cut of Kaiserin roses; they are first class. Also a few good Carnots; more of the latter should be grown for summer.

Beauties are coming from the east about as fast as we want them, and car nations have at last dropped out of sight. There has been an abundance of the lancifolium lilies, roseum and album, and most useful they all are for the occasion where flowers are most often used at this time.

There was quite a flutter through almost all grades of society last Saturday. It was Buffalo's first Derby Day and society patronized it. We have now a first-class race course, will have high class racing and are gradually getting more and more metropolitan. This new "Kenilworth" race course is on the northern boundary of the city and within sight and easy walking distance of the poor house, so when broke you have not far to go. I am afraid nearly all the florists attended except one. He was at Corfu helping dig a ditch to convey water from one range to another.

Mr. Louis H. Neubeck has been very energetic in getting his place in order at Corfu. The extensive place needed considerable fixing, but Louis' energy and all around ability will soon put things straight. He has lately had the valuable services of Mr. Michael Bloy.

I was ashamed of Buffalo's delegation to Asheville. It's true I can mention some pretty large towns in this state that did not have one single representative, but those cities will never be identified so closely with the national society. We had the convention; twice been honored with members of the executive committee; once, if I remember rightly, a president; have won bowling trophies so numerous that the fire insurance on them is now a tax on the club, and with all these honors we can only send two old men. Men and boys, you should sacrifice some of your pleasures for duty and loyalty to a noble cause.

A few Sundays ago in the early morning of a lovely day I had the pleasure to share the comfortable seating capacity of Capt. Braik's buggy while he drove over almost the entire park system. I have watched our parks since the first spade was sunk into the swamp in the fall of 1870. Though, like all the parks of the country, there is more or less politics injected into their management, as long as the actual superintendent is kept at the helm with his heart and energy in his work, as has our James Braik all will go well with us. Never in the life of our parks have they been in more superb order. The bounteous rains, 'tis true, put a color and freshness on grass and tree and shrub, but with all that, there was a neatness and good order pervading all that has never been surpassed.

The flower gardening in our parks is but a very secondary consideration, and here it is confined to public squares or a concourse of easy access to the multitude. The Parade, the Front, the Circle, the Zoo, and the small city parks are where the gaudy colors are introduced, and there they are entirely appropriate. Here and there you will find a poor forlorn little bed of geraniums, a mile from any neighbor, absurd in its loneliness and surroundings. These will disappear in time, and are purely the remnants of former recent mismanagement.

You could not afford me space, Mr. Editor, to mention, even, the many points of interest. The lily pond at the Fancy Bedding at the National Soldiers' Home, Grant County, Ind. Carl Anderson, Gardener.

Parade is worth a special visit. The Circle as you enter it from aristocratic North street, is about perfection. It strikes you as charming, and I will just say here that the flower gardening was never equalled in our parks. It is well done and splendidly maintained. The glorious meadow, with its natural undulating surface and stately trees has been kept mowed and never looked so well. The word park is much abused and twisted. There are picnic parks and shooting parks and driving parks that are as much entitled to be called parks as a bowling alley. Here in this "Meadow" is a true park, and long may it survive any encroachment of a cinder path or speeding path or anything that will in the least mar its pastoral beauty.

Much more could I say, but in conclusion I must with great pleasure inform you that all the defacement or injury done by the Pan-American by its use of the lake and its surroundings is entirely unobservable even at this early date. The shrubs that were cut down are not missed; they were overgrown and badly needed thinning out. An emerald lawn now covers the slopes of the lake where the madding crowd viewed the fireworks. A trifling sum has restored what little surface damage was done, and our parks were never more beautiful and should be the pride of every citizen. W. S.

FANCY BEDDING.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of some bedding on the grounds of the National Military Home, Grant Co., Ind., where Carl Anderson is gardener. The triangle is 90 feet long and 80 feet at base. In one corner are Florence Vaughan cannas and Stella Gurney ageratums, in the next are Philadelphia cannas and Vinca major, and in the third are Mme. Crozy cannas and coleus. As will be seen by the picture, these are surrounded by carpet bedding effects. It took about 20,000 plants to plant this triangle.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Saturday, as usual in the wholesale market, was encouraging, as it cleared the ice boxes of accumulations and gave business a chance to commence operations with a clean sheet on Monday morning. But prices and quality are at low tide and extremely hot weather at the start of this week, with Labor Day closing make a bad beginning for September.

Carnations begin to appreciate in price, and have climbed to $10 per 1,000 for the best. Good roses are scarce and bring fair prices, while long stemmed asters are in demand and in some cases have commanded as high as $4 per 100. Lilies are abundant and there seems to be no end to the shipments of gladioli. The very best sell for $10 per 1,000, but 90 per cent of the stock goes for 50 cents per 100.

Items.

The coal question will not down, and a great multitude of florists are looking with anxious eyes for the good news of the strike termination. Senator Platt says it will come within two weeks. One big dealer is "offering to take orders for October delivery at $6 a ton," which is evidently a bluff. Meantime $12 to $14 is the price, and the bins are empty. No assurance of relief is yet in sight, and only those whose very existence depends upon a break in prices can realize the anxiety of the thousands of growers in this vicinity.

The wholesale men, with hardly an exception, have remodeled, enlarged and repainted their offices and stores, so that at the beginning of no season for years have these establishments looked so inviting, or prepared so elaborately for a great business.

The great floral fete at Saratoga begins to-day (Monday) and will eclipse all its predecessors as a gorgeous spectacle. The ball decorations to-night will use an enormous quantity of smilax, laurel and gladioli. The floral parade is on Thursday and will be the event of the week. The demand for flowers of all kinds ought to deplete this market.

The Newport season is about over. Another week will see the end. Society moves to Lennox. The President will be there and the luncheon and ball in his honor, Wednesday, is to be an elaborate affair.

The season at Newport has been one of the best the florists have ever enjoyed. All have been overwhelmed with work and each one claims the best summer of his experience there.

Mr. Wadley, who was so badly injured in the Central tunnel disaster some months ago, is now convalescent and has just returned from a stay in the mountains almost himself again. He will be back in New York this winter at the old stand.

Siebrecht & Son are completely remodeling their old store at 409 5th avenue, having just re-leased the property for a term of years. Practically, it will be a new store and conservatory. The old greenhouse, 35x25 feet, will be rebuilt with iron frames and heavy glass, and the new conservatory, 130x25 feet, will be a model, with rookeries, grottos, and every modern convenience.

J. H. Troy is absorbing a week's ocean air at Bar Harbor with a touch of business on the side. Mrs. Troy and son are summering in the Catskills.

Mr. Downing of the "Resary" has been outing from one end of Long Island to the other. Mrs. Kelly, the genial bookkeeper of this firm, takes her holiday abroad next season.

Herrmann is overwhelmed with orders. His warerooms are stocked with filled boxes, labeled for shipment in September, and already the amount of business (September 1) is sufficient to guarantee a large month's outgo.

Mr. Nash has returned from the mountains "brown as a berry" and in excellent health. Mr. John Kral of this establishment is away for a week's camping on Captains' Island.

H. J. McIntosh, of Broadway, has been summering at Long Branch, and among his other accomplishments, saved a balloonist from drowning. Unfortunately it was a male æronaut and there are "no cards," but he "saved his man" all right and would have saved him faster if he had been a lady.

Mrs. Savin, the popular bookkeeper at Traendly & Schenck's, is back from a two weeks' sojourn in Canada.

John P. Cleary looks thoroughly refreshed and ready for the strain on his voice which begins next Friday with the first auction of the season. On Wednesday, September 23, he conducts the annual auction at Dreyer's greenhouses at Woodside, L. I.

Alex. Burns has the sympathy of the trade in the continued illness of his wife whose severe accident gives her little hope of recovery.

Mr. Schultheis, of College Point, is nursing a sprained ankle which a trip to the convention might have prevented.

James Weir, of Brooklyn, has mastered the intricacies of appendicitis and is rapidly getting well.

Charles Small and wife of J. H. Small & Sons, are back from a two months' trip in Europe, which was much enjoyed.

Some shippers of bay trees and bulbs to Asheville from this town are rejoicing in the belief that the element of risk will be eliminated next year, and that their exhibits will reach the convention at Milwaukee sometime before the sessions close. Bobbink & Atkins and Clucas & Boddington both have occasion to remember the Asheville exhibition.

The "Southland" brought vividly to our notice the galax leaf industry. The number handling this commodity in New York is on the increase. A. J. Fellouris, who has lately opened another store at 468 6th avenue, near 28th street, has been in this line for years. His brother is now associated with him and these young men have built up an extensive business, handling also all kinds of ferns and evergreens. They were born near Sparta, Greece, and like many of their countrymen, have become excellent American citizens.

September opens with about the hottest weather of the summer; too warm for bowling, but—well, look out for New York at Milwaukee. The winter campaign promises to be a warm one, and with one-half the facilities and attention and practice given the game by those Philadelphians, the result of any future contests would easily be foretold. It's a wonder those Brotherly Love people didn't take home the next convention! They got about everything else.

Next Monday night is the regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club. It will be of importance in view of the rapid approach of the flower show. Some interesting exhibits are also expected. The meeting will be held at 128 East 28th street. A large attendance is expected.

J. Austin Shaw.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply of stock is continually increasing, but demand is very irregular. Some days the demand will be brisk and all flowers of good quality will be well cleaned up at satisfactory prices, and on others there will be so little call that even the best stock will not move at any price. What demand there is seems to come from outside points, the calls from local dealers being few. On some days the shipments will be as numerous as in the height of the season and again they will be so few as to indicate a universal lack of demand. The average results are nearer those of the usual summer dullness than we have had before this season.

There seems to be an abundance of carnations from field plants, and the receipts of asters are probably double those of last year. And the quality, at least of the later blooming asters, is far ahead of last year on the average.

On roses of shipping grade, the quotations are $3 to $4, and on carnations $1 to $1.50. A very good grade of carnation can be had for $1.00. Large lots of under-grade roses and carnations are jobbed off on days of light demand at unpleasantly-low figures. On asters $1.50 per 100 is obtained for the best on days of fair demand, while on the off days some bad slaughters are made. On Tuesday a sale of 10,000 asters, mixed accumulated stock, was sold at $1.00 per 1,000. Another lot of 5,000 fairly good blooms was sold at $2.00 per 1,000. And the dealer later had to dump 5,000 more.

Under present conditions the growers might as well save themselves the trouble of cutting and shipping Golden Glow rudebeckias and gladioli. They do not find any demand at any price.

Various Items.

John Poehlmann is laid up with a badly sprained knee, which he acquired while making a home-run in a recent ball game at Morton Grove. His foot caught in a rut in the ground and his leg was twisted as he fell. It will probably keep him at home for a week or more. But the injury is somewhat salved by the fact that prior to the accident he rolled up runs galore for his side by knocking the ball several times into an adjoining county.

G. H. Pieser, secretary of Kennicott Bros. Co., returned from his vacation looking and feeling as fine as silk.

John Muir has been on the sick list several weeks, but is now improving.

The latest report regarding Edgar Sanders is that, while he has not been improving as rapidly as could be wished, Tuesday morning his condition was satisfactory.

That scrub bowling team at Asheville might have done a good deal worse than it did. Second position was pretty good, considering the fact that several who make no pretension to be bowlers were obliged to come in to fill out the team. At Milwaukee we should have a team that is all wool and a yard wide. St. Louis will undoubtedly be there in full warpaint, as well as Philadelphia and New York. It is not too early to get to work. A warm series of league games this winter will put the old-timers into good trim and possibly develop some new blood. Get together, boys, and go into training.

Some extra fine asters with stems two and two and one-half feet long, and some of the blooms five inches across, were noted this week at J. A. Budlong's. Even under present market conditions they brought $2 per 100. And the most interesting part is that these blooms were grown by John Zeck, the manager, in his own garden.

The changes at the establishment of Kennicott Bros. Co. are now about completed, and they make this a model place for the handling of cut flowers.

D. Y. Elinson and George Waldbart of St. Louis, D. B. Woodruff of Macon, Ga., and Mrs. Milo Brown of Spirit Lake, Ia., were recent visitors.

The boilermakers' strike has now been satisfactorily settled, and florists who had boilers in course of construction are relieved.

The greenhouses of Mrs. L. Hagemann, who died June 2, at Morgan Park, are to be torn down and removed.

At Des Plaines F. L. Pruse has retired from the business, having leased his greenhouses to the Des Plaines Floral Co., which is composed of H. C. Blewitt, Harry Blewitt and John Prickett. The lease dates from Sept. 1. The plant will be devoted mainly to carnations. H. C. Blewitt will retain his old establishment as before, and the leased greenhouses will be in charge of his son, Harry Blewitt, who has for many years been with Peter Reinberg.

Mr. J. J. Curran and family of Kalamazoo, Mich., are visiting Mr. D. Wood Brant, of Brant & Noe, at Forest Glen.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor this week, and reports large sales in the supply line. He shows many very attractive specialties, including a remarkable line of ribbons and the silk velvet crepe paper, which is a most decided advance on the old style paper.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cool nights of the past week have improved stock of all kinds, and cut roses of all varieties are looking fine, with plenty of them in the market, except first-class Beauties. I noticed last week some very fine Meteors of good color and elegant foliage, which brought as high as $4, and from that down to $2, according to the length of stem. Maids and Brides are yet a little soft, but have fine, long stems, the best of which bring $3. Some good Kaiserins, Carnots and Gates are also seen in the market. The few good Beauties that come in bring $2.50 per dozen; short stuff from 60 cents to $1 per dozen.

Carnations are also looking somewhat better. The only trouble with them is that the short-stemmed ones have good blooms and the long stems have poor blooms. Good Lawsons with short stems bring $1 per 100. The whites are very poor. The bulk of the stock is sold at 50 and 75 cents. The only other salable flowers in the market just now are asters of the Semple varieties. Those with fine blooms and long stems bring from $1 to $2 per 100. Only the white and purple sell; the other colors are usually dumped.

Valley had a good demand the past week, but seems scarce. We hope from now on that the reports from the markets will be better, and that we all shall have a good trade this coming season.

Visitors.

After-convention drummers flooded the town the past week. The combination was: Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; B. Eschner of M. Rice & Co., and Mr. Fancourt of Pennock's, all of Philadelphia, and L. Baumann of Richter & Baumann, Chicago.

Notes.

Fred C. Weber and family, who stayed a week longer at Asheville, returned home Saturday much pleased with their trip.

George Windler, vice-president-elect of the club, and John Connon are back from Asheville and report a grand time.

John Young and family returned home Saturday from Atlantic City, N. J., after a stay of four weeks. Mrs. Young has fully recovered from her recent injuries.

George Waldbart spent a week in Chicago before returning home from the convention.

John W. Kunz was around the past week calling on his friends. John is looking the picture of health. He has several good offers under consideration, but nothing doing as yet.

Club Meeting.

Don't forget the regular monthly meeting of the club next Thursday afternoon in the Odd Fellows' building. A large attendance is expected at this interesting meeting. There is a surprise in store for the members in the installation ceremonies, coupled with the work of Brother Barnes of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Vice-President-elect Windler and F. C. Weber will tell us all about the Asheville convention, so don't forget to be on hand or you will miss a treat.

Of Interest to Bowlers.

The florist bowlers will be divided this season. Kuehn, Sturtz and Beneke have signed with the Unicum team, Ellison and Meyer with the Diel Stars and Clark and Beyer with the Turners, all of whom will play in the same league. The best of the florists will still keep up the Florists' Club team and roll every Monday night. It will be made up of F. C. Weber, John Young, C. C. Sanders, Theo Miller, F. M. Ellis, William Adels, R. F. Tesson and George Windler. The league bowlers will be on hand on off nights and roll with them. From this bunch of bowlers a team will be made up in the spring to bowl at Milwaukee next August. We will keep our rivals throughout the country posted from time to time on our progress. J. J. B.

ELK DESIGN IN FLORAL PARADE.

One of the finest floats ever seen in any floral parade was made up by the Windmiller Co., of Mankato, Minn. It was during the Elks' carnival in that city that Pauline Windmiller conceived the idea of entering in the floral parade, and a huge elk about eight feet high made up of asters, achillea and various other flowers and mounted on a large platform wagon, decorated with foliage plants, was made up on short notice and surprised the residents by its attractiveness. It easily captured first honors. The ribbons were handled by Miss Windmiller, representing Columbia, and she was kept exceedingly busy acknowledging the showers of applause bestowed upon her. C. C. P.

And now the daily papers are talking of "The Chrysanthemum Trust." If the dream will only materialize the reporters will be forgiven.

CINCINNATI.

The Fall Festival.

The Cincinnati Fall Festival, which will be held this year from September 15 to 27, inclusive, is offering $500 as premiums for table decorations, design work and cut flowers, to be shown during the festival. There will be two special days on which the prizes will be competed for, and as they are very liberal a good display may be looked forward to. The dates of the floral exhibits will be Thursday, September 18, and Thursday, September 25. Several have already expressed their intention of competing.

The Market.

There has been a slight improvement in the condition of our market during the past week. Not only were there more flowers of better quality, but there was a better demand. Nearly every one had a little funeral work. Labor day helped things out a little, and many short-stemmed roses were disposed of for button-hole bouquets. An improvement is also noticed in other quarters, and it is now only a question of a few weeks till fall trade will open up and we will forget the dull times during summer.

All grades of stock are showing a marked improvement, and a few weeks of cool weather is what is most needed now. Roses are improving nicely, but the number of A1 stock is as yet very limited. The price has not changed any, but is still as quoted last week, and it is not likely to change for some time. Beauties are coming in increased numbers, and are first-class stock. The best grade reaches $1.50 to $2 per dozen, with shorter-stemmed ones at 75 cents to $1. These blooms are really very good for this time of the year, and meet a very good demand. Some first-class Kaiserins are to be had, and sell well. Meteors and Liberties arrive in quantities, and sell slowly. There is very little demand for that color in any kind of flower at present, except Beauty.

Carnations are also improving, but as yet few are being cut from indoors. Field-grown blooms are about the same as they always are, and 50 cents per 100 is top figure for them. Indoor stock reaches $1, and there is a good demand for it. Carnation plants were unusually good about here this fall, and a first-class crop of flowers is being looked forward to by all growers.

Asters from the north are beginning to arrive, and they are first-class stock; $1.50 per 100 is obtained for them, and they sell very well. There are some gladioli also that go well at 2 to 3 cents. There is plenty of smilax and Asparagus plumosus, and there will be good sale for this stock durin gthe next few weeks, owing to many decorations.

Items.

The annual "Harvest Home" at Green township, near this city, took place last Thursday. There were four florists who exhibited for the premiums offered. They were J. T. Conger, George Murphy, Robert Murphy and E. Reutenschoer. The latter took all of the premiums offered.

Visitors during the past week were: E. J. Fancourt and Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia, Pa., and Frank Snyder, Gallipolis, O.

Trade and Personal Notes.

A careful review of August business shows a nice increase in trade over last year's figures.

Instead of being the dull season, August has been quite a busy month. Everything grown by the average florist has sold well. Roses have been scarce, not enough to meet the demand, and a great many blooms have been shipped in. Carnations seem unusually scarce and many thousand blooms have been purchased by the store men. There has been an abundance of sweet peas which have been in good demand.

The convention at Asheville is now a matter of the past, but it very wisely decided to meet at Milwaukee next year. This is cheering news to the Twin City florists, who should attend in goodly numbers.

P. H. Anderson, well and favorably known to the florists in this city, has purchased the Campbell greenhouses in St. Cloud and will conduct the business hereafter under the firm name of the Anderson Floral Co. Next year he expects to move the houses onto his own land and build several more in addition.

Stock at the Warrendale greenhouses is in fine condition and promises well for another season. The roses here are all grown on their own roots. Club root is unknown, and roses on their own roots are said to produce more blooms than grafted ones.

Chris Hansen has returned from his visit to the Canadian Northwest much invigorated in health.

N. C. Hansen has his new carnation house nearly completed.

E. F. Lemke has his new range on Hague avenue about finished. His range on University avenue has all been newly painted.

L. L. May & Co. have their new houses about completed, except the glazing. Four of the houses have been planted to roses. Recent rains washed the foundations of one of the benches away so that it fell to the ground under its heavy load, necessitating the replanting of it.

A. S. Swanson is rebuilding the conservatory in connection with his city store.

H. W. Bunde, it is rumored, will engage in the florist business some time this month.

This is State Fair week and the Minneapolis brethren are competing keenly for the several premiums. E. Nagel & Co., Mendenhall, Minneapolis Floral Co. and John Vasatka all have fine displays of plants. L. L. May & Co. of this city have an elegant display of palms and cut flowers in connection with their seed exhibit in the main building.

Mr. R. Latham has resumed his position with Donaldson & Co. and now has charge of the cut flower department at the city store. Mr. Souden will be general superintendent of the department, but will devote most of his time to the greenhouse.

Mr. Blome, representing C. C. Pollworth Co. of Milwaukee, was a recent caller.

The Asheville souvenir has reached us and is most attractive and nicely gotten up. Those of us who could not go can read this book and the convention minutes and almost feel that we have been there. X. Y. Z.

Plant Registration.

J. B. Trudo, Alderbend, N. Y., registers carnation Wingold; result of a cross between Mrs. Lawson and an unnamed white; color, Lawson pink, with wide white lengthwise stripes, sometimes white-tipped; lower petals half white, transversely; size, three to four inches, very double and fragrant; height, two feet.

The name, Miss Alice Roosevelt, as applied to a carnation raised by J. B. Trudo, has been withdrawn, there being another carnation to which the name had previously been given. The name now substituted by Mr. Trudo is Biltmore. It is described as a seedling from Mrs. Lawson X Eldorado; color, white, dotted and splashed with carmine; flower three and one-half to four inches in diameter, full, fringed, clove fragrance; foliage glaucous, stems stiff, height two feet.

PIPING.

We are building two houses 60 feet long and 18 and 20 feet wide, 6-foot walls, 12 feet to gables, 32 inches of glass in walls; houses run north and south; shed and boiler on north end. How many runs of 4-inch pipe will we need in the 18-foot house under side benches? What size flows? We use the 4-inch, as we have them on hand. How many runs of 1½-inch will we need in the 20-foot house and what size flows? Want the returns under the side benches, flows overhead, as heater will be on top of ground; temperature, 60 degrees.

K. & S.

Replying to K. & S., the 18x60 house he describes will require nine lines of 4-inch pipes, two of which will be for overhead flows. For the 20x60 house, sixteen lines of 1½-inch pipe with two 4-inch overhead flows. Why not sink the heater in the ground, as by keeping it above best results cannot be obtained and a continued additional cost for fuel is entailed?

PIPING.

In answer to the inquiry of W. H. M., the main flow from the boiler should be 3½-inch and the return 2½-inch. One 2-inch steam flow should run under purlin on each slope of the roof and connect with three returns of 1¼-inch pipe under each side bench. One 1½-inch steam flow should extend along under the ridge and return through two 1¼-inch returns, one of which would be placed under each of the center benches.

The boiler should have a capacity equal to 15 horse-power. A cast-iron sectional boiler could be used for this work, having about 1,100 square inches of grate area.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

At a meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at Asheville the present board of officers was held over till the annual meeting, to be held in Chicago, next November. At that time a general meeting will be held, essays will be read, and it is expected that the proceedings will be recorded in the annual report of the S. A. F.

As this will be the first time a general meeting will have been held during the chrysanthemum season, and as the exhibition will naturally be a strong attraction, it is expected that there will be a large gathering of chrysanthemum specialists in Chicago Nov. 4 to 8.

WIRED TOOTHPICKS.

Among the labor-saving devices recently introduced, the machine-wired toothpicks shown at recent conventions by W. J. Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., seem worthy of special attention. They certainly save a great deal of hand labor, and labor and time saved are equivalent to money earned. Anyone who has not yet used these ready wired toothpicks should not fail to try them.

CORRECTION.

In our report of the exhibition at Asheville an error crept into our description of the Burnham round steam boiler. We should have said that the boiler is cast in one piece from base to top, doing away with all joints, and thus representing a step forward in boiler construction. The company makes this style boiler both for steam and hot water in several sizes.

EXTRA CHOICE Lilium Harrisii

(Bermuda Easter Lily.)

We have received from one of the most careful growers in Bermuda a grand lot of Bulbs. He writes us regarding the same as follows:

"I believe these Bulbs to be the very best stock leaving Bermuda this or any previous season, perfectly free from disease, no Longiflorum mixed with them and worth 50 per cent. more to the growers than nine-tenths of the stock leaving the colony this season."

The appearance of the Bulbs fully warrant the above strong statement. We offer them as under:

	Per 100	Per Case	Per 1000
5 to 7-inch, packed 400 in a case	$ 4 75	$18 00	$ 45 00
7 to 9 " " 200 "	11 00	20 00	100 00
9 to 11 " " 100 "	20 00	20.00	90.00

As the lot is not very large it would be well to order early.

WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS.

We have a good supply of the popular 12 to 15 centimeter Bulbs (packed 2100 to the case), price $24.00 per 1000. This price will be advanced shortly; save the difference by ordering now.

Other bulbs now ready—Pink and Blue Roman Hyacinths, White Italian Hyacinths, Freesias, Alliums, Narcissus Paper White, etc., etc.

CLEVELAND.

There is nothing more to report in the line of business than there was last week. It is the same old "song o' sixpence," a little now and then, yet sometimes enough to cause a scarcity in white flowers.

Outside asters are almost played out. What are left are being eaten up very rapidly by the aster bug, which in some places is reported very numerous, while in others, hand picking keeps it in check. One of the last named places is John Mollenkopf's on Lake Shore boulevard. John has been cutting some of the finest asters (Semple's Branching) that have ever been cut in this section. He has no trouble to get rid of them, as the buyers are always waiting for him to arrive at the market. He has most of his carnations benched, and such plants!—the finest I have seen this year, especially his Lawson, which will measure over fifteen inches through the plants as they stand on the bench. His mums are also in first-class order. He has some fine specimen plants of Boston fern; they are almost perfect.

A visit to A. Schmitt's establishment in Glenville revealed everything in apple-pie order. He is progressing nicely with his new houses. His mums are in first-class order and his carnations are exceptionally fine. He commenced benching on the first day of August, so his plants are now all established and growing nicely. Here they had one pure white flower on a Lawson plant last winter, and have now three plants taken from that stem, which are now under the especial care of Charlie Schmitt, who says that if they only come white, he will read his title clear to a mansion on the Lake Shore. Here are also some very fine Asparagus Sprengeri, and a nice lot of Boston ferns in all sizes.

I also called at Fred Aul's. Here I found the proprietor busy at the potting bench. I had to look for a second to see who it was, when he said: "Here I am; don't you know me with my big hat on?" He laid it down on the bench and in a few minutes his son came running after us asking his father what he did with one of the sieves. Fred went back and found he had covered it up with his hat. Well, hat or no hat, Fred is a worker and also a hustler, as his place bears evidence. He has several nice benches of mums. He claims that the best remedy for aphis and thrips on mums is tobacco-water sprayed over them in the evening. He was just benching his carnations, which were a little small. His roses are doing very nicely. Fred makes a specialty of ivies, having about 3,000 outside now, which are certainly fine. He has also some very fine hydrangeas outside.

He has found a panacea for all the ills of the propagating bench in coke dust, which he uses in preference to anything else, and in which he propagates everything, with the exception of carnations, for which he uses bank sand. He is not doing any building this year, but has done a great deal of repairing.

R. Hughes, of East Prospect street, has taken down two houses and will build one in the place of them. He reports business rather slow. Tenep.

Findlay, O.—Foster & Son have added a new house, 75x30.

Lilium Harrisii.

We have a splendid lot of late-dug bulbs that have just arrived. On account of late digging bulbs are splendidly ripened and are unusually fine. The season has been very favorable, and it is a long time since we have been able to offer such fine stock. Bulbs are plump and hard, and that bright golden yellow color which denotes a well-ripened and healthy bulb. Bulbs run unusually large and are in the very best possible condition. We offer them as long as unsold as follows:

6- 7-in. bulbs,	$17.50	per case of	350	bulbs;	in less quantities,	$ 6 00	per	100.
7- 9-in. bulbs,	20.00	"	200	"	"	11.00	"
9-11-in. bulbs,	20.00	"	100	"	"	22.00	"

We also have a fine lot of BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUM late-dug bulbs, shipped by last Bermuda steamer, which arrived this week. This is an extra fine lot of selected bulbs. 7-9-in. bulbs, $20.00 per case of 200 bulbs; in less quantities, $11.00 per 100.

CALLAS. We have a grand stock of these splendidly ripened bulbs ready for immediate shipment.

Extra quality bulbs,	1¼ to 1½-in.	diameter.	$ 5 00	per 100;	$40.00	per 1000.

PANSY PLANTS.

For Pansy Seed see under heading "Seeds."

500,000 PANSIES, finest market strain grown. Awarded first-class certificate of merit by the Mass. Horticultural Society.
ATTENTION is called to these facts:
This strain is the result of over twenty years' careful selection.
The seed was saved this year from over 12,000 plants, the finest among the 500,000 flowered and sold last spring.
Particular attention is always paid to form and substance as well as size and color. The colors will be found very evenly proportioned, including rich selfs, brilliant variegations and many novel shades—no dull, mixed sorts.
Our pansies have for many years held the highest reputation in the Boston and Eastern New England markets and we confidently believe will be found the most satisfactory strain ever offered for florists' use.
Two of our customers write us as follows:
Boston, Mass.
Mr. I. E. Coburn. Dear Sir:—The pansies you have supplied us with have been the means of largely increasing the demand for these plants. The colors, size and form have been the admiration of all our patrons who have had them.
Yours truly, SCHLEGEL & FOTTLER CO.,
Seedsmen, 26 South Market Street,
Boston, Mass.
Mr. I. E. Coburn:—We have handled several thousand baskets of your pansies for the past four years and find them superior in size, color and variety to any grown in this section.

ASHEVILLE HOTELS.

The hotel accommodations at Asheville would probably have been sufficient had not the railways advertised widely the special rate made the S. A. F. and made it open to everyone. As a result many excursion trains brought crowds of people to the city from adjoining states and the city and the hotels were packed. One of the local papers said there were more visitors in town than at any other time in its history, and estimated the number of arrivals on Tuesday at fully 3,000.

The Battery Park Hotel was supposed to be the best hotel in the city and nearly everybody on the two special trains from the east and the west went there first. They discovered that the clerk at this hotel was entitled to rank as the most discourteous and insolent hotel clerk in the country. Those who had written long in advance to have rooms reserved for them were curtly informed that the hotel was full. One gentleman who had telegraphed his reservation asked: "Why didn't you answer my telegram?" The clerk's response was: "We haven't any time to answer telegrams." The gentleman observed that that was no way to do business and was sharply informed: "That's the way we do business."

And not only delegates to the convention were so treated. A southern lady who had telegraphed this hotel in advance for a room was told on her arrival late at night that she must look elsewhere for accommodation, and but for the consideration of the proprietor of the Hotel Berkeley, who under the circumstances gave her a lounge in the hotel parlor, she might have been obliged to stay on the street all night. The just indignation of this lady will, we are sure, make her for life an advertiser of the wrong kind for the Battery Park Hotel.

Every one we have met that ran up against the management of this Battery Park Hotel had a tale of discourteous treatment to tell. The manager seems to think that he has a lead pipe cinch on the situation and that it is unnecessary for him or his assistants to use even common courtesy in dealing with the traveling public.

We are pleased to say that the proprietor of the Hotel Berkeley was a pleasing contrast. His hotel was full; he was swamped with business; he couldn't give his patrons the service he wished to, but he did his best and treated all with unfailing courtesy. After coming in contact with the insolent management of the Battery Park Hotel this was probably more noticeable. But it is worthy of note under the circumstances.

A "CROP-ANNOUNCE."

We have received a circular from an European seed grower that contains some intensely amusing English. We feel we ought to share the pleasure of a perusal with our readers, and we present some extracts below:

As usually we take the liberty to mention you the views of our crop.

In generally we may be content, there are some varities which are about a forth night later than usual, as the weather was very cold during the month of May, nevertheless we are happy to acknowledge to have the right Summer now which can easely fetch in this retard.

The dryness and insects of last summer have damaged very much to the two years plantation but which we kept are in generally very good.

We are glad to say the follow of our crop at present:

Cabbage. As above mentioned we lost a party before the winter which we kept are very good and expect to have an average crop.

Cornsalar. Large qwantity in culture aspects very good.

Cucumber. It is rather early to say anything about it, they are late, when we keep nice weather the crop will be sufficient.

Beans. The aspects are looking very wel.

HAIL ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the Florists' Hail Association at Asheville the old officers were re-elected. Amendments to the by-laws were passed extending the time for reporting a loss from five days to fifteen days, and for filing proof with the secretary from ten days to sixty days. Failure to file proof of loss within the sixty days will relieve the association of liability.

ROSE DOROTHY PERKINS.

A very favorable report on this new American rose appears in the issue for June 14 of the Gardening Illustrated, showing that the rose is demonstrating its good qualities in English as well as American gardens. It is referred to as a first-rate companion of the Crimson Rambler.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. William F. Gude, the well-known florist, has been elected president of the Washington Business Men's Association. In this connection the Washington Times prints a portrait of Mr. Gude and a sketch of his life in its issue of Aug. 10.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Charles R. Miller, who formerly conducted a floral establishment on Main street, and who is at present in the employ of Thorley, New York, spent a week in this city recently. Ino.

San Jose, Cal.—The Braslan Seed Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $75,000, with $5 subscribed and with O. H. Braslan, E. O. Pieper, M. W. Williams, Chas. P. Braslan of San Jose, and Milton Bernard of San Francisco, as directors.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The fourth annual flower show of the El Paso County Hort. Society, Aug. 20 to 22, was a decided success. The entries were numerous and many prizes were awarded, mainly to amateurs. In the classes for professional florists there were entries from the Far. Floral Co., Denver; F. F. Crump, W. W. Wilmore and Frank Perkins.

Hillsboro, O.—The Hillsboro Floral Co. will move its plant to Blanchester, O., Oct. 1st. Fourteen acres have been secured on the Cuba pike inside the town limits and the lumber is on the ground for two houses, each 20x60, same to be completed by Oct. 10th. The name will be changed to the Blanchester Floral Co.

Winona, Minn.—The Winona Floral Co., which secured a lease of the Youmans greenhouses for ten years, is repairing the houses and putting the grounds in shape. Messrs. H. W. Rogers and R. G. Guenther, formerly of Chicago, are managing the business.

Utica, N. Y.—The members of the Utica Florists' Club entertained visiting florists from Syracuse at a clam bake at Wells' grove in Deerfield Aug. 12. William Matthews was master of ceremonies. There were about forty in the party, and a most enjoyable outing was had.

Marion, Ind.—Mr. Carl Anderson, for some time past gardener at the National Military Home, has removed to Seattle, Wash. His position at the Home will be taken by Mr. R. A. McKeand, formerly of Garfield Park, Indianapolis.

Baker City, Ore.—John Weeks has purchased the Baker City greenhouses from Mrs. P. Basche, the consideration being $3,000 cash. Mr. Weeks will enlarge the establishment.

Sedalia, Mo.—In the floricultural department of the Missouri State Fair held here Aug. 18 to 23, Messrs. Gelven & Son received nine first premiums, C. Koeppen four, and C. A. Pfeiffer one.

PRIMULA POISONING.

Tell the subscriber who has been poisoned by Primula obconica to try good thick sweet cream well and frequently rubbed on as a lotion. This has with us proved a sovereign remedy.

J. W. Margrave.

Hiawatha, Kan.

It seems to me that the action of Primula obconica poisoning is similar to that of the poison ivy. The cure in both cases, as far as my experience goes, is a free application of tincture of bloodroot. Apply the tincture with a sponge or clean cloth to the parts affected. I have known of several cures by this tincture where the poisoning has been caused by either the ivy or the primula. I would like to know the result of this treatment in the case referred to (if the patient sees fit to try it), either by letter or through the Florists' Review.

Charles S. Mason.

Farmington, Conn.

I see one of your subscribers is suffering from Primula obconica poisoning. I was similarly affected, though not to the same extent. A few applications of peroxide of hydrogen gave me relief.

John G. Sipe.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

During the past month trade has been steady, and, comparing it with the same month of a year ago, there is a considerable advance. With the resorters beginning to return and the Elks' Street Carnival, which continued for a week, the last part of the month was quite lively.

Roses from young stock are plentiful and of a high grade, the demand for Beauties being quite brisk.

Carnation planting is just about finished. The plants are strong and promise a good cut in the near future. G. Van Bochove & Bro. are already cutting some fine blooms from their earlier planted houses.

Mums are looking well, and from present appearances are likely to be early.

We are having delightful fall weather.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business the past week has greatly improved. Brides and Maids are coming in freely, but are rather small. Carnations are still very poor. Asters are plentiful and a drug on the market.

Mr. Jacob Schulz, C. H. Kunzman and August Boehner have returned from Asheville, and report having a pleasant time.

C. H. Kunzman's new carnation house is a model of beauty; size of glass, 24x36.

Victor Mathis has remodeled two houses.

Mrs. Coenen, who spent a week in Indiana, has returned greatly improved in health.

Hy. Fuehs' little boy, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever, has nearly recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schulz celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage Aug. 23d. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and they received numerous and costly presents. The Kentucky Society of Florists presented Mr. Schulz with a very handsome leather chair.

Wm. Mann, who spent two weeks at Atlantic City, has returned and looks the picture of health.

Henry Huth, out at St. Stephen's cemetery, is putting up two more greenhouses. He has some very fine pot chrysanthemums. Hy. Lichtefeld.

DES MOINES, IA.

While returning from Asheville we stopped one day at Cincinnati and one at St. Louis, enjoying the parks and zoo at the former place and the botanical garden at the latter, where we found Mr. Gurney, the superintendent, in his ever pleasant mood. At his request we accompanied him on an inspection of Tower Grove Park, and we found his aquatics were remarkably fine. Nymphæa Frank Trelease is, we think, the finest nymphæa we have ever seen. N. Zanzibarensis was also extra fine, while the Victorias are wonders to behold. During our drive about the park Mr. Gurney called our attention to the various interesting specimens and landscape views there to be seen in their grandeur.

We arrived home tired and sleepy, but were soon at work among our flower beds, feeling satisfied that the trip to the convention was indeed an educational journey. J. T. D. F.

South Bethlehem, Pa.—Chas. Vorkeller, formerly of Allentown, has purchased the greenhouses and business of R. B. Williams at 817 Seneca street.

Mr. Theron N Parker,
Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co.
Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the bill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory, and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.
Yours very truly,
A. L. Thorne.

La Fayette, Ind., July 8, 1902.
Theron N. Parker,
Harrison, N. J.
Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,

THE CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

FIFTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The fifth annual convention of the above Association was called to order at 2:30 the afternoon of Wednesday, Sept. 3d, in the City Hall, Hamilton, Ont. Mr. C. M. Webster introduced Alderman J. G. Y. Burkholder, who, in the absence of Mayor Hendrie, delivered an address of welcome, in which he assured the members of the Association of the pleasure it afforded the citizens to entertain them, and concluded by extending the liberty of the city. He added that the visitors were at liberty to take anything they wanted except the mountain, which the citizens felt could not be spared.

Mr. Thomas Manton responded on behalf of the Association, expressing the thanks of the members for the kindly greeting and welcome extended, and his belief that the convention begun under such favorable conditions would be of great value to the organization.

The address of President Joseph Bennett, of Montreal, was then read as follows:

President Bennett's Address.

Ladies and Gentlemen: At this, the fifth annual meeting of our Association, I do not intend to bore you with a long address. Speechmaking is not in my line. I would feel more at home using a spade, though I don't pretend to do much in that line, either, as I find it does not agree with me now. I can easily recall the time when it used to, or rather, I might say, when I had to agree with it. With your permission, however, I will just touch on a few points that have occurred to me to be of interest to us all and which we might profitably discuss.

First, then, at this, our fifth annual meeting, I think we might ask ourselves these questions: Are we satisfied with the progress made, or rather have we made the progress we ought to have done since this Association was formed? If we are not satisfied with the progress made, is it not time and advisable for us to try and find out why, and if we have made mistakes to rectify them at once?

Is our membership what it might or should be? In quantity, I mean (of course the quality is all right). When we consider the numbers employed in floriculture in Canada and then how our membership roll stands, what do we find? At the present time we have perhaps 50 members, and from several sources I have been able to form a rough estimate that there are about 12,000 persons employed in floriculture in Canada. This estimate does not include those engaged in the nursery business. Then, again, there must be hundreds of amateurs whom we ought to get in as associate members. We want all we can get if we are to make a national society. Now, in the face of these figures, and we may as well look them right in the face, no half measures will do. I ask you again, is our membership what it ought to be?

How can we induce more to join us is the next question, and not only to induce them to join, but how can we hold them after they do join us? Perhaps some of you, as well as myself, have asked someone to join and become a member, and perhaps you have had a reply something like this. Oh, what benefit is it to me to join the C. H. A? I can't go to the meetings. What do I get for my $2.00? If we look at the question from this point of view for a moment, we must admit that there seems very little to induce anyone to part with his two dollars. If we published a report yearly with the full proceedings of the convention in the same way that the S. A. F. does, and which I think we certainly ought to do (perhaps the Federal Government would print it if we asked them), then we would have something that might be of value to those unable to attend the meetings, and they would not think that their two dollars was all spent in vain. I think that these are very important questions and should receive your attention during this convention.

While we fully and freely admit that the horticultural papers published on the other side of 45 are right up to date and first-class in every respect, containing as they do the practical experience of the best men over there, and sometimes notes from this side as well, everything almost can be found in their advertising columns. Yet, for obvious reasons, they do not just exactly fill the bill for us Canadians. What we want is a paper published in Canada in the interests of us Canadian gardeners, florists, seedsmen, nurserymen, amateurs and professionals. We all want it and we want it now. There is not the slightest doubt but that we would benefit one and all if we were more in touch. At times some of us have a surplus that we would be glad to sell but for want of knowing where to place it we lose it; at times we want something and don't know where to get it. It would also be a powerful factor in keeping alive the interest in the Association between conventions, and I am sure would help us to gain many members. I need not say more on the necessity of a Canadian paper. I am sure you all agree with me, and I hope the necessary steps will be taken to get it started right away.

There are several points that might be taken up if we have the time, but I think those I have referred to are important and should receive attention as soon as possible. I thank you for your kind attention.

Secretary Ewing's Report.

Since our last very successful, interesting and most friendly meeting held in the Forest City of London last year, very little of importance has occurred, although owing to the good missionary work done by some of the members the association has been steadily growing in importance and there is every indication that this will be the banner convention and beat the record both as regards attendance and the trade exhibit.

I feel confident that it is only the vast extent of our country and the great distances between towns and cities and the consequent great expense of traveling to and from the convention that has hitherto kept the attendance down, but I also feel confident that as the objects of the association become more known, and the profession generally understand and see the possibilities of it, the less will the expense "bugbear" trouble them. They will see that the expense incurred is returned to them many fold, although perhaps indirectly.

At this date appearances point to a large trade exhibit, which is likely to bring direct returns to many members and to be a great boon and convenience to others. It is a feature that has perhaps been rather neglected at former conventions, and our Hamilton friends are to be congratulated on seeing the importance of it and working it up to the extent indicated.

It is gratifying to learn through the horticultural press that a large contingent may be expected from the eastern provinces, and it is to be hoped that when a convention is next held in an eastern city, the western members will reciprocate in like manner.

I have this year to record the death of W. C. G. Knott, who was superintendent of Rockwood Park, St. John's, New Brunswick. He was a member of the executive committee and an earnest worker for the good of the association, but was prevented by ill health from coming to the convention at London last year.

The executive committee has met twice since the last convention, the reports of which meetings will be read to you. It is much to be regretted that the efforts of the convention have been so far unsuccessful in finding a way to start, or get started, a trade paper. However, the matter has been well discussed amongst many of the members, and some progress has been made. No doubt further steps will be taken at this meeting towards this most desirable object. There appears to be a distinct demand from the profession in this country for such a paper, "made in Canada."

I have to humbly apologize to the officers and members for my apparent neglect in doing the duties of the office to which they elected me. I must assure them that the neglect was not because of any unwillingness or laziness on my part, but simply on account of entire disability owing to change of circumstances. I wish to sincerely thank those who undertook the work at great personal inconvenience and carried it out so admirably and successfully.

Reports were also received from the treasurer and the executive committee. All the reports were accepted. A vote of thanks was tendered the president for his able address.

Messrs. Thomas Manton, Eglinton; E. J. Mepsted, Ottawa; A. C. Wilshire and Jas. McKenna, Montreal, were appointed judges of the trade exhibit.

There was an interesting discussion upon the president's address, participated in by Messrs. Wm. Gammage, London; J. A. Campbell, Simcoe; Fred Bennett, Montreal; Brooks Fergus, J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; Mr. Hall, Montreal, and others. It related mainly to the advisability of starting a Canadian trade paper, as suggested. Mr. F. R. Pierson being called upon for his opinion, suggested that the proposed publication be purely a trade paper, and that it be published by a joint stock company. He thought the first thing to do was to canvass for stock subscriptions.

New Officers.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Thomas Manton, Eglinton; First Vice-President, Geo. Robinson, Montreal; Second Vice-President, E. J. Mepsted, Ottawa; Secretary, A. H. Ewing, Woodstock; Treasurer, Herman Simmers, Toronto.

It was decided to hold the next convention in Toronto.

The Trade Exhibit.

The Thistle Curling Rink was most artistically decorated in the national colors, and there was a fine display of plants, as will be seen by the picture showing a part of the exhibition, seen elsewhere in this issue. Among the exhibits were the following: J. Gammage & Son, London, an exceptionally well grown collection of palms and ferns for the trade; Joseph Bennett, Montreal, a fine lot of adiantums; F. G. Foster & Son, E. G. Brown, Webster Bros., C. N. Sones, each excellent displays of plants for retail trade; Walter Holt, a prize group of small palms and ferns that well deserved the award given; L. H. Foster, Dorchester, Mass., the new fern Nephrolepis Anna Foster; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., the prize-winning Nephrolepis Piersoni, which attracted much attention; Ontario Insane Asylum, an attractive group of plants; S. S. Bain, Montreal, interesting new plants; R. Jennings, Brampton, a fine cut flower display, including blooms of chrysanthemums, carnations, Morning Glory, Joost, Crocker, Van Orme, Eldorado, Flora Hill and Scott, which were remarkably fine for so early in the season (the plants were housed July 25th); D. J. Sinclair, Toronto, florists' supplies; W. Holmes, Hamilton, wire work; R. G. Olmstead, Hamilton, ornamental iron work and massive iron vases filled with plants; the King Construction Co., Toronto, a full sized section of their new greenhouse and model of automatic stoker; S. P. Foster & Co., Hamilton, flower pots; Clucas & Boddington Co., New York, J. A. Bruce & Co., and Robt. Evans Seed Co., Hamilton, bulbs.

Certificates of merit were awarded the F. R. Pierson Co. for Nephrolepis Piersoni, and to the King Construction Co. and the S. P. Foster & Co.

LATEST FACTS ABOUT ROSES.

BY EDWARD DALE, BRAMPTON, ONT.

[Read before the Canadian Horticultural Association at the Hamilton Convention.]

I have been asked to give you a paper on "The Latest Facts About Roses." This may be the proper heading to use, but I hardly think so, as there may be many with later facts to give than I have.

I suppose the proper point to start from would be the cutting, as our whole output depends on it for the coming season. We always try to take our cuttings from the healthiest plants. Some years ago we made all cuttings with two buds. Later one was all we used, but again made a change and went back to two and sometimes more, and feel safe in saying they never should be made with less. While a cutting with one bud may make a good, fair plant a cutting with two or more is sure to make a better one. When it is rooted you have a plant worth starting with.

We generally give all cuttings four weeks in the sand, using three and one-half or four inches. We run a temperature of 70 degrees bottom heat and the temperature of the house we keep the same as the house where the roses are growing, night 56 degrees, day 66 degrees. We pot them off into 2-inch pots, giving them about four weeks and sometimes longer in this size. For the first watering be sure and not overdo it; give just enough to moisten them nicely to the bottom, shading them for the first ten days when bright.

They will stand being put close together on the bench for the first two or three weeks; then move them over, being careful to sort them for size, giving the largest some space between the pots; the smaller ones you can again place close together; this will let the air and light through them and harden them off. I think the time it takes to do this is well spent, as I feel sure it does young stock a great deal of good to be moved over, besides you get the small plants out where they will not get smothered. From the 2-inch we shift into "threes," giving a little drainage, and from this size we like to plant on the bench, for shifting into larger sizes means more work, more space to grow them in, and not so easy to plant; but if you are not ready with your benches for planting when a shift is needed, be sure and get them into larger pots. Do not let them get a check, as a check now means a loss of cheques later on, when you are wanting a big cut and a good plump bank account.

We use about five inches of soil on our benches. Plant own-root stock twelve inches one way and fifteen inches the other. Grafted stock we plant 12x18 and leave a hole around the top of the plant about the size of the top of the pot it was taken from, and water only at the plant for about three or four weeks. By this time the plants will have doubled their size. We then level the soil and start to water the whole bench, but be sure not to over-water the first time, as it will sodden the soil and do a great deal of harm. Better to give too little than too much at this time.

Be sure you attend to weeding and tying as soon as it is needed. Disbudding should also be well attended to. Run over them once a week, taking off the first leaf with the bud, as you will get a stronger break than when only taking the bud.

At one time we thought planting done in July and August was early enough, but now we start in April. This gives us an early house to cut from. May and June are two good months to plant in. Stock planted at this time gets into good shape for the winter months, but of course we cannot get all planted by that time, as we have to carry some houses on till our early houses are in crop.

Do not cut from your young stock too soon. Keep them disbudded until they are good, strong plants and in good shape, and if some plants are smaller than others when you are leaving them to crop, go over the bench and disbud all weaker plants that you think are likely to suffer from the stronger plants overgrowing them and smothering them out. By doing this you will give them a chance to hold their place and be of some use.

Some years ago we mulched the houses we intended carrying over the longest but have not done so the last few years, using manure water in preference to the mulch, starting early in January with the first planted houses and using it once in two weeks from this time on.

Watering at all times should be carefully attended to. While being careful not to overwater, do not let the bench become too dry before attending to it. Roses planted in different soils require different treatment, so that a grower has to use his own judgment and find out a great deal from experience as to when is the proper time to do his watering.

Spraying should also be carefully attended to if you want to keep down the red spider. If your benches are low be sure and get down so as to catch the bottom of all the foliage and the upper surface will get all it requires. Spraying should always be done early enough in the day to allow all foliage to become dry before night.

We have just come through the worst summer I can remember for wet and cold, the thermometer registering below 50 degrees night after night and three nights in succession registering 44 degrees. This, with rain and cold winds nearly every day up to the middle of August, has taught us always to be in shape for firing, as I believe steam in the houses in such weather is necessary, not altogether for the heat, but it gives a good dry air and also gives a chance to fight the mildew which has been growing in all its glory this season. Painting the pipes with sulphur is the only remedy we have for this. I might say, when firing at this season do not run too warm; leave your ventilators open a few inches, just enough to give a good circulation of air, and if you should close down to sulphur or fumigate, when through do not put your ventilators up full height at once; only put them up a few inches at a time.

Grafting I had almost forgotten to mention. Our Manetti stocks we like to get in November, pot in 2½-inch pots close together on the bench, and run at a temperature of 40 degrees, spraying them once to four times a day, according to the weather, being careful not to get them too wet at the root, and when the buds begin to swell they are ready for use. Having your grafting frame in shape and piped so that you can always maintain a temperature of 80 degrees, cut back your Manetti as close to the pot as it is handy to work, giving a slanting cut of not less than three-quarters of an inch. Then cut your scion to suit.

If the scion should be smaller than the Manetti, place it to one side so as to have the bark of one fit closely with the other, tying it securely and placing it in the frame, keeping closed for about seven or eight days. Then give an inch or two of air for two or three days, and keep increasing it for the next twelve or fifteen days, when they will stand all the air you can give them.

In three weeks from the time they are put in the frame they are ready to leave. Be careful to shade from all sun while in the frame and about a week or ten days after taking them out. We find Perle, Sunset and Sunrise will not do grafted, but Bridesmaid, Bride, Morgan, Cusin and some others have done well with us on the Manetti.

As to varieties, we grow Bride and Bridesmaid, the leaders in their color. Liberty is by far the handsomest of all red roses, but we have yet to find how to keep it on the move all the year around, so have to fall back on our old friend, the Meteor. For Morgan we find an increased demand, but there is very little increase in the demand for Perle, Sunset and Cusin. Mme. Hoste and a few others that paid well to grow at one time we have had to drop.

Now that rust and spot are almost diseases of the past, anthracnose (stem-rot) is troubling growers to an alarming extent, and it is to so grow our plants that we will not be troubled with disease that I offer my help, trusting that others, by following in the path in which I have been successful as a grower, may be benefited.

The two most important things toward success are a proper cutting bench and a healthy stock to propagate from. When possible I would advise that the cutting bench be the north one in the house, preferably so because it can be kept cooler and more easily shaded than other benches. The bench must be enclosed and piped sufficiently to maintain a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees in the sand. The sand should be about four inches deep in the bed, thoroughly wet and firmly packed down; a brick is a good thing to use to do the job right.

For shades I would use cheesecloth tacked on strips of lath, which you can make the desired size to reach from the front of the bench up to and under the glass at the back of the bench. Such shades are light and easily and quickly put up and taken down as necessity requires. To keep the cuttings healthy and to give them more air than is afforded through the ventilators, I would advise taking out a pane of glass every fifteen or twenty feet over the cutting bench to give additional air when the temperature in the house is higher than 60 degrees. To close these openings go to the hardware store and have sheet iron cut to size that will easily slide up or down in a frame nailed to the bars.

I do not wish to be understood that by giving much air I advocate a current of air, for it would prove most disastrous. Plants as well as people need plenty of air to keep them in a healthy condition. To illustrate: A man requires 250 cubic feet of air every hour to furnish him with a healthy supply of oxygen. A plant requires a proportionate amount to supply it with its needed supply of carbonic gas. To shut off this needed supply of air means that a smaller percentage of cuttings will root, and those that do root will be debilitated and are the more susceptible to disease.

Now that the cutting bench is ready, the shades made, and extra ventilation in, we are ready to select cuttings. Before proceeding any farther it is well to bear in mind that between the early and late blooming kinds there is some four months' difference in time of flowering; therefore in order to have blooms from late blooming kinds for the holidays it will be necessary to commence taking cuttings the last week in October, and so on each month after, until you have a needed supply.

The early and constant bloomers may be taken in November, December, January and February with good results. During these four months cuttings root better, for the reason that the plants are vigorous for not having been forced. In selecting cuttings I would advise taking them from flowering stems. On these stems there may be from one to four cuttings. The upper one will be too weak—leave it—the lower one may be too hard, and if so, leave it. The middle ones, usually strong, are just right.

With the thumb and index finger take them out sidewise. I would never use the knife on a cutting for the reason that a cutting taken out sidewise has not been wounded and is the better fortified against the attack of disease by having left on it the tough leaves at its base, and further, I claim such a cutting has one or more well defined joints already formed and will be from three to four weeks in advance of a pulled cutting.

When you have a quantity of cuttings gathered and the sand in the bench well wet through, insert in rows two inches apart, one inch apart in the row and three-quarters of an inch deep. Firm the sand on either side of the cuttings, after which water again to settle the sand. Spray each day after they are set, keeping close watch that they are not too wet, also that they do not get too dry along the side of the bench.

There is this difference between watering and spraying. We water to wet the ground; we spray to close the stomata (or mouths) of the leaves. This stops exhalation and the water that the roots absorb remains in the plant or cutting and a perfect equilibrium is maintained, there being no difference between absorption and evaporation. Leaves of a plant do not absorb water.

If the above plan of operating the cutting bench is strictly adhered to, it is my firm belief that out of every 100 cuttings taken over ninety-five per cent will strike root. Should the sand in the cutting bench become green, there is danger of the cuttings damping off by what is known as the fungus of the cutting bench. To keep the sand in a pure state I would advise the use of ammoniacal solution. The formula: One pound sulphate of copper and three quarts strong ammonia; dissolve the sulphate of copper in hot water, then add the ammonia; use one pint in a barrel of water. You can make a smaller amount using the same proportion of ingredients. Put in bottles and cork tightly, as the ammonia will evaporate. Fill your watering pot with water and add enough of the solution to make the water quite blue. Sprinkle the sand before putting in the cuttings, and once each week after and you will have no trouble in your bench.

Once more, before leaving the propagating bench, I want to impress the importance of rooting the cuttings in as low a temperature as I have advised, for I believe that more injury is done carnation plants by rooting them in a high temperature than from any other cause. Joshua Ladley exhibited cuttings rooted at a little over 36 degrees before the Chester County Carnation Society. It is better that, after being rooted, they be carried at a low temperature, for there is quite a winter's growth in all perennial plants at any temperature above that which produces death. Therefore I believe that by rooting them cool and growing them on cool until planting in the field, we will be free of disease to a marked extent.

When the cuttings are rooted and ready to be transplanted, have your soil ready, using only old, well-rotted manure, and whether you use pots, flats or a bench to plant them in, do not plant deeper than they stood in the sand; when planting in the field do not plant deeper than they were in the house; and when you bench them in the house in August or September do not plant deeper than they were in the field, for the reason as given by another that the epidermis of the stem above and below the ground is as different as the epidermis of the cheek and the mucus membrane of the mouth.

As we are battling against stem-rot we must not deviate from this rule of planting, for should the plants be set deeper in the house than in the field, the soil be old, the manure spongy, a dark spell of weather ensue and too much water at the base of the plants, stem-rot will prevail to a greater or less extent.

When ready to plant in the field the ground should be so mellow that only the hands would be needed, but if too hard or lumpy use a garden trowel. By so doing, if the ground on top is dry, it is quickly brushed off and the hole for the plant made in fresh soil, with fresh soil to cover the roots, and if well done not a plant should die. On the other hand, if a foot dibber is used the hole is usually made too deep, and when the dibber is removed dry earth falls into the hole, there is nothing in sight to cover the roots of the plant but dry earth and many plants die.

As it is now out of season for pinching back, field work, I will pass over this period of the season's work to the lifting of them for planting in. I would advise that in lifting you get all the roots for the reason that if you get but a part of them, nature will just so surely sacrifice a proportionate part of the leaves to maintain a balance; hence so often so many dead leaves on the plants in a short time. Then comes extra work in picking them off, and again, if the leaves are not perfectly dead, in stripping them down and off fresh wounds are made on the stems and disease has another chance to get in its work.

Early planting, as early as July and August, is being advocated by our leading growers. Some say that the plants become the better established and others give no reason, only claiming it is better. I advocate early planting for the reason that in plants that have made a good growth by August the joints are firm, the stems upright, and leaves leathery, are in what is called a ripened condition, filled with a compound already crystallized necessary to modify their leaves into flowers (flowers are but modified leaves) and if not lifted early a period of wet weather might set in and hold long enough to release this compound and a weak, watery growth be the result instead of bloom.

WINTER-FLOWERING PLANTS.

BY C. A. SMITH, LACHINE, QUE.

[Read before the Canadian Horticultural Association at the Hamilton Convention.]

Being asked to contribute a short article on "Winter-Flowering Plants for the Private Greenhouse," it gives me much pleasure to send the following, hoping that it may prove of some benefit to the members.

Geraniums of the single variety make splendid plants for winter flowering. Cuttings should be taken about the first week in March, inserted in the propagating bed, and when well rooted potted into 2½-inch pots. Repot into 4-inch when these are well filled with roots. After the 4-inch is well filled with roots repot into 6 of 7-inch, according to size of plants wanted. After all danger from frost is over they should be placed outside in the full sun and kept well pinched back. Also keep all the blooms pinched off until about three weeks before they are wanted to flower. Then they should be given manure water once a week right through the winter.

Poinsettias, both double and single varieties, are fine winter plants. Cuttings rooted in May and carried to one stem, flowered in 6-inch pots, make splendid trusses. I have had some ten inches across the bloom. They are best kept on the dry side at all times, for if they once get sodden they will surely lose their bottom leaves. They should be kept in the greenhouse at all times. A few old plants planted out in the garden in June will give cuttings which can be rooted in sand in August, putting 4 or 5 plants in a 6-inch pot. They will flower when from 10 to 15 inches high. Given a little manure water they will last all through the winter. The soil used should be good coarse loam and well rotted cow manure, with a liberal supply of sand.

Euphorbia Jacquiniflora makes one of the best plants for winter, as they last in any ordinary greenhouse for 3 or 4 months. Cuttings should be struck in May, and when well rooted potted into 2½-inch pots, using loam and leafmould and a little peat and sand well mixed. Put 3 or 4 into the pots and shade for a few days; when well rooted repot into 5-inch pots, using the same soil as for first potting. Keep in greenhouse all summer, and when the pots are well filled with roots feed liberally with weak manure water. The result of this treatment will be sprays of bloom from 15 inches to 2 feet long.

Primulas and cinerarias make good winter plants. Seed should be sown in April or May, pricked out into 2½-inch pots and placed outside in frame. Keep slightly shaded and repot into next size when necessary, using good, coarse, and rather rich soil. When plants are well rooted in their flowering pots they may be left out in frames till there is danger of frost and fed once a week with manure water. A second sowing may be made in July, which will make good plants flowered in 5-inch pots. They will come into bloom during February and March.

Begonias of the different fibrous rooted varieties are very useful. They can be rooted in sand, and when well rooted, pot on into 3-inch pots, using loam, leafmould and cow manure. Repot when necessary till the flowering size is reached, when they should be fed liberally right through the winter. The Gloire de Lorraine makes splendid plants, either for pots or baskets; they should be kept in the house all summer and well shaded.

Cyclamen are fine plants for winter. Seed should be sown in January and placed in the warmest part of the greenhouse till the plants have made two leaves, then they should be pricked out in shallow boxes, using 3 parts of leafmould and 1 part loam and sand. Leave till April, then pot them, using 2 parts loam and 1 part cow manure, 1 part leafmould and plenty of sand. Keep the plants out in the frames as long as possible, shelter from heavy rains and midday sun and water liberally with manure water when the buds appear.

Salvia Scarlet Dragon makes fine little plants for winter if cuttings are rooted in August, potted in good rich soil and flowered in 5-inch or 6-inch pots.

Alyssum also flowers well if taken up from the beds and potted about the first week in September, cutting the plants back very hard.

Browallias and gesneras are very useful. The blue of the browallia is a color we are very short of in the winter, while the gesneras make perfect plants till about Christmas, when they should be gradually dried off.

Of course there are lots of other plants too numerous to mention, such as azaleas, cannas, Streptosolen Jamesonii, fuchsia, calla lilies and the different kinds of bulbs which make good plants for winter and are very easy of culture.

Part of the Trade Exhibit at the Hamilton Convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association.

REFLECTIONS ON THE HAMILTON, ONT., CONVENTION.

Florists are really very nice people all the world over. In the horticultural world there should be no dividing lines of nationality, creed or social standing.

It was the turning point in the history of the Canadian Association—A case of go ahead or "bust." Thanks to the good work of the Hamilton men, who worked like beavers, and the good work of Secretary pro tem Wm. Gammage and others, the attendance was beyond expectation and the trade exhibit an immense success. Another step upward on the ladder was won.

It was a business meeting and lots of business was done in an earnest, business-like way. There were social entertainments and plenty of social enjoyment, but they took second place. This is as it should be. We can have a picnic any time and anywhere.

It is greatly to the credit of the members that they were not to be tempted to stray from the path laid down by the founders of the Association by the vision of Goverment pap held up before them by Provincial government officials. The Association has larger and broader objects in view, and aims to embrace the whole Dominion, not a province only. It is the Canadian Horticultural Association and will stick to that.

Perhaps it is as well that nothing was done to settle the trade paper question. The demands for a paper will soon be so strong that individual enterprise will settle it before long. The trade in Canada cannot afford to advertise in all three American trade papers. If they only advertise in one it does not reach all their customers, most of whom only take one. The only remedy is a Canadian trade paper. If the trade will support the paper, the paper will be of incalculable benefit to the trade. This has been proved in the U. S. within the last 15 or 20 years, and as soon as this fact is impressed on the minds of the trade in Canada, we shall see a trade paper here.

Everyone should read the paper, "The Hardy Perennial Border," read by Mr. Alexander of Hamilton. As was remarked at the meeting, "Mr. Alexander is not only a gardener, he is a poet, and his paper is a poem."

All the officers were elected by acclamation, which speaks well for the good feeling of the members from the east, west, north and south towards each other.

Toronto was a good selection for the place of meeting next year. There will be cheap fares and lots to see and learn there. The Association will gain strength, and in a few years be in a position to attack some of the smaller growing towns.

It was a real treat to see so many of the eastern brethren at Hamilton. The west will no doubt reciprocate—say in 1904. E.

CARNATION NOTES.

Supports.

Your carnations will be needing some kind of support now right soon, and in fact some of the early bloomers, such as Dorothy, Flora Hill, Queen Louise, etc., are full of buds and you should not wait until they are sprawling all over the benches before you put on the supports. It will take them but a few days to grow a lot of crooked and worthless stems and the blooms are ruined by being splashed with dirty water in watering the beds. Such varieties as Lawson, White Cloud, etc., should be supported as soon as possible, to keep them growing upright. Be sure that you weed them thoroughly before you put on the supports, and it will pay you to do what mulching you can, too, because it takes much more time afterward.

What kind of supports you use you must decide for yourself. There are almost as many kinds of supports in use as there are growers and each claims superiority in some respect for his own, which is quite natural, just as much so as each hybridist thinks his seedling to be the best in its class. I have described our method several times before and no doubt most of you are familiar with it, but there are always those to whom it is new and so I will describe it briefly. We stretch one wire between each row of plants and one on each outside edge of the bench lengthwise of the bench about five inches above the soil. Nail light supports across about every twenty feet to keep them up off the ground and draw the wires as tight as possible to keep them from sagging. The cross supports should be of wood, as the wires which are first used would stretch and let the whole thing down in the center of the bench. Then we cut a lot of strings long enough to reach across the bench and one man begins tying a string to the edge wire and wrapping it once around each wire as he takes it across the bench. At half way another man takes it up and finishes it up by tying it to the other edge wire, and so on until the other end of the bench is reached. We put two strings between each row of plants so as to leave an opening about three inches wide to allow fresh air to reach the base of the plants.

This method is gaining in favor right along and we believe it will be used almost altogether when it becomes known to all the growers. The important point is to keep the plants off the ground and to keep the flower stems growing up straight and the more space you can allow each shoot for itself the better will the flowers be and the less likely you are to have stem-rot or rust in your carnation benches. Be sure that you use galvanized wire, it costs no more than the other and the difference in the durability is remarkable. The plain wire soon begins to rust and get rough, and when in that condition it is mean to work with, while the galvanized remains smooth a good many years and can be used year after year.

If there is any more shade on the glass it should be rubbed off clean at once. The plants want all the sunlight they can get from now on to keep the growth solid and the plants stocky. You can also let all the plants shoot up into bloom now, as by the time they will open up some blooms we will be having some frosts that will kill the supply of outside flowers and then your carnations will find ready sale at fair prices. Don't forget that it pays just as well to disbud now as it does in midwinter, as it will improve the blooms just as much in proportion, and they need all the improving they can get at this time, when they are not at their best any way.

CARNATION RECORDS.

I was pleased to see the record of carnations cut by P. F. S. in your issue of Sept. 4th, for as I have before said, I think that if we could hear from many more growers regarding this matter, we would naturally be incited to keep a more accurate account of the cut each season—total, monthly, weekly, daily, and of each variety—and I am certain that as a result we would discard every year many kinds that we now continue to grow at a loss if we only had the facts before us in black and white.

We commenced to cut Oct. 1 and threw the plants out July 21, except a few varieties that we had to throw out earlier to make room for other stock. The following record is for one house in which it was impossible to provide a special temperature for each variety, and the record should be interesting to the small grower who has to produce his flowers under such conditions. Here it is, the number of plants, variety, total cut for the season and average number of blooms cut from each plant. All were thrown out July 21 except where other dates are given.

Plants.	Kind.	Total.	Average.
466	Scott	10159	−22
150	Daybreak	2101	14	May 12
220	New York	2900	+13	May 12
143	Morning Glory	3559	−25
72	Marquis	1027	+14
74	Lawson	1118	+15	May 28
20	Saratoga	392	+19	J'ne 22
12	Crocker	119	−10
10	Hoosier Maid	175	+17	J'ne 9
40	G. Lord	614	+15
25	Joost	332	+13
23	Prosperity	257	+11
37	Gomez	633	+17
25	Maceo	592	−24
20	Roosevelt	171	− 9
680	Flora Hill	11137	+16
25	Glacier	512	+20
35	Queen Louise	491	14
25	Norway	347	−14
47	Bradt	562	−12
5	Gold Nugget	27	+ 5	May 1
75	Crane	1115	−15
2229		38340	−17

As you will see by the above several varieties came out early, which of course cut down the average cut of those kinds as well as the general average. I have marked the averages plus and minus. For example, Scott averaged a fraction less than 22 blooms per plant while New York averaged a small fraction over 13.

Of course the total average per plant does not tell the whole story, as many kinds are late bloomers and would hold their own in this record, though the cut at the holidays might be next to nothing, when they are worth the most. In December we cut only 19 blooms from the 23 plants of Prosperity, which was a poor showing for that variety, and it really did not begin to pay expenses. As a result we shall try it only one more season, giving it a little different treatment. Scott averaged +3 blooms per plant during December, Lawson about 1½, Hill over 1½, Queen Louise nearly 2, Crane 1, etc.

Many of the kinds would have made a much better showing, notably Lawson, if we had not propagated next season's stock from them, but kept them exclusively for blooming. In fact we propagated 5,728 plants from this house, all first class stuff, no soft, poor cuttings. Of these 760 were Lawson, 1,162 were Scott, and 1,121 were Hill. Taking it all in all each plant averaged 2½ cuttings and 17 blooms. We think this was quite good, but we hope by sifting out several kinds to exceed that record this season.

We had our plants all housed by the first of August and they are looking very well, having no rust or stem-rot except on two of the novelties purchased this season, and not at all bad on those.

I noticed the record of carnations cut in your last issue. I enclose a record of average number of blooms cut from each variety I grew last season. Nothing but good salable flowers were counted. Time was from Oct. 1st to May 30th, the plants being benched the first week in September. I hope to see reports from others.

WINTERING AQUATICS.

I have a water lily pond 80 by 50 feet, two feet deep in center and one foot deep at the margins. Concrete floor and a foot of good compost on the floor. A partition on rear margin for nelumbiums, the rest for nymphaeas. In the front of the pond there is a place 12x12 and 3 feet deep in which I intend to grow a Victoria Trickerii or Randii. The pond is not heated. Water is from the city water works. There is a 4-inch pipe outlet in the bottom and the overflow is six inches below the rim of pond. There is also an opening so I can have but six inches of water when starting the plants.

Would it be better to plant out the plants in the soil or to put them in tubs and sink them in? Which is the best way to winter them over in this northern climate? The water is liable to freeze to the bottom of the pond. Would it be safer to take the plants up after frost and store them under benches in the greenhouse or would it be better to draw all the water off in late fall and fill the whole pond with leaves two feet deep? Or would it do to let the water stay in and cover the pond with boards and the boards with two feet of leaves?

Can I raise and bloom Victoria Trickerii after June 1st, started in the greenhouse in February? C. G.

Wis.

Hardy water lilies may be wintered over in a pond if the pond is deep enough so that frost cannot injure them, but this depends on the severity of the winter.

In your case it would be best to draw the water off and gradually cover the plants with leaves according to the weather, being careful not to put too much on at once, as they would then be apt to heat and thus destroy the plants. This is the best way in a cement tank. The water lilies can also be dug out in the fall and heeled in in damp sand in a cool cellar where frost does not enter.

I would advise not to disturb the nelumbiums, as this injures their blooming qualities.

Plant out your lilies in the soil at the bottom.

The Victoria regia or Trickerii will not grow or blossom in water that is not heated to a temperature of 85 or 90 degrees. The seed should be sown in this temperature in January or February to obtain blooms in June.

MUSA ENSETE.

C. H. H. asks: "How shall I care for some large Musa ensete plants this fall? Would like to keep them as nearly dormant as possible. Will wintered-over plants make a good growth next summer? Where can I buy the seed? Have seen none advertised."

This most ornamental musa is among the finest plants we have for our subtropical gardening. As a center group in a large canna bed it is unequaled. We have also used it to great advantage in large pots on the lawn and surrounded with cannas (pots or vases that held a yard of soil) and if given rich earth and plenty of it, a single specimen on the lawn is most pleasing. But this is not answering the question.

When lifting after the first frost has injured the leaves (last year it was about the 20th of October when they were lifted) trim back the roots to a moderate sized ball. Trim back the leaves to within a foot of the stem or trunk. If you should happen to have a warm, light cellar or basement, say where the temperature never goes below 45 degrees, there would be a fine place for them. They could stand close together with loam or sand covering the roots, and would need moistening only at the roots a few times during winter, just enough to keep them from shriveling up. In your potting shed such a place can be found. If that is not convenient, lay the stems down beneath a bench, a bench where there is little drip preferred. Throw some material, loam is best, over the roots to keep them from drying out. Beneath a bench scarcely any water need be given them during winter.

About middle of April they should be started in large pots or tubs and very soon they will be growing. You don't want them to make much leaf growth under glass, for it would be torn by the winds outside, but the roots will be active, and when you plant them out about June 1st, they will quickly throw out fine leaves. The plants that have been kept dormant during winter make the finest decorative plants. Even if convenient to keep them in large tubs and growing all winter in a warm house, it would be by no means desirable, for all that old and young growth would be useless when planted out.

All the leading houses advertise the seeds and can supply them. Did it ever occur to you that the banana has neither wood, bark nor pith? Its bulky stem is nothing but layers of leaf stalks.

PRIMULA POISONING.

Replying to the inquiry as to remedy for poisoning by Primula obconica would say we have a milkweed here which resembles a thistle, the milk of which when smeared on the affected part is very effective as a remedy for poisoning by the primula or poison ivy. I do not know the botanical name of this weed but enclose a specimen. J. J. G.

Kansas.

We referred the specimen to Mr. John Higgins, Chicago, for identification and for further information regarding the primula poisoning, and he replies as follows:

"The plant enclosed in your note is Sonchus asper (Vill.), a species of sow thistle growing in waste places and around dwellings. Like the well known dandelion it is one of the milky juice compositae.

"As regards the poisonous effects of Primula obconica, they have been attributed to the irritation of pointed hairs but the great uncertainty of action, as in the case of Rhus Toxicodendron, gives a good excuse for classing it with the latter peculiar toxic agent. I have myself handled thousands of plants of Primula obconica in every stage of growth and without any precaution and yet have never experienced the slightest poisonous effect. On the other hand I know several persons who cannot touch a Primula obconica, however slightly, without feeling the effects for days. The personal equation of the patient seems to be an all important factor in determining the effect of both these plants.

"An alcohol solution of sugar of lead is recommended by the Department of Agriculture as an antidote for Rhus poisoning. It will probably cure primula poisoning as well. An application of the juice of Impatiens fulva is said to cure Rhus poisoning."

HEATING.

I have a small house 15x25 that I would like to use for propagating. It is too far away from my larger house to heat with the same boiler. How would a Hitching's base-burning water heater No. 22 answer the purpose? Or can you suggest a better and cheaper heating apparatus? The temperature required is 65 to 70 degrees in zero weather.

How many flows and returns of 1½-inch pipe will be required to heat this house to the desired temperature? I want a flow overhead. Would it be wiser to put the pipes along the side or under the benches? I am heating the house with a brick flue at present but it doesn't give an even heat through the house.

Is it better to change the water in the pipes every fall or to leave it in from one year to the other? C. W. E.

In reply to the inquiry of C. W. E., the little boiler referred to could be used to heat the propagating house, 15x25, provided there is no glass on the vertical side walls. The requirements of the house are somewhat in excess of the rated capacity of the boiler, but, with a little care in firing, the boiler could be used satisfactorily.

As the correspondent wishes over-head flows, I would suggest two 1½-inch flows from the boiler to the far end of the house, each connecting six 1½-inch return pipes running back to the boiler end below the side benches, making fourteen lines of pipe in all. The flow connections should be made to each side of the boiler, and returns in a similar manner.

It is better to leave water apparatus full of water at all times, but it is desirable, at least once in two years, to draw off the water rapidly, in order to wash out any sediment which may have settled at low points or points of friction within the apparatus, and then fill up with fresh water.

CARNATION ETHEL CROCKER.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a house of Ethel Crocker carnation grown by William Winter, Kirkwood, Mo. Mr. Winter is very successful with this variety and values it highly. The photograph, which was taken Aug. 21, shows what a large number of blooms is cut from this house each day. The entire output is handled by H. G. Berning, St. Louis.

The Market.

The cut flower market does not show any improvement over last week's report. Most of the growers are cutting from the young stock. Beauties are in increased supply; the best of these bring $2 per doz. Tea roses move slowly at $3 to $4. The better grade of carnations moves well, but the bulk of the field grown stock sells slowly. Semple's asters are fine and plentiful and bring from $1.50 per 100 down to 50 cents.

The plant business shows signs of awakening. Nearly all the stores are getting in a few palms, rubbers, etc. At the Century Flower Shop they have a nice display of plants and outdoor flowers grown on the home place at Newtown Square.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

The committee appointed by the chairman, W. K. Harris, at the last meeting of those interested in the flower market, met on Monday, September 1, and it was decided to recommend that a company be incorporated with a capital of $20,000, shares to be $20 each. It is thought that by increasing the capital, more support can be had from the supply men, seedsmen, and others who are interested. A committee was appointed to look up a suitable site and report to a general meeting to be held Thursday, September 11, when it is hoped that temperary directors can be elected. It is hoped that every grower, little as well as big, will interest himself in this matter and take stock and a stall to sell his flowers from.

Items.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was not very well attended. Mr. Heacock was the only one of those scheduled to give a talk who was present. Nomination of officers for the coming year was made.

A visit to Wm. Wunder's place at Pittsville, found him hard at work getting in shape for the coming winter. The carnations were not housed, but looked fine in the field. Estelle did well here last year and more will be planted this year. A full house of Lawson and several hundred of Floriana will make up the assortment. There was also a fine lot of crotons coming on for Christmas sales.

Edwards of Norwood is bringing in some of the finest dahlias that come to town; good colors and large flowers.

At the Cliffe Greenhouse, Germantown, the chrysanthemums look very promising. A novelty noticed here was a large batch of the old English w[illegible] flower. These were good sellers last winter and it is thought that there will be more demand this year.

George McLean, of Walker & McLean, Youngstown, O., is visiting old friends here. He looks well and says he feels it. George says they are building two more houses to meet the increased demand for stock. He thinks he would rather sell flowers in Youngstown than Philadelphia. Not so much competition.

The recent cool nights have started growers to thinking about coal. It looks now as though there would be a great deal of soft coal used the coming winter.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

One of the most interesting meetings of the club ever held took place at Civic Hall last Monday evening. Nearly 50 members were present. The "outing" committee made its final report through Mr. Bunyard, announcing a balance on the right side of the ledger, and thereby earning an honorable discharge. This happy result betokens another and a larger outing in 1903.

The transportation committee, whose services made the trip to Asheville so agreeable and "satisfying," were thanked and their bills honored by the club in full with no adverse criticism, and almost a "certificate of merit" added, as a token of appreciated effort.

The exhibition committee, through Mr. O'Mara, reported a joint meeting with the committee of the Sculpture Society, and much harmonious progress in plans and arrangements for the great fall exhibition in Madison Square. Novel and beautiful effects will be produced, elaborate details have been considered, and the mingling of flowers and statuary promises to provide a unique, chaste and massive combination "befitting the dignity of the city," and the reputation of the societies interested. The space for exhibits is rapidly being taken and advice is given to all intending to make display to secure the room desired before it is too late. The combination of the societies makes even the great garden small for the purpose intended. The co-operation and interest of many of the prominent citizens is being enlisted and the exhibition will undoubtedly be the grandest, and will draw the largest crowds, of any floral show ever given in this country.

The New York Florists' Club announced the appointment of Mr. O'Mara as its representative at the Plant Breeding Conference, September 30 and following days, in this city.

Handsome photographs of previous exhibitions by the Sculpture Society were shown to indicate the elaborate and beautiful effects possible even without the co-operation of plants and flowers; together, the garden will be transformed into a fairyland.

The absence of Mr. Hammond, of Fishkill, whose address on the convention at Asheville had been announced, was greatly regretted.

The other speaker of the evening was Mr. O'Mara, and his "Memories" were listened to with great interest by all, and especially by those who found it impossible to be there. He covered the ground, and the time—day and night—to and from Asheville, with all its business, its feasts, its drives, its "mountain dew," its interesting evolvement, interspersing his remarks with humorous anecdotes and incidents, for all of which he claimed the merit of absolute accuracy. He characterized the landscaping at Biltmore as a "demonstration of superabundant munificence;" told of the gratitude and appreciation of leading Asheville citizens as to the wonderful benefit the florists' convention had been to the city, placing it on a par with Biltmore, or next to it, in its effects for progress. The club by a rising vote manifested its thanks for the able address given.

Mr. Wallace, Mr. Kelsey, Mr. Henshaw and others followed and quite a discussion concerning landscape effects was indulged in.

Votes of thanks were also given to the Washington florists for their liberal welcome and the Southern R. R. for its courtesy.

The exhibits were numerous and handsome and a committee composed of Mr. Herrington, Mr. McMahon and Mr. Atkins passed upon them. The "Anna Foster" fern exhibited by L. H. Foster of Dorchester, and the cactus dahlias shown by W. Duckham of Madison, each received a certificate of merit.

Votes of thanks were given H. Beaulieu of Woodhaven, Peter Henderson & Co. of New York, A. L. Miller, of Brooklyn, and Charles Lenker of Freeport, for grand displays of cannas and dahlias. Mr. Miller staged 35 varieties of cannas, the best of which were his own seedling, La France and Fuerst von Hohenloe. Buttercup, President Meyer, G. A. Strohlein, Niagara, David Harum, Egandale, Martha Washington, Kate Grey, Comte de Bouchard, Beaute Poitevine, J. D. Eisele and Crimson Bedder. Peter Henderson & Co. sent Gov. Roosevelt and four new French varieties of dahlias, Souvenir de Francois Porcher, Oliphant, Directeur Potier, and Meritique.

Chas. Lenker of Freeport had several vases of grand dahlia stock, among them Germania Giant, Ernest Glasser, Sonne of Berlin, and Jumbo, a dark red of great size and dwarf habit.

H. Beaulieu made a fine showing with Chameleon, a novelty of three colors, and Gloire de Lyon, white; Mme. De Lavansayes; Jupiter, dwarf red; Malvina, pink; Herbert, amaranth; Muriel, light yellow; Daybreak, yellow, spotted red and brown; Souvenir de Constadt, chamois, dwarf; Mme. Lorton, white, edged red-salmon; Wm. Rawlings, crimson; Mary Service, pink; Captain Broad, red; Minos, dark maroon; Perle de la Tete d'Or, white; Grand Duke Alexis, white; Lovely Eynsford, amber color; Mme. Victor Vaissier, yellow.

Various Items.

The advent of cooler weather the last of the week had a bracing effect upon the cut flower trade, both wholesale and retail. The opening of the schools, which indicates the coming home of summer tourists in multitudes, cannot fail to have a beneficial influence upon trade, and Saturday found a depleted wholesale stock at better prices for good flowers, and handsomely decorated retail establishments all over the city, with the usual display of palms and ficus and Bostons in front of many of the stores, so that it may safely be said that the fall trade has opened "auspiciously."

The number of new stores is significant, not on Broadway nor Fifth avenue, but on the Boulevard and Amsterdam, and in Harlem and wherever fine apartment houses have been erected. It looks like a good season if one may judge by the preparations which anticipate it and the enterprise of those who are undertaking to "tempt fickle fortune." The new stores are almost invariably neat, handsomely fitted up, and well stocked.

Prices have not advanced perceptibly except for the better grade of roses, good stock bringing 6 cents on Saturday. Fine Beauties were worth 25 cents. Carnations have advanced to $1 per 100 with an upward tendency. Asters and dahlias and gladioli are running, or rather creeping, neck and neck, at about 50 cents per 100. Lilies of all kinds hold their own, the stock being excellent and abundant. The novelties are violets and mums, and their quality compares with their scarcity yet. Another week of cool weather will see the whole market on a firmer and advancing basis.

The "auctions" did not materialize last Friday. A little early, but they will soon be in full swing. The Dreyer auction at the greenhouses at Woodside will occur on the 22nd of the month, Mr. Cleary officiating. And about the last of September, Mr. Elliott will have something to say of the value of ferns and palms and rubbers at Mr. Scott's Keap Street Greenhouses.

W. G. Gormley has been away for "inspiration" at Bar Harbor. His store on Twenty-eighth street has been enlarged and decorated and his new gold galax leaf sign is an attractive frontispiece.

S. Jacobs & Sons of Flushing avenue, Brooklyn, have had a wonderful season. Their stock of greenhouse glass, gulf cypress and hot bed sash is immense, and for 31 years in and around New York this house has been in business. Their output of hot bed sash is an average of over 30,000 a year. In contemplation is the erection of a five-story brick building 100 feet square in which all their branches may be combined. Their "guaranteed putty" is used to the tune of 90 tons yearly in their own sash business, while their shipments amount to over 2,500 tubs per annum. Average sales of glass over 10,000 boxes. They are special agents for the Henderson boiler with its new coal saving improvement, and have two depots in New York City.

C. F. Anderson of the Isabella Greenhouses, Babylon, was in town Saturday arranging for the building of several new greenhouses. He grows only carnations, and has all the new varieties, and some fine seedlings that will be heard from later.

C. W. Ward of the Cottage Gardens, started for Michigan on his return from Asheville.

Julius Lang has returned from his summer recreation in excellent health.

John Scott and wife have been away for seven weeks in Scotland, Mr. Scott's birthplace, and have visited France, Holland and Belgium while away. His establishment has been under the management of Mr. D. M. Kenzie in his absence. Mr. Scott will reach home on the 14th. He has a new fern—a sport from the Boston, which he will exhibit at the Madison Square Garden show this fall; a most handsome plant, which he intends propagating and placing on the market in 1904. It is a more compact grower than the Boston, with narrower and more graceful fronds; and otherwise an exact counterpart of it. Mr. Scott has a sample plant of "Anna Foster" which he has been growing this summer to test its qualities under his system of care and its beauty is remarkable.

A. L. Miller of Brooklyn took first honors last week at the Ridgewood flower show for mixed cannas.

September 30 and October 1 and 2 occurs the Plant Breeding Conference under the direction of the New York Horticultural Society. Many renowned botanists and horticulturists from the old country and the United States will be represented, and the occasion promises to arouse widespread interest.

Mr. Bobbink of Rutherford returned last week from his European trip after a very enjoyable and profitable journey. Arrangements for heavier importations than ever before have been made by this enterprising firm of Bobbink & Atkins, and there seems to be no limit to their ambition.

Mr H. W. Gibbons reports a very large business in "amateur greenhouses" for private places of limited extent, at a cost of from $500 to $800. Many houses, 10x30, have been erected by him this season, and the demand seems to be increasing.

It is very unusual for anyone to have a "cool reception" at Will Siebrecht's in Astoria, but that is what I received one hot day last week. Snow several feet deep in September in the yard was an unlooked for exhibit, but there it was—lots of it. After awhile the cold storage plant erected awhile ago by this enterprising gentleman solved the mystery. It was "cleaning" day and the pipes and cellar with its several degrees of frost had been scraped for the winter. I was glad to get out into the sunshine after a visit to Greenland. But it is well worth everyone's investigation.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The general conditions have improved, demand becoming stronger and all good stock being cleaned up. There is no material change in prices, but the market tone is better. On roses the range for shipping grade is still $3 to $4, with extra select reaching $5. On carnations $1 to $1.50 is the price, and we hear of an occasional sale of some special stock at $2. On Beauties the price is "$1 per foot." Figure it out for yourself.

There have been some rapid changes in temperature that have resulted in shortening the supply in some directions, and a drop of 30 degrees in a few hours on Monday will no doubt be further heard from before the week is out. The supply of asters is shortening up, though there are still too many, at least of poor grade. The long, cold rain of Monday night naturally did not help the quality of carnations cut from plants in the field.

On the whole conditions are very satisfactory for the season, and never before were roses of such good color in early September. The cool summer probably accounts for it.

The Coming Exhibition.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, held last Monday afternoon, a new plan was adopted for the management of the annual exhibitions, and the following committees were appointed to put it into execution, under the general supervision of the executive committee:

Finance: W. H. Chadwick, E. G. Uihlein, J. C. Vaughan, E. A. Kanst, W. C. Egan, W. A. Peterson.

Press: P. J. Hauswirth, G. L. Grant, M. Barker.

Program: J. C. Vaughan, G. W. Wienhoeber, E. A. Kanst.

Advertising: E. A. Kanst, C. A. Samuelson, E. E. Pieser.

Music: W. H. Chadwick, E. G. Uihlein, W. A. Peterson.

It was decided to ask the Chicago Florists' Club to suggest committees on the acceptance of plant and cut flower exhibits, the province of these committees being to determine whether the entries meet the requirements of the schedule before being submitted to the judges.

It was arranged that at least two members of the executive committee be at the hall every hour the exhibition is open, to at once pass upon matters outside the province of the superintendent.

The exhibition will be held in the Art Institute, Nov. 11 to 15, and the Chrysanthemum Society of America will hold its exhibition in connection. The latter society has appropriated the sum of $150.00 to be expended in securing for the exhibition some of the finest specimen plants produced by eastern growers.

Various Items.

Mr. P. J. Hauswirth, accompanied by his wife and daughter, is in attendance at the Great Council of the Order of Redmen at Norfolk, Va.

John Poehlmann is not yet able to use his injured knee and it promises to be some weeks before he can again run bases in a hot ball game.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s we noted some Fitzwygram chrysanthemums on Tuesday.

The Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association held its annual meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The S. Wilks Mfg. Co., makers of the Wilks boiler, has secured a whole block of ground at Thirty-fifth street and Shields avenue and has let the contract for the erection of a modern factory building 175x150 feet, to which wings will be added later. This will give the company greatly increased manufacturing facilities. The old establishment on South Clinton street will be maintained as before.

Matt Mann and Jas. Paulsen are sending in some extra fine carnations to Budlong.

The latest report regarding the condition of Edgar Sanders is that he is still improving and is quite cheery this week.

Benthey & Co. are making extensive changes in their place, adding materially to their ice box and counter space. A special compartment will be provided for Geo. Piepgras' voice.

Harry Lubliner has opened the "Consumers' Flower Store" at 44 Randolph street, and says he will offer "red violets" in variety.

A. H. Crane, Nashua, Fla., was a visitor this week. He grows oranges and bulbs.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., "passed up" his vacation this year, and has put in the summer directing the many changes and improvements in the store. He looks for a record-breaking business this coming season.

H. S. Harman, of E. H. Hunt's, is on the sick list, and is seeking recovery of his health at his old home in South Bend, Ind.

Lloyd Vaughan, representing E. H. Hunt, started Monday on his annual fall trip and will not return until the holidays.

Archie Spencer says Peter Reinberg has sold an enormous number of field-grown carnations this year and that stocks are nearing exhaustion.

Wietor Bros. have also sold many plants, but still have a good assortment.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business of late has shown some slight improvement. The bright days and cool nights have also improved stock greatly. There is a great abundance of fine asters in the market just now, which are selling fairly well. Several of the new shades of Semple's sold quickly. More have been coming in than there is demand for. The prices received for them lately would hardly pay for the picking.

In roses there are some fine blooms in the market just now. A few days the past week Brides became somewhat scarce, as the demand was quite brisk owing to a great deal of funeral work. From $3 to $4 per 100 buys the best in the market of Brides, Maids, Meteors, Kaiserins and Perles. In Beauties the market is still shy of first-class blooms. The best demand $2 per dozen. The wholesalers have promised us this season to have a good supply on hand at all times. It's a little early yet and we will wait and see.

Most of the growers around here have all their carnation plants housed, which they report in good shape. The growers have almost doubled the number of plants they had last year, and if all turns out well this market will be well supplied with plenty of first-class blooms this fall. At present only a few good blooms are in, and their short stems make them worth only $1 per 100.

Tuberose stalks and gladioli are not so plentiful as they were. Our home growers report that their chrysanthemum plants are in fine shape, pot plants as well as those on the bench. Another month will see them in the market in full bloom. With them the usual glut of roses and carnations starts in.

St. Louis Fair.

Catalogues of the forty-second annual St. Louis Fair, which opens Monday, October 6th, and continues for a week, have been circulated. Mr. John D. Ayers will again have charge of the horticultural and floricultural departments, in which over $500 will be offered in premiums. Mr. Ayers reports that he expects a large number of entries, especially as there will be no show given by the local club this fall.

Notes.

Shaw's garden was open on last Sunday for the second time this year, as provided for in the will of the late Henry Shaw. The crowd numbered 22,475, and is reported as being one of the largest in the history of the Sunday openings. The weather was all that could be asked for. The orchid house was the special attraction. This house is in charge of young Mr. McClure, late of Buffalo. This collection of orchids is considered the finest in the world, which speaks in the highest terms of Mr. McClure's ability as an orchid grower.

Mr. Trillow, of Chicago, was a visitor this week, calling on his many friends in the trade.

Arthur Y. Ellison is home, after spending several weeks up North, looking as fine as silk and ready for the fall trade. Arthur reports that he will bowl with the Bankers this season and not with Diels, as reported in the last issue of the Review.

C. C. Sanders reports that he has nearly finished his work on the two new houses. These new houses will furnish him with plenty of cut flowers for his trade.

Theo. Miller is also progressing nicely with his improvements. Mr. Miller should do well this fall, as his stand is one of the best, and with his new show house will make the place very attractive.

Ed. Beuchel, of the Riessen Floral Co., has returned from Elkhart, Ind., after a very enjoyable time with friends of the Liedereranz and other German society folks.

Base Ball.

The Berning and Tesson ball teams played their second game of a series of three games last Sunday afternoon on the Tesson grounds. The Berning team forfeited the game 9 to 0. After leading by a score of 7 to 3 in the fifth inning, the Berning battery quit playing, claiming the umpire favored the Tessons. Each having won a game, the third will be played in two weeks for the championship, and a hot time is expected.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society held Aug. 28th, Mr. N. H. Dumond and Mr. Stranall were elected to honorary membership. Mr. Homer Hitchcock was proposed for active membership. Mrs. H. W. Webb and Mr. H. C. Graef were elected to honorary membership. Mr. Francis Gibson exhibited a vase of gladioli and some very fine asters.

A very interesting and instructive essay on bulb forcing was read by Mr. Joseph Bradley, of Hastings, and it was ably discussed by Messrs. Pierson, Moody, Bradley, Cockburn, McFarlane and Gibson. Mr. Bradley was tendered a vote of thanks for his very able paper.

H. J. Rayner, Cor. Sec'y.

BRIDGPORT, CONN.

John Osborne, now a well known florist of New York City, and who left here in 1869 with a theatrical troupe, has been spending a few days in town, renewing old acquaintances. After leaving here, until a few years ago, when he retired to go into business in New York, he enjoyed a deserved success on the stage. Mr. Osborne has visited this city but once since he left and that was twenty years ago, when he came through here with a theatrical company. He now has a finely established florist business in New York.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business, at last, is beginning to pick up, and everyone is happy, as the past week showed a very healthy increase in business in all lines. While shipping trade is as yet very small, outside buyers are beginning to be heard from, but, as a rule, they want only the best grade of stock, and there is not a very large supply of that coming in. With the steadily increasing supply of good stock shipping trade will also increase.

The city florists all report good business, and many of them had as much as they could do. Some large fall openings used up an enormous amount of second-grade stock, and carnations, especially, were sold out slick and clean. The various orders were well divided among many of the craft, so all had a share in the profits.

The rose supply is improving gradually. The cool weather is making itself felt, and with continued favorable weather it will not be very long before blooms of the first-class can be obtained at all times. The majority of the stock coming in is still somewhat short-stemmed, but the blooms are very fair, nevertheless. Brides are still very scarce; a few Kaiserins help matters a little. Maids are in better supply. Some very good Meteors are to be had. Liberty is still soft and single, opens up fast and is slow sale; color is fine, but this rose evidently needs cooler weather to grow good. Some very good Golden Gates are in, and they help out the shortage in Brides. Beauty is the rose of the day. Everybody wants it, and consequently many more could be sold were they obtainable. Some very good ones are coming in, but not nearly enough to fill all orders.

Brides, Bridesmaids, Meteors, Golden Gates, La France and Liberty, for best stock, 3 to 4 cents; others, 1 to 2 cents. Fairly good stock at $15 per 1,000; Beauty, best stock, $2 to $3 per doz; medium grade, $1 to $2; short, 50 to 75 cents.

Good carnations, the first crop from indoors, are coming in now, and thus the condition of the carnation market is greatly improved. The red ones are still backward and of poor quality. It will be some time before they are up to standard. Mrs. E. T. Grave is now sending in her prize-winning seedling, Pres. McKinley, and it far outclasses anything in the market.

The price on best carnations has advanced to $2 per 100. Medium grades, $1 to $1.50. Ordinary and field-grown, 50 to 75 cents.

Asters are still with us, and some fine ones continue to come in from the North. They bring $1.50 to $2 per 100. Others are to be had at from 50 cents to $1 per 100. All grades sell out clean and more of the better grades could easily be disposed of. Tuberoses and gladioli are still in fair supply, and sell well at 2 to 3 cents per spike. Smilax is somewhat scarce at 12½ to 15 cents per string. There is plenty of asparagus, Sprengeri and plumosus. Fancy ferns have advanced to $1.50 per 1,000. Green galax are to be had at $1 per 1,000.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

The next meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at the residence of Mr. Wm. Murphy, Price Hill, Friday, Sept. 19th, and Mr. Murphy requests all to be at the end of the Elberon avenue car line sharply at 2 p. m., where he will be to meet all comers. Everyone, whether members of the society or not, is invited to be present, and a special invitation is extended to the ladies.

Notes.

There is a new member in Mr. Otto Walker's family. It's a boy, and congratulations are in order.

Mrs. Coates, of the firm of Coates & Garges, is slowly recovering from a long siege of typhoid fever.

Mr. F. Ball and W. Mann are also on the sick list. C. J. OHMER.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Prof. Wm. Stuart, for some years past connected with the experiment station here, has accepted the position of horticulturist at the experiment station and college at Burlington, Vt., succeeding Prof. Waugh, and left for his new home on Sept. 4th.

DETROIT.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club "there were doings," as the boy says, for, after the retiring president had seated the president-elect, the business of the club proceeded in a most orderly manner until that arch-conspirator, Mr. Sullivan, arose and began to tell untruths about your humble scribe; and, finally wound up by presenting to him, in the name of the club, an elegant Morris rocker, upholstered in leather, thus placing said scribe in the position of having plenty to say but being unable to say anything. It seems to me that the club has made a great mistake in thus trying to kill off a member who was, at least, willing to work even if his work was not of the best. The boys will not expect him to leave the solid comfort of that chair and go down and sit in one of their common, hard ones for two or three hours, but they have not got rid of the old man yet, for they will find he is like the poor, "always with them."

All who attended the convention at Asheville returned highly pleased with the trip, and the accounts given caused a great deal of regret to those unable to attend, among which the writer is one. But Milwaukee will see us fifty strong, and twenty-five of us star bowlers in '93. Detroit still lives, although she may be dormant at times. Rag.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

Hot weather—dear coal—mildew. None of these things moves the Flatbush bowler to swerve from his allegiance to the "sport of kings." Any Thursday evening any visiting florist from anywhere can count on a warm welcome at the alleys of the Flatbush Bowling Club, and a pleasant game, devoid of every objectionable feature. Those "pots," too, even though expensive, add zest and interest to every game, though it's a 100 to 1 foregone conclusion that Will Siebrecht or Pat Riley will "bag the coin." That's what they did Thursday last, as the appended score will show.

Friends of Papa Zeller will be glad to know he is in much better health this fall, and Louis Schmutz has fully recovered from the breaking of his legs and is as good as new.

Flatbush will have a team next year at Milwaukee. C. C. P. can book them right now if he wants to.

Business.

There is yet very little being done, but things are surely gaining and as all kinds of material are getting really quite scarce, the waste barrels have occasion to go on a vacation now if they wish. And, too, the demand and supply are so nearly balanced that prices remain low as usual.

Friday night frosts were reported around us in all directions, but no real damage was done thereby.

Much comment is caused by the rumor that about twenty-five growers, mostly composed of parties unable to obtain stalls at Park street last year, have started a new market on Province court under the leadership of Mr. Le Carpentier. Now, if I were to ask a question of the directors of the old market, it would be as to whether they really tried hard enough to obtain larger quarters this summer or not. Of course the large premiums on their limited number of stalls would naturally keep them in the old place as long as expedient, but there is no question that the removal of no more than twenty-five bidders will affect premiums on next Saturday's sale very much, especially if more stalls are offered in the new market at only a small rental.

The numbers of the two old phones at the Park street market have been changed to 797 and 798. Persons calling us up should use the latter number, which fact you should scratch upon your patent leathers so as not to forget it.

Boston Florists' Annual Picnic.

The first number of this institution was pulled off by about sixty participants in Sawin's grove, Dover, Saturday last, and was O. K. all around. Although it rained a bit no one got wet on the outside at all! Street cars were chartered at Natick for the occasion and a clam bake served by Clammaster Charlie Oliver of Natick. Talk about Rhode Island clam bakes! That state would not suffice to hold one of Charlie's!

The ball game was Boston Wholesalers vs. Retailers, the latter being victors 15 to 10, and the feature of the game was Jas. Casey's slide to home plate. Perry Green served as umpire. Weight 230. No opposition to his rulings.

The one hundred yard handicap was run in five heats. Will Montgomery won the first, James Denning the second, Geo. McAlpin the third, Bill Woods the fourth and Tim Waters the fifth. Montgomery won first money in the final, Woods the second and Jas. Rough the third, running in place of Waters.

Pat Donohue was official handicapper, John Harding clerk of course, and Dell Cartwright referee. In the match race between Flanagan and Keefe the former won. Time is given at 9½ seconds.

Perry Green won by default in the 100 yard dash advertised between himself and Wm. Anderson.

Some close work was done in rifle shooting. Perry Green ranks 23 out of possible 25 and Additon, of Summer street, counted 20. No burglars need apply! J. S. Manter.

Lilium Harrisii.

We have a splendid lot of late-dug bulbs that have just arrived. On account of late digging bulbs are splendidly ripened and are unusually fine. The season has been very favorable, and it is a long time since we have been able to offer such fine stock. Bulbs are plump and hard, and that bright golden yellow color which denotes a well-ripened and healthy bulb. Bulbs run unusually large and are in the very best possible condition. We offer them as long as unsold as follows:

6- 7-in. bulbs, $17.50 per case of 350 bulbs; in less quantities,							$ 6.00	per 100.
7- 9-in. bulbs,	20.00	"	"	200	"	"	"	11.00	"
9-11-in. bulbs,	20.00	"	"	100	"	"	"	22.00	"

We also have a fine lot of BERMUDA-GROWN LONGIFLORUM late-dug bulbs, shipped by last Bermuda steamer, which arrived this week. This is an extra fine lot of selected bulbs. 7-9-in. bulbs, $20.00 per case of 200 bulbs; in less quantities, $11.00 per 100.

CALLAS. We have a grand stock of these splendidly ripened bulbs ready for immediate shipment.

Extra quality bulbs,	1¼	to	1½-in. diameter,	$ 5.00	per 100;	$40.00 per 1000.

Zirngiebel's GIANT pansy plants. $5.00 per 1000, and $10.00 for FANCIES. They are equal to any we ever sent out.
Denys Zirngiebel, Needham, Mass.

500,000 PANSIES, finest market strain grown. Awarded first-class certificate of merit by the Mass. Horticultural Society.
ATTENTION is called to these facts:
This strain is the result of over twenty years' careful selection.
The seed was saved this year from over 12,000 plants, the finest among the 500,000 flowered and sold last spring.
Particular attention is always paid to form and substance as well as size and color. The colors will be found very evenly proportioned, including rich selfs, brilliant variegations and many novel shades—no dull, mixed sorts.
Our pansies have for many years held the highest reputation in the Boston and Eastern New England markets and we confidently believe will be found the most satisfactory strain ever offered for florists' use.
Two of our customers write us as follows:
Boston, Mass.
Mr. I. E. Coburn, Dear Sir:—The pansies you have supplied us with have been the means of largely increasing the demand for these plants. The colors, size and form have been the admiration of all our patrons who have had them.
Yours truly, SCHLEGEL & FOTTLER CO.,
Seedsmen, 26 South Market Street.
Boston, Mass.
Mr. I. E. Coburn:—We have handled several thousand baskets of your pansies for the past four years and find them superior in size, color and variety to any grown in this section.

PITTSBURG.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held at its hall, Tuesday evening, 2nd inst. Nine new members were elected and three names proposed for membership.

Mr. E. C. Reineman gave a very interesting account of his visit to the S. A. F. convention at Asheville. He and Treasurer Beatty were the only members there from Pittsburg. He went by way of Cincinnati, where he fell in with the florists from Detroit, Chicago and other western points, and the Cincinnati boys treated them joyously and bountifully. But he was bitter about the hotel accommodations at Asheville. He and many others had to seek accommodations with private families. He thought it unfortunate that the meeting and exhibition rooms should be in the same building. But the meetings were well attended. The exhibits were excellent; better than he expected to find. He gave the Pierson nephrolepis fern most unstinted praise. The scenery was grand; the heat was severe.

While the Vanderbilt place was the great sight of the town, the greenhouses were not open to his party, and visiting the grounds was restricted to certain miles. The sympathy of the whole convention went out to John Burton, the absent president, and his reelection was from the heart and unanimous. Milwaukee gets the convention next year.

In a little after discussion the members thought Cincinnati would follow Milwaukee, then would come Baltimore or Washington, and after that, what think you of the Smoky City?

Julius Ludwig did a fine business last winter and made lots of money, so, taking his wife along, he had an extended vacation this summer, and he told us much about it. He told us about the parks, gardens and cemeteries of Buffalo. He spent a week in Rochester. He was astonished at the shrubbery gardens in Highland Park, the natural beauties of Genesee Park, the herbaceous collection, notably of phloxes, at Ellwanger & Barry's, the hardy flowers at Keller's, and the vivid fields of Vick & Hill Co.

Then he visited the Albany parks and enjoyed the beauties of the Hudson River between Albany and New York. He was delighted with the Bronx Parks and told us about lion houses that cost $140 000, outdoor bird cages built over the heads of tall trees, and enclosing little lakes and so on. But the mosquitoes there were terrific and raised bumps on his face as big as a half dollar. They drove him out of the parks and he got a carriage and fled to the Botanical Garden. Here are the most spacious conservatories in America, quite new, and filled with a vast assortment of exotic plants, but Julius wouldn't stop to look at them, the mosquitoes had most devoured him, the weather was hot, and at the sight of a greenhouse his pores wide open flew.

Next day found him in Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Here were the loveliest pieces of landscape architecture he had ever beheld, with its magnificent lawns, noble trees, massed shrubberies, water gardens and flower gardens, and teeming with women and children, boys and men at play. Then it was time for a bath and his next stopping place was Coney Island. At this world-famous resort a twelve-acre marine park, known as the Six-weeks' Wonder, because it was made up and planted in that short time, had been constructed this year, and it is now aglow with cannas, geraniums and other bedding plants, and a host of giant cacti from Arizona. The president cruelly tried to draw from Julius some account of this brilliant garden, but the man from Allegheny had never seen it. Instead he told us of other queer attractions and emphasized them with a handful of little programs from his pockets for our edification should we go there. But he did see some beautiful gardening at Manhattan Beach.

Mr. Fraser, Mr. Frick's gardener, brought in blossoms of a lot of new bedding geraniums, and from Schenley Park came some hardy flowers. Among the latter a bunch of Heckrottii honeysuckle was particularly admired by the members.

THE BOSTON FLOWER MARKET.

I had two hours in Boston one morning last week and by doing some lively hopping around I managed to spend thirty minutes of that time in the flower market. I reached the place a little before 7 a. m. and found most of the stock ready for inspection; a few of the late growers were just coming in with their boxes, and a few of the early buyers were leaving with their flowers. The scene was very animated but the growers assured me business was rotten. This seemed a good time to find out whether they were satisfied with their market or wanted to return to the old days of peddling. They all emphatically declared that even when business was dull the market was the only place to sell stuff. I was told that while some peddling was still done every firm in Boston dealt with the market and that its business extended from Portland, Maine, on the north, to the Connecticut towns on the south. Shipping business does not appear to have been developed to any extent yet.

There are 134 stalls, all rented, with some 40 or more growers on the street who would come in if there was room for them. The Waban Conservatories, that for some time held aloof, have been represented in this market for the past three years. Quite a number of boxes are not opened in the market at all, the stock contained in these boxes being sold on regular orders and taken by the buyers when they get their other stuff. The stalls that command high premiums are those near the front; they being more easily reached and seen when the place is crowded.

The manager said that the stock left in his charge was now sold on a 10 per cent. basis, and that he personally was responsible to the company for the collection of all bills for stuff sold by him. He added that he had not yet lost a dollar during several years' business. The grower who leaves his flowers, names his price; the stock is sold by numbers (names are not used), and paid for monthly.

The president was busy selling his stuff, but he made time to give me some valuable information. He believed it very important to have everything in the market, even to ferns and wire work, that a buyer might get all he wanted quickly. He thought more attention should be paid to shipping. He believed voting should be done by individuals, not by shares, and that commission men should not be invited to join the market as their interests were not the same as those of the growers. The prices appear to be more even since the market started than during the days when peddling flourished.

I left feeling that a good market is a necessity to both seller and buyer that we in Philadelphia should have now.

Eucharis Grandiflora

It is a mistake to associate this flower with Eucharis Amazonica. The free-blooming qualities of the grandiflora are so much superior that the other cannot be brought in comparison at all except through its similar beautiful flowers. Eucharis Grandiflora will give five crops of bloom, properly handled, to one of Amazonica. It is one of the most profitable and successful flowers for florists to grow who wish something fine for funeral and wedding work.

A stock of bulbs once secured and let alone will produce from time to time through the season a beautiful show of flowers that can be compared to no other white flower for beauty and fragrance. It is both delicate in texture and fragrance, and its lasting qualities are superior to most of the white flowers of this class. It only needs a warm, shady corner of the house and very little care and the blooms will come in at seasons when white flowers are very scarce.

We still have a supply left and prices are offered the same as in former advertisement. $2.50 for large clumps of 15 to 20 bulbs, which are in bloom at the present time, and $10.00 per 100 for single flowering bulbs. The clumps will bloom again for the holidays with proper handling.

Sample flowers, with full instructions for growing, will accompany all purchases.

MILWAUKEE.

Trade the past week has been somewhat above the average for this season of the year. Good roses and carnations were cleaned up daily, and as the bulk of the asters has been marketed, most of them which are now coming in are kept moving at fair prices. Carnations are extremely scarce, especially whites. The average returns on outdoor stock has been below former years, which is mainly due to the favorable season for growing. Asters, in particular, throve like weeds and at various times had to go at pretty low figures to save them from the dump. The past two or three weeks have been exceedingly dry and growers are anxious for rain, as many have not yet housed their carnations and the soil is too dry to take them up.

The crack bowlers among the florists have entered a team in the city league and will be known as the Imperials. The boys will keep in shape until next convention time and expect to be inside of the prize limit when the smoke clears away.

The State Fair, Jahrmarkt and opening of the exposition are attractions for this week, and the low railroad fares will induce many of the trade in the state to visit Milwaukee this week.

Visitors the past week: B. Eschner and M. Reukauf, Philadelphia; Edward C. Buechel, of Riessen Floral Co., St. Louis; H. L. Clapp, Ripon, Wis.; Mrs. A. Guillaume and daughter, La Crosse, Wis.

Later arrivals: Edw. Amerpohl and wife, Janesville, Wis.; Carl Meier, Green Bay, Wis.; N. Grievelding, Merrill, Wis.; Peter Phillip, Rhinelander, Wis.; Miles Meidam and Dennis Meidam, Appleton, Wis.; A. Senff, Menominee, Mich.; Geo. Vatter, Marinette, Wis.; H. L. Clapp, Ripon, Wis. Incog.

A copy of the new trade catalogue of H. H. Berger & Co., New York, has reached us. It is very neatly printed and illustrated and contains a very complete list of bulbs, seeds and plants for florists. The list of Japanese bulbs and plants is especially interesting. This firm has for many years made a specialty of these, being the pioneer importers of same.

St. Cloud, Minn.—The Kindler Floral Co. reports a fine trade since it started in the business here, and considers the prospects for a good season very encouraging.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

The Winnebago County Fair held its annual exhibition here Sept. 2nd to 6th. The floricultural department was for many an important feature. The cut flowers would have done great credit to a more pretentious organization. I have seen in the whole of my experience one exhibit containing no less than sixty-eight distinct varieties of petunias. Among the single kinds were varieties closely resembling dipladenias in size and coloring; others like giant pink fringed Chinese primroses, the flowers with green margins, some fringed and others smooth, with blotches of deepest rose, crimson and purple were equally conspicuous. An immense smooth, round flower five inches in diameter, of the deepest cobalt blue (not purple) reminded one of a giant morning glory. These are only a few of the distinct single kinds. The double kinds presented everything that seems possible. There were hollyhock shapes, pæony shapes and every known variety of fringing. The green ground blotched, both plain and fringed, made one think that some of the petunia family are caricaturists. A variety covered with hairs like Boehmer chrysanthemum, pink and white, probably is the latest departure.

The display of nasturtiums came next. Some of the varieties were brilliant and beautiful. The later introductions must very soon become as much appreciated as the later introductions of sweet peas have been.

Then came the Dianthus, and perhaps no better or larger variety has been exhibited, the intense claret and ruby red colors being most remarkable. Of phloxes, perennial and Drummondii, were also good, as were sweet peas, verbenas and pansies.

There were some good exhibits of vegetables, conspicuous among which was Buckbee's beefsteak. Mr. Buckbee is an active member of the Association. His many friends will be pleased to learn that he is surely recovering from the accident he met with last winter. A visit to the greenhouse department found genial Charley Johnson as modest and unassuming as ever. There are five or six houses of chrysanthemums that are in the finest possible condition. There'll be something doing from Rockford in November. Carnations are in equally good condition. The planting from out of doors began July 17th and most of the plants were housed before the first of August. There is no stem-rot, rust or spider. A 200 foot house of American Beauties and one of the same size of Bridesmaids are far above the average.

Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the bill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory, and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.
Yours very truly,
A. L. Thorne.

Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Look Out for Frost.

The last ten days of September is a very busy time with the man who grows a mixed collection and is bothered with bedding plants. Frost has appeared in western New York, not a killing one yet, but in the center of the state it has been killing, and doubtless there are many other localities where Mr. Jack has made his appearance, and though by no means a weather prophet, everything points to early frosts. Now you can't do everything the day you see the night is going to be cold.

Stevia.

Don't delay in getting your stevia lifted. There is only one of these cheap plants that is generally grown nowadays which we know as sweet stevia. Serratifolia is, I believe, the correct name. It is a most useful plant at Christmas, and we should miss it very much. I like them best in pots. Some plant them on the benches in five or six inches of soil, where they flower freely, but the pots are more easily managed, as you can cut all there is on a plant and out with it. Lift them, but leave them out of doors as long as you possibly can. They need the coolest house you have, anything above freezing, and if given the heat of a glass house now will be too early.

Azaleas.

The azalea is now our most important Easter plant, going ahead of even the lily in value of plants sold on that important date. If you have summered over any plants and taken good care of them they will make your best Easter plants. You would think that these plants would be good stuff for forcing at Christmas, but that is not so, and they should not be grown for flowering at the holidays. There is no object in leaving them out of doors any longer. Get them into a cool, well ventilated house, and every bright day give them a syringing for red spider and thrips. Both will attack them in a dry, hot house.

It is some weeks yet before the azaleas will arrive from Europe. It is remarkable how well they endure the journey and the splendid flowering plants they make. If you left all the soil and roots on that is sent with them they would be too large to look well. It does not hurt them in the least to chop off with a sharp hatchet or big knife an inch or two of the soil and roots. A very important point to observe is to dip the ball of roots in a tub of water for a minute or so before potting. If the ball of earth and roots were quite moist this would perhaps not be so necessary, but they seldom are and sometimes are quite dry, and if potted in that state you could scarcely with a dozen waterings get the roots thoroughly wet. After potting them, and that should be done firmly, they should be put either in a deep cold frame and shaded for a week or two, or in a shaded cool house. Excepting those that we want for early forcing, these imported plants should be kept so cool that they do not need a light house because little or no growth is going on.

Bulbs.

It has been quite dry in this neighborhood for the past three or four weeks, and the Roman hyacinths and paper-white narcissus that are boxed and covered with a few inches of soil will not be making roots unless they are given a good watering at least once a week. Soak the whole bed.

Tulips and narcissus are arriving, and although there is lots of time for those that you want to flower in March and later there should be some put into flats at once for forcing in January and February. There are two or three points to observe. Don't have your flats of different sizes and depths. A convenient, handy size should be made, 24x12 inches is the best we have found, and three inches deep is enough. A rich, new soil is not necessary. An old carnation bed would be just the soil, and you can put the bulbs almost touching, letting the top of the bulb be just even with the top of box and soil. We have tried different places for these tulips and Von Sion, but never found a cellar or root house or beneath a bench equal to standing the flats on some boards on the open ground and covering with three inches of soil. Before covering give them a soaking, and if October is dry give the beds a weekly soaking. Remember there is no moisture going up to these bulbs; the bottom of the box prevents that.

There may be a few of my readers investing in a few thousand tulips for the first time, and for their benefit I would say that the desirable forcing kinds are few. For yellow, Orange Prince and Chrysolora; for white, La Reine and White Pottebakker; for scarlet or red, Waterloo and Vermilion Brilliant; for pink, Cottage Maid and Rose Grisdelin. La Reine under some conditions comes also a beautiful pink. Proserpine is classed as a rose-pink. It is a shade hard to describe. It's a glorious flower and one of the earliest to force. The Due Von Thols will force ten days earlier than any of the above, but I don't consider them worth the trouble. We do not want these tulips at Christmas; there are other flowers, and if we get tulips and daffodils by middle to end of January it is early enough.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

During this and the next month will be the most critical time for the grower. Firing will have to be resorted to, and the change from natural to artificial heating, if not done carefully and intelligently, is likely to affect the constitution of the plants to such an extent that it may take the best part of the winter to bring them back to a healthy condition.

At this season all vegetable life calls for a rest, root action becomes sluggish and the plant cannot use the supplies of water to which it has been accustomed during the growing period, so the supply should be gradually diminished to suit the requirements. The benches should be thoroughly examined every morning, noting all those spots which dry out quicker than others, and giving them a wetting previous to the general watering so as to get the benches as nearly as possible equally wet.

Especial care should be taken to see that the soil is wet to the bottom, as it is apt to dry out at the bottom first, especially where the pipes run under the benches. The surface may appear to be wet enough, particularly where mulching has been applied (as the manure in the compost retains the moisture), yet on examination the soil may be powder dry.

If due care is given to the plants at this time, they will enter on the winter season with sufficient vitality to carry them successfully over the darkest weather. Ribes.

MILDEWED ROSES.

I have a bench of roses that are determined to be covered with mildew. I have sulphured them (as per instructions in the Review), but even the new branches continue to give up to the pest. Please tell me what I can do to stop it. Have good ventilation, stems seem to be good, healthy ones, but in a few hours the foliage will be covered with the mildew. Does this hurt the blooms? Bed is well mulched with cow manure.

M. W. B.

M. W. B. has evidently got a very severe dose of mildew and must adopt radical measures to get clear of it. Paint the pipes at spaces a yard or so apart with the following mixture: Two parts sulphur and one part air slacked lime, mixed with water to the consistency of paint. During the coldest part of the night close down the ventilators and turn on the pipes that are painted, keep closed till the house is filled with the fumes. Repeat this at intervals of two days.

I have never known this treatment to fail in effecting a complete cure. Of course the affected leaves will present a bad appearance for a considerable time after the trouble has ceased.

Also use the sulphur blower once a week, taking care to use it only on bright days, and when the foliage is dry, as it is only of benefit when in a dry and powdery state.

The foliage being the lungs of the plant, will, if incapacitated from duty, certainly injure the blooms and eventually destroy the plant. Ribes.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Buds.

This is a busy month in the chrysanthemum houses, and the work is of a kind that must be attended to without loss of time. The chief thing, of course, is the "taking" of the buds. Why it should be called taking the bud, when in reality it is leaving the bud, is something that is puzzling to the novice, but the term has become universally accepted by long usage and serves the purpose as well as any other. There is no longer any need to be puzzled about the selection of the bud, any bud now will produce a perfect flower without special treatment so long as it is upright on the stem and has not been injured by insects. Where a bud is crooked and bent over sideways it should be removed, since such buds never produce perfect flowers. Sometimes a caterpillar will eat out one side of a bud and the flower will come all on one side if such a bud is permitted to develop; but saving these defects, which are easily noticeable, September buds are always to be relied on.

Suckers

are very much in evidence as soon as the bud is set. The beds should be gone over once a week and all such growth removed. This is necessary to keep the energies of the plant concentrated on its work of producing flowers. After the bud is taken there is no more top growth, and the plant makes desperate efforts to increase by throwing out side shoots everywhere, and suckering underground. Keep these all closely removed and you will notice, in the language of the elder Mr. Weller when describing the condition of the ladies as the tea party progressed, that the bud is "swelling wisibly."

Syringing and Watering.

The sun is declining in power daily and less syringing should be done. The foliage, too, is dense and the air cannot penetrate through to dry up the moisture as it did a few weeks ago. Plants should be syringed right along until the bud shows color, to keep down the red spider and aphis, but syringing should only be done now in bright weather, and always early in the day so that the foliage will be dry by evening. Watering, too, should be done in the morning and done carefully. The sides and ends of a bench will get dry while the center is still wet, so watering should be done accordingly. If the center of the bench is kept wet leaf disease is certain to start in there and will spread rapidly to the whole of the plants. While it does not matter much to lose some of the bottom leaves, and it is somewhat of an advantage in fact since it gives the bed a better chance to dry out, it is difficult to get the disease to stop just when you want it to.

Mildew

will appear on some varieties now during dark weather. It is generally worst on specimen plants though Golden Wedding will nearly always show more or less of it in the fall. The potassium sulphide used in the same proportion as for the rust, that is, one ounce to two gallons of water, will keep it down. Plants that have been growing outside, when they are got into the houses (and the sooner all plants are got in now the better) need watching for mildew. The changed conditions are, of course, responsible for this. Plants are often grown outside in boxes on small places, and if the weather is not too wet during the summer such plants do fairly well, as the wood gets thoroughly ripened, but in such a summer as this has been the plants have lost their foliage badly and need careful treatment when housed.

Feeding

if done at all, must be done mostly this month, as feeding should be stopped entirely when the bud shows color. This subject was discussed at length in these notes a few weeks ago, so we will not again go into the details, but while you are feeding your plants remember that it is far better to feed very lightly and feed every time you water than to give them a heavy dose and alternate with clear water. Young fellows with not much experience, but with heaps of enthusiasm, when they notice how a plant improves after a dose of liquid, are very apt to start in right away to show their fellow florists how stuff can be grown, and to do this they apply twice as much fertilizer as they should. But when the thing is overdone nature steps in and shows in unmistakable fashion that she disapproves, and those same young fellows find their enthusiasm dwindling away when they see their flowers melt away in the sun. But it is a wholesome lesson, and one which few of us who have grown good flowers have not received at some time or other in our experience. Nature puts a limit on man's puny efforts and says "Thus far shall ye go but no farther."

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Firing.

It will not be long now until you will need a little steam in your carnation houses, and in some sections it has already been needed. We usually have to fire a few nights in the latter part of this month, but regular firing is hardly ever needed before middle of October. About this time we usually have a light cool spell and the thermometer occasionally drops to 40 degrees at night, while inside the houses it sometimes drops to 45 degrees, and a little steam will do no harm if you have the ventilators open. We do not consider it a necessity, however, and we do not fire up specially as long as the temperature in the houses does not run below 45 degrees during these short spells, unless it stays cool too long and the temperature drops several nights in succession. In fact, I believe it does the carnations good to have a few cool spells about this time if the days are bright, as it will help to mature the growth and keep the plants sturdy.

You must not close the ventilators down tight after a nice clear day, thinking that you will hold some of the warmth in the house at least a part of the night; that is a great mistake, which is too often made. I would rather have my carnation houses stand at 45 degrees with the ventilators up two inches than to have them stand at 50 degrees with the ventilators closed down tight and no fire heat. By keeping the ventilators up an inch or two you will cause a slight current of air in the house, and the atmosphere will remain dry, while if the ventilators are down tight the atmosphere in the morning will be damp and foul and poisonous to your plants. You have no doubt noticed yourself that drops of moisture will hang to the foliage after a rather cool night if no air was left on the house, but you will not find it so if the ventilators are up an inch or two. The carnation enjoys being cool, but when it is cool it wants to be dry, too, overhead.

If you grow roses or other stock that needs firing right along now it will be a good idea to run a pipe in each of your carnation houses, and at the same time keep a crack of air on. This will help materially in keeping up a current of air and a dry atmosphere. To some this would seem like burning up coal for nothing, but you just try it and you will see for yourself what a help it is. Try to have the walks dry before night sets in, and be sure that the foliage is all dry before night. It would be well now, too, to syringe less than you did during the summer months, and from now on you should syringe only just enough to keep down red spider, which will make its appearance soon after firing commences unless you keep a sharp eye out for him, especially where the plants are close to a steam-pipe.

Give plenty of water at the roots, though; the plants will need a liberal supply of it on bright days. Those that have been mulched will need careful watering, else you may get them too wet. They will not show it while the weather is nice, but as soon as it gets cloudy and cold they will get soft and watery, and the damage is done beyond repair. During the summer almost any one can water, just so he gives them enough, but from now until April it takes the best man on your place to look after the watering. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Introductory.

It is not without some hesitation that I enter upon the task of giving the readers of the REVIEW weekly notes on carnations, feeling as I do that those who have gone this way before have shown such proficiency in the work there remains but little to add. However, my personal experience may give some readers food for thought, but if any of my methods seem radically new I would advise trying them on a small scale at first.

No doubt ere this your plants are established in their winter quarters, and you are looking forward to the much-heard-of qualities such as "early, continuous, free, long-stemmed, beautiful form and color, absolutely non-burstable calyx, etc." All the qualities are latent in the plants, but perhaps not in all the plants; it depends upon you to bring out all there is in them and in justice to the originators as well as yourself, it is your duty to do so.

Supports.

Much has been written on this subject and I can only say that the time has come when good supports are as essential as good plants. After trying several methods we now use the Model extension entirely and have for three years. Its first cost may seem large, but considering the time they last and the rapidity with which they can be applied, it is the most inexpensive in the long run.

Cutting Back.

Here is where the "continuous" quality can be controlled to a great extent. It is getting late to do much cutting back but with those varieties which throw only short stems at this time, such as Lawson, Estelle, Bradt, Marquis and Floriana, much can be done and will serve as a trial at least.

Now as to the method: Go over your beds twice a week, cutting not over two buds from a plant at one time, these having been allowed to attain a diameter of three-eights of an inch. This trimming a bunch of carnations as you would a hedge is not to be thought of. It is apt to give them a severe check and also tends to make them come in crops.

You may ask why I let the bud attain three-eights of an inch in diameter. In cutting back a shoot before the bud is well set, you are very apt to get a clump of weak shoots on account of the stem being soft and short jointed. Later on, under propagation, I hope to give you a tale regarding these weak shoots.

Each grower must of necessity be governed by his trade as to letting some varieties bloom. Crane will give good flowers during October, but unless there is a demand for red at good prices (which I doubt) would it not be better to manage your Crane to have a good crop for Thanksgiving and Xmas when there is sure to be a heavy call for red at top figures?

The demand for some time yet will be confined to pink and white and with such varieties as Joost, Avondale and Nelson for pink, Flora Hill and Queen Louise for white you are prepared. Remember that "mums" will be in soon and too many carnations in the market means a loss to the grower.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

A CHARLESTON FLORIST.

The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of Mr. J. M. Connelley, Charleston, S. C. In the building at the left he conducts a large business as an undertaker, the greenhouses and floral department are seen in the center and his residence appears at the right.

It is remarkable how large a business he has developed in the florist line, and the establishment is a model one. The grounds in front of the greenhouses are so attractively planted that the place is one of the sights of Charleston. In addition to the usual bedding plants there are orange and lemon trees, pine apples and bananas. Along the veranda of the residence which faces the garden are numerous specimen palms in vases on pedestals. Everywhere fine decorative and blooming plants are in evidence, and a large business is conducted with perfect system and undoubtedly with profit.

Of course but a fraction of the stock used is produced on the place, and Mr. Connelley is a heavy buyer from northern shippers. His calls are for the best and the size of his regular shipments is sufficient proof of the magnitude of his business. The establishment is a good illustration of what can be accomplished by the application of up-to-date business methods.

Mr. F. W. Kummer is Mr. Connelley's right hand man in the floral department of his business and is a bright, energetic and very capable man.

WINTER CARE OF BEDDING PLANTS.

I furnished the plants for the bedding at a cemetery this spring and now they wish me to house these plants for them this winter. The plants include cannas, coleus, common and Mme. Salleroi geraniums. Can you tell me what to do with these plants in order to bring them down to a size that will enable me to make room for them and what care to give them so they will be all right for next spring? M. W. B.

The above is a large question. We will suppose that M. W. B. knows all about the proper care of such familiar plants as cannas, coleus and geraniums. It appears to me that these cemetery people expect the plants to be lifted and the same returned to them in the spring and be charged for their care during winter. If this is the case it is a very poor arrangement for them and M. W. B. to make, and about impossible to carry out with any satisfaction to either party.

The only arrangement you can make would be to propagate plants from those in the cemetery and give them credit for what the cuttings are worth now. For instance, the canna roots should be lifted as soon as the tops are injured by frost and stored beneath a greenhouse bench where there is little drip. All you can allow the cemetery in their next spring's account would be what you would have to pay for these clumps if you had to buy them.

Geraniums should not be lifted. Cuttings put in now make far better plants, and if you credited the cemetery with $1.00 per 100 for the cuttings it would be all they are worth, unless it was some new variety. A few cuttings of each variety of coleus should be put in the sand at once and from these you can propagate any number next March and April. There is no value at all to coleus cuttings during the summer and fall months and to lift old plants is out of the question. Mme. Salleroi geranium is best lifted and potted, and after New Year's they can be divided and propagated.

I may be mistaken in the inquiry, but if I am not, would say there is little value in bedding plants in the fall. It is growing them in the spring months that is expensive and that gives them value. William Scott.

CYCAS—FERN BALLS.

G. O. K. asks: "Which is the best way to treat or start Cycas revoluta and Japan fern balls? Is the long-leaved cycas the best? And when is the best time to lay in a stock of cycas? Where can I get a supply of Echeveria metallica?"

The Cycas revoluta is not at all a difficult plant to grow. It should have a temperature of at least 60 degrees in the winter. Any house that will grow the kentia or latania palms will grow cycas perfectly. I don't know that it makes much difference when you start them or lay in a stock of dormant stems, but your facilities for starting them might be considered. If good, sound stems can be obtained in February it would be a favorable time, as you would have a month or two of fire heat to start them.

They should be put into pots only a little larger than the stems. After they are well rooted they can be given a shift. Keep the pots plunged in some material that has a temperature of 75 or 80 degrees. Keep them only moderately moist at the roots till they have made a growth. They will often make a fine whorl of leaves before they have made many roots. They should never be sold, or rented for decorations while in this state. In fact, they should never be sold to any customers for use in their houses or to stand on the lawn or veranda till they are thoroughly well rooted, and that will be two years from time of starting.

I don't know that there is more than one form of Cycas revoluta. The length of the leaf is, I think, dependent upon the conditions under which the plants are grown.

Japanese fern balls are usually bought in the spring and started into growth in March. They want lots of moisture when growing. If not convenient to syringe them copiously, then take them down and dip them into a tub of water at least once every day, but don't let them soak in it for ten minutes as I have seen done. It drowns them. If you have any unsold in the fall, gradually withhold water in October or November, and during December, January and February you can let them hang up in your palm house and they will remain dormant and be none the worse for it.

I can't say where a good stock of Echeveria metallica is now offered. It is not so often seen since carpet bedding has been less in favor. Most all our leading plant growers catalogue it. It can be raised from seed and that is the cheapest way of getting up a large stock of it. The seed is very minute and needs care in sowing.

A CHICAGO WHOLESALE HOUSE.

We present in this issue several views from photographs taken in the establishment of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, since the numerous changes and improvements made this summer were completed. The firm now has certainly a model place for the handling of the large business transacted.

President Flint Kennicott is seen at the telephone in one picture; G. H. Pieser, the secretary, is concealed behind the glass in the cashier's cage in another, and E. E. Pieser, the treasurer and general manager, is at the end of the long ice-box in still another. The cool cellar shown in one view has been lined throughout with hollow tile and then cemented.

MORE "MEMORIES OF ASHEVILLE."

A friend once said to me, "Do you know that we live one-half our lives in anticipation and the other half in memory?" I believe this to be partly, if not wholly true. From the time it was decided in Buffalo to go to Asheville I lived in anticipation of the event. Nor can I say that I was much disappointed. The hotel accommodations were to me as to many, a disappointment and the discourtesy of the hotel clerks is something that would not be tolerated by people in this section of the country.

But the scenery and the mountains were not a disappointment. Of course, I, who have always lived in a prairie state, enjoyed the mountain scenery especially. On Wednesday afternoon, while the bowlers were busy making their famous records, a party of us went to Sunset Mountain. Just before the King of Day slipped behind the western mountains we climbed the tower, and we were just in time for there were just a few minutes left to see him, and then came the beautiful part. Shaded from orange to yellow and from yellow to the blue overhead, the sky was a blaze of beauty. Some clouds floating off to the north were tipped with the colors, and as we looked southward Biltmore could be plainly discerned.

The sunset at Detroit where the sun made a crimson pathway down to the boat as we steamed across the lake was beautiful, but the glories of this mountain sunset cannot be surpassed and cannot be transferred to canvas. The Blue Ridge Mountains are certainly rightly named. As we looked off across the valley in any direction, the blue of the sky seemed only heightened by the blue haze of the mountains, and the farther away, the bluer they seemed.

On the afternoon of Thursday we took a car ride out to the Ostrich Farm. After admiring the beautiful plumes on display we went out to look at the birds. It is our opinion that the originator of the Delsarte movement must have studied it from an ostrich. After this pleasant trip we rode out to where the gunners were making records for themselves. To me it was quite fascinating to see the accuracy with which the "pigeons" could be hit at almost any angle.

Then the trip to Biltmore was a great pleasure. Everything about this place seems planned to give one the idea of magnitude, which, of course, is true, even beginning with the fortune behind it all.

About the only scenery which does not fill one's expectations is the rivers. The French Broad, it is true looks pretty as it finds its way for miles over and between rocks, but the Swannanoa—well, the less said the better.

And now after we are safely at home the memory of all the pleasant times had in Asheville will stay with us and add to the pleasure in anticipating the good time coming in Milwaukee.

AN S. A. F. LADY OF THE LAST FIVE CONVENTIONS.

WHO IS GUILTY?

Our attention has been called to an unfortunate case in which several florists have become involved through the sending out of canna stock not true to name by some party as yet unknown.

One of our readers ordered a quantity of Black Beauty cannas, and it later developed that the variety sent was some common dark-leaved canna of little value. Before the substitution was discovered part of the stock had been resold to various customers, who naturally declined to pay for it when it was seen the stock was not true. The party from whom the stock was purchased said he had bought it in good faith as Black Beauty and supposed he had true stock. He at once wrote the party from whom he had purchased and got an evasive answer, intimating that the variety was very apt to vary in appearance when grown in widely separated localities and they had discontinued selling it on that account.

We are informed by expert canna growers that Black Beauty is a fixed variety, and that the suggestion as to variation is nonsense. It seems to us it is up to the last party, whoever he is, to tell where he got his variable stock. Certainly such work cannot be too quickly nipped in the bud. Some very serious losses have been sustained by the unfortunate victims of some man's ignorance or greed. Who is he?

Whoever he is he should be made to bear the losses sustained, as they were caused solely by his act. Certainly this is a case for prompt action by the nomenclature committee of the S. A. F.

And we think the national society could confer no greater benefit upon the trade and its members than by appointing an arbitration committee to whom the various disputes about the quality and character of plants bought and sold through the mails could be referred.

As the matter now stands the small buyer is practically at the mercy of the seller. He may have the right to legal redress, but the amount is nearly always too small to warrant the employment of an attorney to enforce that right upon a party at a distance.

Here is where the national organization can make itself of real practical value to a host of florists. The mere existence of such a committee, with the possibility of a report of its work being published, would result in making careless people more careful and easy consciences less easy.

If any reader can suggest a better remedy for the evils complained of, we shall be glad to hear from him.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week closed "under a cloud" for not only did the rain descend, but the cut-flower trade was also "in the dumps." No improvement was the universal claim, neither in prices nor volume, and notwithstanding that the quality of stock shows considerable improvement, the demand was certainly disheartening. Some of the more conservative see little to encourage before the end of October, though there are sanguine souls who behold a silver lining to the September clouds before the month is at an end. A "frost" in its true sense is anxiously awaited.

Roses improve in color and foliage daily, even if prices do not advance. Carnations assert a higher value for the "fancies" and will soon command their real value. Asters, dahlias and lilies are excellent and abundant. Gladioli have had a hard season and must feel humiliated at the reception given them.

A few mums timidly arrive and ask if it's "not a little early to come to town!" It is. Nobody wants to see them yet. Time enough in October, when the buyers of luxuries return to gay New York.

Items.

Saltford's was redolent of violet perfume when I called, and his stock was snapped up quickly. He says, "Never were violets so good nor so early as this year." But prices are unmentionable.

Mr. Dunne tells me his "Dunnite" is growing rapidly in public esteem, and he is much encouraged by many duplicate orders.

McManus shows some good sample palm stock from Pierson, of Cromwell, in his windows. He has added several orchid growers to his list, and is receiving orders from away south, and as far west as Cincinnati.

Some excellent Queen of Edgely from the Floral Exchange of Edgely, Pa., have been arriving of late at Moore, Hentz & Nash's, the best of which sold at 20 cents, theirs being the first large shipment of this variety this season.

Bonnot Bros. report an encouraging development of their trade, and have facilities for handling much larger consignments.

The Cut Flower Exchange will hold its regular meeting the first Saturday in October.

The new firm of Bradshaw & Hartman is full of enterprise, and has its neat store in readiness for a large business. Mr. Bradshaw left Sunday for a trip through the holly regions of Maryland and Virginia. This firm will have a wholesale holly and evergreen market this winter, and will try to meet the demand for an immense quantity of first-class holly wreaths. Their stock of holly will be enormous. Watch for their advertisement in the special edition of the Review.

Mr. Leeakes will be associated with them in the holly business. He has a store at 53 W. 28th street and a branch in the Cut Flower Exchange, and has been established over twelve years in the fern, galax leaf and leucothoe business in this city. He accompanies Mr. Bradshaw to the south, and will visit the galax section of North Carolina while away.

Chas. Haberman, of 101st street and Broadway, has been rebuilding his greenhouse and repainting his store, until he now has one of the most attractive places on the Boulevard. A $300 wagon just starting to "earn its keep" is one of the evidences of his success.

Mr. John Young is looking forward to his Kansas City trip with considerable pleasure. His judgments will be appreciated by the western exhibitors, for they will be based on the merits of the goods. But he will be so well cared for by those big-hearted Missourians he will find it no easy matter to come back.

Thos. Young's new store on 6th avenue will open about the first of October. His establishment in 28th street is in the hands of the decorator and will be fitted up handsomely.

Mr. W. Trumpore, of Small & Sons, is just back from a trip to the Adirondacks and Pyramid Lake. He tells some good fish stories, and is full of interesting information about the hunting and fishing facilities of that region. From Mount Pharoah, 1,700 feet high, he could see eighteen lakes at one time; four-pound bass were among his trophies, but his best "catch" was a robust healthfulness and renewed strength for the winter's work.

W. B. Du Rie, of Rahway, who stopped off on his way from Asheville for a visit to the old battlefields of '65, on which he fought for his country, was reminiscent when I met him at President Sheridan's, and told many interesting stories of his experiences in old Virginia.

Phil. Hauswirth, of Chicago, was in town Saturday on his way from the Redmen's convention at Norfolk, Va., visiting the wholesalers and enjoying the sights of our big city, accompanied by his wife and daughter and Miss Annie Kreitling. He left on Monday for home.

Sunday morning another florist came to the city, and rapped at Alex. Guttman's door. He was welcomed, of course, and is a fine boy, a credit to his parents, and all is well. The trade's congratulations are hereby recorded. With the enlarged and redecorated store, the increase in growers, and Mr. Guttman's well-known energy and geniality, he should do as large a business as indications promise this winter, especially so with this new inspiration to encourage him.

Miss Currick, bookkeeper for Young & Nugent, is back from a happy two weeks' outing. This firm had a fine stock of cattleyas and Beauties and some splendid asters Saturday.

Mr. Gunther, the wholesale florist of West 29th street, returned to the city Tuesday from his summer in the country.

J. K. Allen has a great stock of pink and white asters always, and last week's supply was exceptionally fine.

Mr. Wadley is back again at his store on 5th avenue, superintending extensive improvements. His escape from death in the tunnel accident was a miracle. Even yet a cane and crutch are a necessity, but his grit has pulled him through and some day he will be himself again.

Mr. A. G. Henning, the birdseed man, who was at one time with Klunder, is at 62 Cortlandt street, and reports a growing trade in his line, and many florists among his customers.

The Cooke & McCord Co., of Tarrytown, have built up a fine business in the last four years; have a store 40x100 feet, with basement, which would be a credit to any city, and have three and one-half acres of nursery land and 10,000 square feet of glass. They do a large seed business, grow bedding stock, palms, etc., and depend on the New York wholesale market for their cut flowers.

Schloss Bros., of 533 Broadway, the ribbon kings, report an increased trade since the Asheville convention, and are well pleased with the results of their exhibit there. They have some very handsome novelties for florists this season.

A brief call at F. R. Pierson Co.'s Tarrytown establishment developed the fact that the whole of the 25,000 square feet there had been devoted to the new Nephrolepis Piersoni and every house was filled to overflowing with this remarkable fern. None of the stock will be sent out before the spring of 1903, and already orders for a great many thousand plants have been booked. The demand promises to be enormous.

At present this firm is overwhelmed with bulb shipments, four carloads being sent out from the Tarrytown depot, while the case lots go direct from New York, without repacking, to all parts of the country. The new greenhouse, 300x54 feet, being built at Scarborough, will be as modern as the new improvements of late years can make it, and a full description of this and the firm's establishment at Scarborough will appear in a later issue. Mr. Pierson was much pleased with the Canada exhibition, and with the reception given his fern there. He will make a grand exhibit at the Madison Square Garden show in November.

W. A. Bridgeman moves up a few doors this fall, from Small's to Thorley's.

Mr. Thielman, the bowling champion of the New York Club, is back with his family from Pennsylvania, with better health, and his "200 arm" in shape again for the old-time average. But that "99" of his at the convention is still a bitter memory.

Rudolph Asmus, of New Durham, is in better health this fall than for a long time, after a long outing in the country.

Preparations for the Madison Square Garden exhibition go on quietly but constantly, with bright prospects daily for a great success. Every one seems interested in the undertaking and anxious to do his share. J. Austin Shaw.

A Floral Urn.

A FLORAL URN.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of an urn arranged by Mr. W. A. Herbert, the florist, of Wellsville, O., for the funeral of the late Isaac Knowles at East Liverpool, O., Aug. 2.

The urn was six feet high. The flowers used can readily be identified in the picture. At the left appears part of a wreath that was a separate design. Some of the flowers are wilted, the photograph having been taken at the cemetery after the funeral ceremony.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is really beginning in earnest. Some busy days have been experienced in the stores and the commission houses have had some fine shipping orders. The supply of flowers is increasing, there is more variety, and, thanks to the cool weather, the quality is excellent for so early in the season. Beauties are becoming more plentiful, the best bring from $2 to $2.50, and occasionally $3 per dozen. Teas sell at $3 to $5; a few choice Kaiserins at $6 per 100. Some indoor carnations from new stock can be had; the white are quoted at from $1 to $2 per 100, colored at 75 cents to $1.50. Some fine valley is coming in that brings $4. Asters are entirely too plentiful. Dumont & Co. alone have enough to swamp the market, so perhaps it is better not to quote any figures. Dahlias sell pretty well at $1 to $2 per 100; some fancies bring more.

Leo Niessen is handling a lot of lilies, quite a rarity at this season. They are different types of longiflorum. A dollar and a half to $2 per dozen is the price.

Marketing Cut Flowers.

A meeting was held on Thursday evening September 11, in Horticultural Hall, at which all branches of the business were represented. Every seat was occupied and some late comers were obliged to stand. Interest was keen for two and a half hours. A temporary organization was effected on the plan proposed by the new committee after lively discussion. The features of the debate were the clear, forcible arguments of John Burton, who was heard at his best. Secretary Rust read the minutes of the previous meeting and the report of the committee, which, on motion of John Burton, was taken up by sections.

The name, "Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market," passed without objection, but the second paragraph which fixed the capital stock at $20,000 1,000 shares at $20 each, brought vigorous opposition from Adolph Fahrenwald, who wanted it reduced to $10,000, as first planned. This paragraph was, however, adopted after warm debate, the feeling being that the present plan depended on this increase of capital. The paragraph that the market was for, first, cut flower growers; second, plant growers; third, dealers in florists' supplies, brought out the best debate of the evening. Mr. Fahrenwald wanted cut flowers only. It should be a matter of pride that no help was needed from plantsmen, supply men or seedsmen. Mr. Burton showed that it would be better business to combine all these branches, though he had first felt as Mr. Fahrenwald did. David Bearn moved an amendment that "wholesale florists" be added. Mr. Burton supported the amendment provided the wholesalers were let in under proper restrictions. He paid a glowing tribute to the commission men, saying they were a great benefit to the business, as they sent more flowers out of the city than they brought in. The rest of the committee were in a delicate position, because, while most of them were disposed to agree with Mr. Burton, they had accepted subscriptions from many growers with the understanding that commission men would not be admitted. Mr. Bearn's amendment was voted down.

Mr. Fahrenwald opposed the plan of voting for temporary directors by shares, preferring instead that each subscriber to stock have one vote only. Over 200 more shares were taken, making over 600 in all of the 750 now offered. Seven directors were chosen, namely, Joseph Heacock, William K. Harris, William P. Craig, Edwin Lonsdale, Herbert G. Tull, John Westcott and J. W. Young. They were instructed to secure a charter, frame by-laws, and rent suitable quarters, preferably the third floor of 1224 Cherry street, as recommended by the committee.

The Home of the Market.

This week the third floor in the new fire proof building at 1224 Cherry street has been engaged by the temporary directors in obedience to the instructions given them at last week's meeting. The new room is admirably adapted to the purpose. It is light and airy, contains over 9,000 square feet of floor space, and is reached by three elevators, three freight and one passenger. A committee of three incorporators, consisting of Edwin Lonsdale, Jos. Heacock and W. P. Craig, has applied for a charter, which it is expected will be ready for the first meeting of the stockholders to be held on or about October 16. The hall has been leased from November 1.

Notes.

S. S. Pennock has returned from a sea trip to Savannah, and is hard at work again.

Eugene Bernheimer has returned from two weeks spent chiefly among his carnation growers. He found the stock in unusually good condition, many of the houses planted and work in the others being pushed rapidly forward.

D. D. L. Farson is again seen in this city. He is selling bulbs for a New York seed firm.

W. Burger has completed and planted his new carnation house, in addition to two houses of fancy carnations. He has this year two houses of tea roses, besides a great variety of foliage and flowering plants. He is also enlarging his store, making it very complete and attractive.

PHIL.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The French Chrysanthemum Society offers as a premium to the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be competed for at the November exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, a gold medal, value 100 francs, and diploma. The competition to be for not less than 36 blooms in six varieties of French origin. Among these the following are all eligible:

Colette,	Madame G. Debrie,
Coppeha,	Mdlle. Marie Liger,
Calvat's Sun,	Mdlle. Lucie Faure,
Calvat's 99,	Marie Calvat,
Fee du Champsaur,	M. Verlot,
H. J. Jones (Santel 1892),	M. Chenon D. Leche,
Le Grand Dragon,	M. Phillipe Roger,
L'Enfant des Deux Mondes,	M. X Rey Jouvin,
Locadie Gentils,	Nouvelle Vie,
Le Fakir,	Princess Bassaraba de Brancova,
Madame Feriat,	Ville de Bordeaux,
Madame Herrewege,	V. Morel,
Madame R. Cadbury,	Princess Alice de Monaco,
Madame Carnot,	Soliel d'Octobre,
Madame Von Andre,	Merveille du Louvre,
Madame Deis,	Mme. Emile Brandt.

Other varieties of later introductions can also be used, but all blooms must be from varieties of French origin. This being a special prize and the first ever offered by the French Society in America, it is hoped that the honor of winning this valuable trophy will bring out a strong competition. The following is a synopsis of the letters received from the general secretary of the French Society bearing on the above subject.

Lyons, France, August 8, 1902.

To the Treasurer of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, Summit, N. J.

It is with pleasure that I have submitted to the French Society of chrysanthemum growers the request you sent to it. Although our society is involved in rather heavy expenses by the publication of a catalogue of the colors and plates of the diseases of chrysanthemums, the administrative committee has, however, maintained in testifying to your society a pledge of the friendly relations which it holds with ours. The committee has decided to offer you a gold medal (value 100 francs) with the emblem of our society.

I shall give the necessary orders to the engraver so that the medal may be stamped and I shall see that you receive it as soon as it is ready.

Meanwhile I pray you to accept my sincere greetings. Yours, etc.,

A. M. PH. RIVOIRE,
Le Secretaire General.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The cold rain mentioned last week was followed by nearly a week of remarkably chilly weather for the season and fires were needed continuously up to Tuesday of this week, when a rising temperature helped out materially. As a natural result, the supply did not increase in roses, and in carnations there was a serious shortage. On Tuesday any decent sort of a carnation flower commanded $2 per 100, and only quite inferior stock could be had at as low as $1.50. The supply of asters has, of course, been sharply cut under the weather conditions noted, but still a fair lot has been received, and the best have sold readily at $1.50 to $2, and down to 50 cents for the kind that wouldn't sell at all a short time since.

Of roses there are none too many good ones, and prices remain about the same as last week—$3 to $4 for shipping grade, with a few specials reaching $5 and short-stemmed stock going at $1 to $2. The quality averages very good for the season. Beauties have shortened up in supply, especially those of medium length. The rate of $1 a foot still prevails.

On the whole, conditions are very satisfactory for the season. While the advent of a more seasonable temperature is welcome, there is some fear of a change from very cool to a stretch of very hot weather, in which case some fearful gluts would surely result, and at the expense of the cut later, when it will be most needed. We heard some predictions to the effect that stock of all kinds would be too plentiful for the good of all before the end of the present week if the temperature continued rising and the days remained bright and clear.

Various Items.

The first fall meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at Handel Hall Wednesday evening, and steps taken to outline an attractive program for the winter. Meetings will now be held regularly twice a month.

McKellar & Winterson Co. are receiving from eastern growers large consignments of very fine asters that are a big help in the market just now. They are shipped in in chicken coops that are lined with paper. They make just the sort of packing crate needed for these flowers, insuring plenty of air. All the blooms so shipped have arrived in first-class shape.

On Monday Mr. Edgar Sanders sat up in bed for the first time, and he stood the change in position nicely. He says he is going to get out of bed and sit in a chair this week, but it may not be considered wise to permit him to carry out his plan just yet.

John Poehlmann is again attending to business, but still requires the aid of a crutch. He threatens to use the crutch as a bat soon, though, but will insist that ruts be rolled out of the ball ground before he makes any more double home runs.

The renovating at Benthey's is now all completed except George Piepgras' apron.

C. S. Stewart, the famous painter, has done a landscape on the counters at Frank Garland's. It's like the one of the Egyptians passing through the Red Sea. It was all red, and the Egyptians were underneath. Only this one is the color of a last week's Bride.

Peter Reinberg has begun cutting Liberty, and the quality is much better than at same time last year. Chatenay and Sunrise are being cut in moderate quantities, and they sell well. Chatenay meets with especially good demand.

It is reported that a local retailer is in the market for a "live" automobile, but has no desire for "dead" ones made of wickerwork.

Miss Lydia Steinmetz, for some years past at Anton Then's store on Larrabee street, was married last Tuesday night to Mr. A. Gunnarson.

Recent visitors: W. W. Adams, with the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland; E. C. Keck, Washington, Iowa.

In a recent large decoration the Geo. Wittbold Co. used a large quantity of the common garden asparagus that was well filled with its red berries. It was very effective decorative material.

BOSTON.

Business Conditions.

There is as much going on as the date and perfect weather allow us to expect, and the demand has been fairly steady during the week. All kinds of roses are very plentiful. Carnations are quite scarce, and better qualities of asters becoming so. Sweet peas are nearly out of the market, and practically entirely out of fashion, so that the few poor ones coming in do not sell. A few single violets are coming in irregularly, and while it is unexceptionally early for them yet they are of very good quality.

Choice of Stalls.

The annual scramble for place where the tombs used to be, under Park Street church, came off very pleasantly, with just an undercurrent of grumble because of high prices for choice. And by the way they bid to the blithely Carroll-ing auctioneer, you would think flowers were up and all coal strikes down! They began at $135, and when two-thirds of the 134 were gone, still figures were running between $65 and $75. But the pressure was so lessened towards the last that several poor stands were sold for between $10 and $20. The total amount raised for the benefit of the Boston branch of the flower trust was $7,748.50, as against $5,733 of last year's work, which was a great record-breaker at the time. The New Market is yet hardly old enough to talk, but we may expect to hear a few words from it next week. Tim Waters, who knows all the ins and outs of the wholesale business, is to be the manager and Geo. Sutherland has unearthed J. J. Kelly, also well versed, to take Waters' place in his employ.

The "Anna Foster."

About the best way to settle any question you may have in your mind concerning L. H. Foster's new fern is to visit it in its cradle on King street, Dorchester. Whatever I may say about the fern business can go but a little way. But Mr. Foster is a pioneer in the fern business, and he shows his faith in the new one by filling most of the benches in his own place, and also those of the old T. H. Meade place with it, but carrying also a fine stock of Bostoniensis and palms.

Various Items.

A new venture in connection with the traffic is that of the Boston Fern. Co., at 14 Brattle street.

Among the crowd at the auction sale the one who got the most notice next to the auctioneer was John J. Forbes, the rotund Auburndale man, who broke his leg almost exactly a year ago, and has been on the shelf ever since. He is looking fairly well, but has yet to crutch himself around.

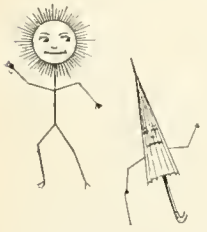
It makes very good filling for some empty afternoon to go out to Harrison square to visit the newly established plant of the Boston Carnation Co., comprised of Messrs. Dickerman and Palmer.

It is situated at 21 Mill street, and if their methods of doing business prove as crooked as the electric service to their place, I fear they may never succeed. Their appearance, however, indicates a straightforwardness more similar to the railway to the near-by station and I hereby advocate the use of both.

I felt interested because of the peculiar size of their mammoth new house. It is of Hitching's make, iron frame, up-to-date in all appointments, 160 feet long, but is 59 feet wide, thereby covering 11,000 carnation plants, now all set and looking well indeed.

James M. Tuohy, the East Boston representative of the family, has decided to change the location of his business to Washington street, Boston, and has engaged a store near State street for that purpose. But he seems to be more elated because of the fact that he now stands second upon the list of checker champions of the Florists' Club, having won that distinction by defeating Sam Beck and B. F. Washington. But others are coming thick and fast.

J. S. MANTER.



THE SUN AND THE UMBRELLA.

Sonnenschein und Regenschirm went walking down de lane.
Said Regenschirm to Sonnenschein, "I dink we haff some rain."
"Well, if it rains," said Sonnenschein, "De ground will sure get wet,
"Und den de sun will shine und dry it up already yet."

De Sun may shine, de Rain may rain,
De Snow might snow a few,
De Wind might blow a hurricane,
It's all de same to you.
You kick because you like to kick;
Berhaps some day you'll see,
It pays to haff a pleasant smile.
Be sunny, same as me.

FRITZ BLUMENSCHNEIDER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business for the first two weeks in September was good. The opening of the schools, which brought most of the society folks back from their summer vacations, and a few fall weddings made us a little business. The weather is cool and the florists' windows are beginning to look attractive again with their displays of cut flowers.

On Saturday, the 13th, nearly everybody in St. Louis wore a pink carnation in honor of the late William McKinley, and the wholesalers were flooded with orders, not half enough coming in to supply the demand. None of us was prepared for such a rush for this flower and most of the store men were sold out before 10 o'clock in the morning; 60 cents per dozen was the overage price asked for them, still some of the stores asked $1 per dozen, and a few as high as $2 per dozen, the wholesale price being from $1 to $2 per 100.

During the first part of the week white flowers had a fair call, with plenty of them in the market. The best roses sell well, while plenty of seconds are going to waste for the want of demand; some are more or less mildewed. Three dollars is the top price asked for the best of them.

In carnations, white are in great abundance in this market just now, but colored ones are quite scarce. From $1 to $2 is asked for them. Asters are still plentiful and of good quality, with a price on them from 50 cents to $1 per 100. Other outdoor stuff is about over and will be scarce from now on. Smilax and asparagus are looking better and the sales are reported good.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its September meeting on last Thursday afternoon at its regular rooms in the Odd Fellows' building. The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock by President Meinhardt with eighteen members present. After the minutes of the last meeting were read the different committees made their reports. The transportation committee was discharged with thanks. The picnic committee reported a surplus of $2.50 on hand, which was turned over to the treasurer.

Mr. F. B. Call, of the St. Louis Carnation Co., was elected a member of the club, after which the new officers were installed by ex-Presidents Fillmore, Halstedt and Ammann. President Meinhardt on leaving the chair thanked the members for their support during the year. The new president, J. W. Dunford, on taking the chair, made a neat speech and outlined some of the business that would be done the coming year.

Vice-President George Windler, on taking his chair, said that he would work for the welfare of the club and do all in his power to help the new president maintain the club's present high standard. The work of Secretary Schray and Treasurer Beneke, the two old officers, was too well known to the club to need any further assurances from these gentlemen. The two trustees present, Steidle and Jnengel, received their instructions from the chair on taking their seats. William Trillow, of Chicago, an old time member of the club, was present and was called upon for a few remarks. He said that the biggest thing in Cincinnati is Peterson's Gloire De Lorraine and the biggest thing in Buffalo is William Scott. His remarks were listened to with great interest by the members. Vice-President Windler, who was the only member present that attended the convention, told us of the good time they had in Asheville and the short stay in Cincinnati.

Otto G. Koenig, son of the late Julius Koenig, was indorsed by the club for superintendent of floriculture at the World's Fair.

The next meeting of the club will be held on the third Thursday in October, owing to the big Thursday of fair week falling on our regular meeting day.

After adjournment President Dunford invited all to an elegant supper at Hotel Mozier, which was enjoyed by all.

Notes.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill.; A. S. Halstedt, of Belleville, Ill.; William Winter, of Kirkwood, Mo.; J. W. Dunford, B. F. Call and John Steidle, of Central, Mo., were out-of-town members who attended the last meeting of the club.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was a visitor last Saturday, calling on the trade.

W. E. Jordon and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Madden, bought the land on which the old greenhouses of the Jordan Floral Co. stand, 145 feet on Union avenue and 712 feet on North Market street, including the greenhouses, and will conduct a general greenhouse business under the name of The Jordon Greenhouses, W. E. Jordon & Co., proprietors. The place is well stocked with palms, ferns and plants of all kinds. They will have a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums this fall. The company known as the Jordon Floral Co., is now out of existence.

Base Ball.

The Tesson and Berning base ball teams will play their third game next Sunday, September 21st, for the championship, each having won a game. Both teams have asked your correspondent to act as umpire, and he has agreed to do so provided business will permit.

J. J. B.

OMAHA.

Trade is on the increase; roses and carnations are selling well. The demand for pink carnations last Saturday and Sunday was greater than at any time in the history of Omaha in a tender observance of the memory of William McKinley. All who could get them wore a pink carnation Sunday, the shade that the president loved so well, and the thought of McKinley was in the mind of every man, as the flags were at half-mast and words were spoken in almost every church concerning the martyred president. The public needs but the slightest suggestion to adopt this custom of wearing the flower as an offering to the great dead.

The Nebraska Florists' Society held its annual meeting September 13. The election of officers was as follows: J. J. Hess, president; S. R. Faulkner, vice-president; Lewis Henderson, secretary; George Swoboda, treasurer; Wm. Ellsworth, George Sorenson and John Barth, trustees.

The Nebraska State Horticultural society held its exhibit at Lincoln at the state fair the first part of the month with a very fine display of plants and cut flowers. Frey & Frey, of Lincoln, received first premium on display of plants and cut flowers; L. Henderson first on floral designs and second on plants.

The angel of death has visited us and taken Mrs. Henry Peterson, who was laid to rest last Thursday in the Forest Lawn Cemetery in the presence of many friends and florists. L. H.

BARABOO, WIS.—Nurseryman M. F. Foley has completed another large packing house in connection with the Great Northern Nursery Co. The new building is 100x25 feet and the company's buildings now cover a space of 17,000 square feet.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—The work of rebuilding the Kemble greenhouses is about completed. The heating plant is now being installed.

SEGUIN, TEX.—H. L. Neal has purchased the Roselawn Greenhouses, formerly owned by Miss E. Leonard, who died recently.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—Nelson Bogue, the nurseryman, has lost an eye and has been kept in a darkened room since early in July.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Lilly, Bogardus & Co. are planning to establish a seed farm of more than 100 acres near this city.

Saratoga, N. Y.—The annual floral fete was favored with clear weather and the display was unusually fine. At the floral ball on Monday evening the convention hall was elaborately decorated. Laurel roping was freely used. The stage represented an Egyptian temple, the columns decorated with lotus blossom designs. On Thursday the floral parade contained only decorated vehicles, floats being excluded. It was a beautiful spectacle. At the carnival ball in the evening Queen Flora presided, attended by her court.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The general increase of business in all lines reported last week proved to be of a substantial form, for instead of showing any inclination to slow up it is still continuing to increase, with every prospect that the increase will be sustained. The weather has turned decidedly cooler, even to the extent of a light frost Saturday night, but no damage to outdoor stock has been heard of at present. The temperature is gradually rising now, and it looks as if the cool snap was a thing of the past.

Many openings during the past week used up great quantities of stock of such a grade which is hard to dispose of for anything else. Short-stemmed roses and carnations from the field were in great demand, and more could have been handled, as Saturday saw all the wholesale houses entirely cleaned out. Asters also helped out in many cases, and they, too, were entirely sold out. The demand for Beauties is greater than for any other flowers, save carnations. Short and long stem sell on sight, and many orders have to be turned down from lack of stock to fill them. If the present demand is any indication of what the winter call will be, then surely the American Beauty will be the top-liner for the coming season.

Mr. C. C. Murphy was right "in it" with field-cut carnations. His cut ran way up into the thousands, and there was a ready sale for all of them. They brought $5 per 1,000. They were just in in time for the openings. Now most of the plants are housed.

Monday was the opening of the Fall Festival, which this year reaches almost the size of our old-time expositions, with the festival features on the side. It will undoubtedly be a great success, and incidentally place a few dollars in the florists' pockets. Besides the two floral exhibits, for which very fair prizes are offered for table decorations, designs, wedding bouquets, etc., there is to be a civic parade on September 22, and sixteen fire engines from different parts of the city will be in line, decorated entirely with natural flowers. This will use up great quantities of flowers, and also give some of the florists a chance to show what they can do, as it is no cinch to do a good job on an engine.

Various Items.

The opening of the season at the Grand Opera House called forth some fine creations of floral art. Julius Baer especially contributing some extra fine work.

Charlie Jones has just about completed remodeling his Walnut Hills store, and it is certainly a credit to the hill. Charlie is always very quiet when speaking of his own business affairs on the hill, but, judging from appearances, he is doing a very good business there.

B. P. Critchell is now cutting some of the best white carnations that come to this market. The variety is Flora Hill, and this goes to prove that this variety is still very near the top among whites.

A number of cows broke through the fence and did considerable damage on Mr. Ernsterhoff's property at Evergreen, Ky.

Mr. Ernst Manthy, Jr., of St. Bernard, Ohio, and Miss Cora Grossman will be married Wednesday evening, September 17, at 8 o'clock. They will at once begin housekeeping at St. Bernard.

Mr. C. E. Critchell, manager of the Atlanta Floral Company's green houses and retail store at Atlanta, Ga., is in this city paying a short visit to his home folks and others. He is also on the outlook for various kinds of stock. He reports trade to be first-class in the South and prospects fine. He will go to Richmond, Ind., before his return to the South.

Mr. R. Brown, of Sidney, Ohio, was a caller.

TORONTO.

It was a pleasant but by no means an easy task to judge the various exhibits of plants staged at the exposition now in progress, for while the number of exhibitors are not numerous, they are so strong as to be able to fill several classes. All the stock shown was in a high state of cultivation. The principal members of the trade were Manton Bros. and Granger, who pluckily combated the forces of the Parks, Central Prison and Normal School, and by so doing kept up a general interest in these exhibitions. As prizes of considerable value are offered, apart from honor, the result is always awaited with considerable anxiety.

Whilst in the city I ran out to John H. Dunlop's, and in the absence of that gentleman was piloted around by Albert Houle, who showed me the new range of houses built on the full span, open at gutter plan, erected by the King Construction Co., who are also building several similar houses at the Dale plant. Mr. Houle explained that the healthy condition of the Liberties was presumably due to the fact that the conditions were congenial. They keep the temperature around 62 and give the plants no rest. They are full of promise for the winter. Meteors and Beauties are very healthy, also other kinds. Grafted stock will be grown exclusively in the future, Mr. Dunlop being a firm advocate of this method.

He is also a believer in the full span house and butted glass. He has shown some ingenuity by inventing a gutter support made of cast iron, V shaped, upon which the gutter plate rests. In carnations, growing outdoors is preferred to summering in the house, as they make stronger growth; and whilst they do not come into flower so quickly, they are in the end more satisfactory. Chrysanthemums and single violets are in fine shape, and with the carnations and roses so full of promise, a rich harvest may be anticipated. W. M.

SALEM, O.—William Mundy will admit to partnership on Oct. 1 Harry Miller, a young florist of Alliance, Ohio, and the firm will be known as Mundy & Miller.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Springfield Floral Company, which purchased the Doyle greenhouses, has completed a large, new, modern house and has put the old plant into first-class shape.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH.—Plans are being made for a range of glass to be built here for the production of cut flowers. Prof. F. A. Huntly, formerly in charge of the horticultural department of the Agricultural College of Idaho, is interested in the project.

MADISON, N. J.—The seventh annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held Nov. 6 and 7. Chas. H. Atkins is secretary.

PAINTING BOILERS.

We are changing the position of two 25-H. P. tubular steam boilers. One of these has been in use about three years and the other seven years. Would it be of any advantage to give them a coat of paint before enclosing them in the brickwork? If so, please state what kind of paint you consider most desirable for the purpose.

What is the best mixture to apply to rusty steam pipes? H. L. J.

In reply to H. L. J., the boilers should be well brushed off on the outside with a wire or other stiff brush and be painted with a coat of red lead and raw linseed oil before resetting. The rusty heating pipes should be well brushed with a stiff steel wire brush, in order to remove the scales of rust, and then with a stiff dusting brush to remove the fine coating of rust dust. They should then receive a coat of red lead and raw linseed oil, well brushed on, after which, if it should be desired, give them a coat of lamp black and lead for a more pleasant appearance than red lead. Red lead is the best preventive of future oxidization. Henry W. Gibbons.

New York.

SAVING ASTER SEED.

Replying to the inquiry regarding method of gathering and curing aster seed, the practice is to save seed from only the most perfect flowers and to cut the heads containing the seed before they are fully ripened. They are then allowed to thoroughly dry out in an airy room without fire heat, being laid thinly on sheets of paper. Old newspapers answer very well. R. R. M.

WILD SMILAX.

It appears that Mr. A. C. Oelschig, of Savannah, Ga., was the first to note the commercial value of the southern wild smilax, and was the first shipper of same, starting some five years before any other southern shipper.

The autumn catalogue of bulbs, seeds and florists' supplies recently issued by W.W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, has a very attractive half-tone cut on the title page showing a little girl in an artistically arranged group of lilies and decorative plants. The list of stock offered is very full and complete.

The autumn wholesale catalogue of bulbs and plants of the Clucas & Boddington Co., New York, has been issued. It lists a full line of stock, and is very attractively illustrated. A half-tone engraving of the new building occupied by the firm indicates that their business is expanding very rapidly.

PANSY PLANTS.

For Pansy Seed see under heading "Seeds."

500,000 PANSIES, finest market strain grown. Awarded first-class certificate of merit by the Mass. Horticultural Society.

ATTENTION is called to these facts:

This strain is the result of over twenty years' careful selection.

The seed was saved this year from over 12,000 plants, the finest among the 500,000 flowered and sold last spring.

Particular attention is always paid to form and substance as well as size and color. The colors will be found very evenly proportioned, including rich selfs, brilliant variegations and many novel shades—no dull, mixed sorts.

Our pansies have for many years held the highest reputation in the Boston and Eastern New England markets and we confidently believe will be found the most satisfactory strain ever offered for florists' use.

Two of our customers write us as follows:

Boston, Mass.

Mr. I. E. Coburn. Dear Sir:—The pansies you have supplied us with have been the means of largely increasing the demand for these plants. The colors, size and form have been the admiration of all our patrons who have had them.

Yours truly, SCHLEGEL & FOTTLER CO.,
Seedsmen, 26 South Market Street.

Boston, Mass.

Mr. I. E. Coburn:—We have handled several thousand baskets of your pansies for the past four years and find them superior in size, color and variety to any grown in this section.

FINE PANSIES.

Last spring the editor of the REVIEW ordered a hundred pansy plants from Mr. I. E. Coburn, Everett, Mass., to plant in his own garden, having been very favorably impressed by some flowers Mr. Coburn had sent him.

The plants duly arrived and they were not only a fine lot, of a much better quality than we expected for the price, but the varieties were exceedingly fine. It was the best selection of colors and shades we have ever seen in any garden, and the plants were a source of pleasure all summer long. Of course, the cool summer was favorable to pansies. We believe in giving credit where credit is due, and we feel that Mr. Coburn is entitled to much credit for his fine strain of pansies and the high quality of the plants he sends out.

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—E. O. Lovell reports trade during the past summer as surprisingly good, having been double that of the summer before. While he grows little himself, he receives some very satisfactory stock from the shippers, being only 18 hours from Milwaukee and Chicago. But depending upon shipped stock necessitates lively work and telegraphing in the case of large funeral orders. Mr. Lovell says the demand for cut flowers is bound to continually increase, and don't believe the supply can outstrip demand if the quality is right. Mrs. Lovell is the floral artist and her arrangements have been warmly praised by people who have seen the work of leading florists in the large cities.

COLUMBUS, O.—At a meeting of the Columbus Horticultural Society held September 12, several valuable papers on trees and forestry were read.

THE BEST VARIEGATED FOLIAGE PLANT to-day is PANDANUS VEITCHII.

Fine plants, bench pots, $12.00 a dozen. Also larger sizes at $1.50 and $2.00 each.

PHILADELPHIA LAUGHS.

Fifty members of the Philadelphia Florists' Club attended the monthly meeting held last night in the clubroom, Horticultural Hall, on Broad street. All present enjoyed themselves hugely. When they came they expected the meeting would prove somewhat interesting, but they had no idea of the fun in store for them. It was a complete surprise. In fact, was more than a surprise—it was a circus.

They laughed so hard they shook the building.

This is what happened:—

Trouble.

The members did not quarrel among themselves, but many of them related tales which were full of trouble. They had recently returned from Asheville, North Carolina, where they were attending the annual convention of the Society of American Florists. They will never go there any more.

First of all the chairman of the Transportation Committee arose and said:—

Gentlemen: When I applied to the railroad company asking them if they would arrange it so our delegates would be well feasted en route to Asheville—at the company's expense—they said: "Nit." But I was not to be outdone. I expended out of our treasury about $50 for refreshments, consisting mostly of ice cream and cake. Aboard the train were about 100 ladies, who did not belong to our party. They ate the ice cream and cake. We got none.

The chairman of the Hotel Committee reported as follows:

Gentlemen: Several days prior to the time of our departure, I telegraphed the Battery Park Hotel people, asking them to reserve a certain number of rooms for our party. When we arrived in Asheville we were informed by the clerk that the rooms which I had engaged had been given to another party. We were put to no end of trouble finding other accommodations.

The chairman of the Bowling Committee said:—

Gentlemen: Our team captured a number of valuable trophies during the bowling contest. That is to say, we won them fair and square, but we neglected to capture them. The committee in charge of awards promised to send our trophies to Philadelphia via express. I have written many letters endeavoring to discover their whereabouts. In vain.

Then the chairman of the Entertainment Committee arose:—

Gentlemen: I had been told of Mount Mitchell and all its beauty. They said the scenery was simply grand. The mountain has an elevation of more than 6,000 feet. Well, I telegraphed to the proprietor of the Mountain House, asking him to furnish mules or donkeys for a party of six. I said we were going to the top of the mountain to view the sunset. And I said we would arrive at his tavern promptly at 11 o'clock. When we started out in a stage coach from Asheville, at 4 o'clock in the morning—six other delegates had joined our party—making twelve, all told. We arrived at the Mountain House. The proprietor and his six donkeys awaited our coming. We told him to get six more donkeys. Before he was able to do so his 'cuckoo clock' sounded the hour of 3. The journey of twelve miles up the mountain was rough and rocky. When we arrived at the summit we found a heavy fog had come upon us. The mist was so dense we could not see fifty yards ahead. Let us pray.

Eucharis Grandiflora

It is a mistake to associate this flower with Eucharis Amazonica. The free-blooming qualities of the grandiflora are so much superior that the other cannot be brought in comparison at all except through its similar beautiful flowers. Eucharis Grandiflora will give five crops of bloom, properly handled, to one of Amazonica. It is one of the most profitable and successful flowers for florists to grow who wish something fine for funeral and wedding work.

A stock of bulbs once secured and let alone will produce from time to time through the season a beautiful show of flowers that can be compared to no other white flower for beauty and fragrance. It is both delicate in texture and fragrance, and its lasting qualities are superior to most of the white flowers of this class. It only needs a warm, shady corner of the house and very little care and the blooms will come in at seasons when white flowers are very scarce.

We still have a supply left and prices are offered the same as in former advertisement. $2.50 for large clumps of 15 to 20 bulbs, which are in bloom at the present time, and $10.00 per 100 for single flowering bulbs. The clumps will bloom again for the holidays with proper handling.

Sample flowers, with full instructions for growing, will accompany all purchases.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

I have just made my fall visit among the growers, and am pleased to be able to send you a very favorable report.

Roses and carnations, and, indeed, all kinds of stock, are looking remarkably well, and no doubt will make some of our pockets bulge by holiday time.

Mr. Kyle, of the Dunkley Floral Co., has been making considerable improvements, rebuilding and giving a general renovation. His stock is in the pink of condition.

Mr. Fraser, of Mountain Home, has rebuilt the greater part of his plant. He has adopted a short-roof plan, which from all appearances is to be the house of the future, so many growers are favoring it.

Mr. Batson has, as usual, put his whole place into carnations. The various improvements which he has been carrying on this season have made him late with some of his planting, but, judging from the condition of his stock, he will soon catch up.

The Van Bochoves are, as usual, well to the front. They have nearly completed their new structures and express themselves as being satisfied with the outlook.

We had a visit from Mr. A. H. Post, of the Florists' Review. The boys were pleased to meet him, and combined to give him all the pleasure his short stay would allow. They parted from him with regret.

"Better lo'ed ye canna be;

PIPING.

Please tell me how I can arrange my pipes to heat my greenhouse with steam, the top of the boiler (not the dome—I have a return flue portable) being one foot above greenhouse floor? Or, would it be more practicable to heat with hot water under these conditions?

Can I get any circulation by having my return pipe enter boiler above water line? One practical florist tells me that I can.

J. H. H.

In reply to J. H. H., we can give him no information regarding the pipe arrangement, as he has neglected to give us any description of the greenhouse in question. The boiler placed with its top one foot above the floor of the greenhouse may be used either for water or steam, as desired. In either case it would be necessary to run the flows over-head to the far end of the house, bringing the return back under the benches. A circulation can be created by the return pipe entering the boiler at any point below the water line in a steam system, or below the flow outlet in a water system, but such arrangement would not be very desirable; the returns in either case should enter the boiler at or near the bottom.

PRESERVING STEAM PIPES.

Replying to "Subscriber," for preserving steam pipes used in greenhouse heating from corrosion, the best method is to paint them with red lead and linseed oil when first installed. This will in no way retard radiation, and is an absolute preservative. If the color is objected to, a light coat of lamp black and boiled oil thinned with turpentine can be applied after the red lead is thoroughly dry.

PRIMULA POISONING.

For poisoning from primula obconica I would recommend putting the affected hand into very hot water, as near the scalding point as it can be borne. A spoon dipped into boiling water and then placed on a mosquito bite will stop its itching. This remedy is simple but effective. William Lee.

THE PARKER-BRUEN MFG. CO.

Flushing, L. I., Dec. 11, 1901.
Mr. Theron N Parker,
Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co.
Dear Sir: I have used your Wire Carnation Supports for the last two years, in all about 12,000. They fill the bill in every particular. Nothing could be more satisfactory, and it would give me a great deal of pleasure if I can bespeak a good word for you to the trade, and you are at liberty to refer to me at any time.
Yours very truly,
A. L. Thorne.

La Fayette, Ind., July 8, 1902.
Theron N. Parker,
Harrison, N. J.
Dear Sir:—After using your Model carnation support in two of our houses the past winter we have come to the conclusion that it is perfectly adapted to supporting carnation plants and shall use them on all our plants the coming season. We were much pleased with the simplicity, strength and neat appearance of the support. Yours truly,
F. Dorner & Sons Co.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lilies.

A reader of the Review (L. W.) asks the somewhat old, familiar and hard to answer question—"How long before Easter should lilies be brought in, and what temperature should the house be to have them in flower for Easter? Should lilies be shifted?"

To give a certain date to bring them in and a definite temperature for the house with any certainty of their coming in just right is about as reliable as making sure that a certain amount of education will develop a boy into a smart, clever man. Another thing to consider is the fact that at present our lily bulbs are of uncertain quality and each bulb seems to have its own individuality. Under precisely the same conditions one bulb will be in flower a month earlier than another, and, unfortunately, there are a good many "anothers" that won't flower at all. The disease that affects the Bermuda type is discovered early by the yellow streaks in the leaves and when once detected the plants may just as well be thrown out at once.

The failure with the Japan longiflorum of late is quite different and comes from another cause, and as Mr. Farquhar of Boston so plainly explained to us in his lecture, arises from the bulbs being dug before they are ripe. The effects of this comes on with the Japan bulbs after they are six to eight inches high and often looking most vigorous. The top of the growth wilts, it looks as if they were scalded. Like the oak tree that the witty Dean Swift looked at and remarked: "I shall die like that tree—from the top." Sure enough his mental faculties gave way years before the material body dissolved but only encumbered the earth. So don't let your lilies encumber the benches when once they show evidence of either disease.

This is scarcely answering the questions of L. W. He might have been more explicit than just saying lilies, but doubtless he means either the Bermuda or the Japan longiflorum. The Bermudas arrive early and there is time to get a good start out of doors and they can be brought in by the first to middle of April. Give a temperature of 50 degrees till the first of February and then a higher temperature as they need it; 65 degrees at night will not hurt them at all. I will just mention here that in my experience it is harmful to take lilies from a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night and put them in a cool house, say 50 degrees at night, anyway before the buds are white and about ready to open. It gives them a setback and they will remain actually dormant. Better let them come along till the buds are about ready to open and they will open then in any cool, shady house and will keep two or three weeks.

From my own experience and what I have observed among large growers, and although we can't go back on the old saw that experience is the best of teachers, particularly in matrimony, we should be very far behind in knowledge did we not observe the experience of others, and this has led me to believe that you should not be in a hurry about receiving your Japan grown longiflorum. Pot them at once and get all the root growth you can in a cold-frame out of doors. Have sashes at hand to cover in case of excessive cold or November rains. The first of December is early enough to bring them in. Up to New Years 50 degrees at night will do, after that give them 60 to 65 degrees. In fact rush them right along and they will be there all right. As I said earlier some plants will want more heat than others if you expect to get them all in flower the same week.

About the shifting, we have tried most all plans. Potting a 7 to 9-inch Bermuda bulb in a 4-inch pot and shifting into a 6-inch when you bring them in is done to save room, and another reason for it and the best one, is that you can discover the diseased plants while yet in the 4-inch pots and you save labor, space and soil. Otherwise it has no advantage and the shifting slightly retards the growth. With the Japan bulbs I would certainly not shift them but pot them at once into the flowering pot, a 5 or 6-inch.

While on the important subject of lilies, and I may not think of it later, many of our lilies are now sold in large pots, three to five plants in an 8 or 10-inch pot. Our best customers want them and are not satisfied with a single stem. This particularly applies to the Japans. Five plants in a 10-inch make a handsome group. Don't attempt to put the dormant bulbs in these large pots in the fall; two out of five may be a failure, or quite dwarf, or one may grow a foot higher than the others. The time to make up these pots is just before the buds expand, or when they are open. You can slice the ball of a 6-inch grown plant down to a wedge not over three inches thick; you won't hurt either the foliage or flowers and they will last just as long when sold. Neither is it any fraud, for after two weeks the final end of these handsome pots of ribbon bedecked lilies is Sheol or garbage box, barring the ribbon, which Maggie Clancey, the cook, detaches, and it comes in handy for the confirmation of her niece, Nora Nolan.

Carnations.

I am not a carnation writer but read with great interest the clear and up-to-date views of Mr. Baur. I am not sure that he ever touches on carnations for outdoor bedding. Our customers ask continually for plants that will give them flowers in their gardens during the summer. The plan I briefly describe is correct, and for years we did it with success. Those were the days we did more with our own hands and watched things closer. There is sure to be a lot of plants in the field that you left because they were small. These are just what you want. Lift them at once and pinch off all leading stems. Pot in 4 or 5-inch, the latter is better, and plunge in a deep cold frame. When they have begun to root you can remove the sash and except in rainy weather keep it off till hard frost comes at the end of November. Now some will say they will freeze dead during winter. They will not with us if you keep double sash on in the cold winter weather and ventilate in mild weather. I believe they are often killed during winter by being kept too dry. An apple tree or evergreen or rose kills more quickly in winter by being dry at the roots, particularly plants in pots.

I had a bitter experience with that a few winters ago (or rather a December). Some American Beauty roses cut down and lifted and potted in November and plunged in a cold-frame were killed just because the soil was allowed to remain almost dust dry. These carnation plants will begin to grow end of March and by early May will be in splendid order for planting out. We are going to treat a few hundred Lawson this way, but about the middle of February will bring them in and they will, I think, make fine pot plants, and should sell readily in April. For a change we will try some for Easter.

Another plan to fill the wants of our customers for carnation plants in the spring is to put in a few cuttings of a few desirable varieties in October. You can often get these cuttings from plants left in the field. They root readily and if grown on in a cool house and shifted, can be in 4-inch pots by next May with four or five shoots. They quickly flower, and a man is very proud to wear a carnation in his buttonhole if he can say "that's from my own garden," and when the cold and wintry blasts come and the poor florist is hunting for another ton of anthracite, this dealer in options will have so acquired the virtuous weakness of wearing a boutonniere that it will have become with him, like Joseph Chamberlain, chronic.

Hollyhocks.

Sometime during summer I said that the stately hollyhock will be in demand, and so it ought. We sowed several flats of it early in the month and have them now in 2-inch pots. Before hard winter comes they will be in 4-inch and plunged in a cool frame where they will do all right, and if planted out in April will send up the finest stalks if the fungus doesn't attack them. There is always an "if" in most of our prospective crops and very much so with this majestic plant. The disease is a fungus and will soon give the plants the appearance of having the smallpox, although I have never had that trouble, but I have had the hollyhock fungus. Give them several syringings of Bordeaux mixture or some copper solution; as a preventive it is good. You see any amount of "advs." of acres of hollyhocks. When you write for them they are either sold out or rubbish. We can winter them in the field as they do in New Jersey. Grow them in pots and you will have success. Even the single hollyhocks are beautiful; in fact the artistic taste would pronounce them more beautiful than the double.

Sweet Peas.

I suppose you saved some sweet peas in 3-inch pots in the month of August. They should be planted out in the carnation beds at each post, supposing you have the posts; if not, you can run a couple of strings to the bars above. Don't overdo it. Every eight feet along the bench is enough and two plants in each place is all you want. Several of my friends I hear saying, "Humbug. If you grow carnations grow them, and if you want to grow peas grow them." We have taken a good many extra dollars from our own carnation houses from the sweet peas during the months of April and May, and if it ever interfered with or lessened our carnation cut either in quantity or quality we never had large enough magnifying glasses to see it.

Rambler Roses.

We are still growing a few Rambler roses on the old style, viz.: Growing cut down dormant plants started in the houses in April and keeping them under glass till August where they make canes from four to seven feet long. They are now out of doors and need watching; the canes are now ripening. But if we get a long warm spell now and heavy rains they will start growing from the eyes that you want to remain dormant to give you the fine trusses next spring. Keep them moderately moist and in case of heavy rains lay the pots on their sides.

Try a few of the beautiful Rambler "Dorothy Perkins." We are aware there have been several useless Rambler roses sent out as useful for forcing. The yellow one we tried to our sorrow, and sorry we did not force some golden rod in its place, but this Dorothy Perkins is a beauty. Mind, I don't say it's as valuable as the wonderful Crimson, and none of its type ever will be, for it's the crimson color that charms, as it is the color of American Beauty that is so delightful. Pink American Beauties, like pink lily of the valley, or white violets, or white mice, are only wanted in limited quantities. Yet here is a pure pink Rambler; very free either out of doors or forcing; each floret as large and double as the Crimson Rambler, and withal a most beautiful, dense, shiny growth of foliage. We grew several hundred plants of this in a bed at the Pan-American, and also forced a few plants lifted from the ground last fall, so in this case we know whereof we speak. William Scott.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Soil.

If you have not already piled up your next year's supply for planting carnations, I would advise you not to let it go until it is too late to do it this fall. Carnations do not like a fresh, half-rotted sod, as I said a number of times in these notes before, and it usually takes us from eight to twelve months to get a pile of sod in good condition for carnation planting. If you haul it this fall, as most growers would naturally do, you should not pile it up into a high pile, as is usually done, but spread a layer of about one foot of sod, over which spread about four inches of cow manure and finish up with about six inches of sod turned upside down, and have this lie until spring. You will find that by spring most of the sod will be rotted and the frost will have penetrated clear through to the bottom during the winter and your soil will be in good mellow and sweet condition. As soon as the soil is dry enough to handle in the spring, you can chop it all up fine and stack it up, thoroughly mixing it to get the manure all through the soil and to keep it in nice shape for planting until you are ready to use it.

If you own your own fields where the soil is to come from you can do the same thing with a little less work and perhaps a little more thoroughly, too. Plow up the sod about four inches deep, or if the sod is quite heavy you can plow it six inches deep and just leave it lie as it is until it is frozen hard and you can drive over it with a wagon, at which time you should spread over it a good coat of cow manure. Let it lie until spring, when you can haul it to the greenhouse, and pile it up until you are ready to use it. I believe the latter is the better way, but so many growers have to buy their soil where they can get it, and in such case the former way is the proper thing to do.

A pretty safe way to select the soil for your carnations is by the sod that is growing on it. A soil that will raise a good heavy sod will usually grow good carnations, but of course you want to bear in mind that a comparatively heavy soil will grow larger blooms than a light soil will, and you must select your soil accordingly. We like to put up our soil when it is in nice working condition, about the way you want it for planting in the field, as it has more life in it than when it is extremely dry, and under no circumstances should it be worked when it is overwet.

We use cow manure altogether, because we think it is the best and because we can get all we need, but if you cannot get enough of it you can use stable manure, if it is well rotted and the bedding material was straw or some such material. Saw dust or shavings make manure unfit for use and should be avoided. With the growers in the large cities the soil question is often a source of a great deal of worry and expense. People with acres and acres of idle ground with no prospects of selling soon will positively refuse to sell the sod off of it, and some of our growers are compelled to pay as much for sod as they do for cow manure. At 75 cents per yard it soon runs up into money and fortunate are those who own enough good land to supply them with sod.

This thing sometimes leads me to wondering whether we will ever see the day when we will be able to use the same soil over and over year after year by killing all the disease germs in it and then adding such plant foods as have been drawn from it by the plants during the previous season. There is no reason why this should not be done, and I believe it will be done before many years. That one season's use of the soil does not make it unfit for carnations if it is handled properly is well known. I do not recommend leaving the same soil on the benches two successive seasons, however, as I do not think the crop of blooms would be as good the second year as it was the first. We have one of our semi-solid beds planted with carnations in the same soil that was on it last season as an experiment, and the plants seem to thrive as well as those in new soil, but we would not care to try it on raised benches.

We believe that the following method would put the soil in first rate condition to use over again unless there had been considerable stem-rot among the plants: Spread the soil outside about ten inches deep and apply a good sprinkling of lime to sweeten it and in the winter give it a good coat of manure. In the spring turn it over and sow down to some quick growing grass to make sod. Turn this over again in the fall and spread on some manure in the winter, pile up the next spring and use the next fall. Allowing the grass to grow two summers would be better than one, but with two winters' freezing and the lime and manure added it ought to be in good shape again. This may seem like a good deal of work, but after you get onto how to go about it you would find that it could be done at a comparatively small cost. A. F. J. Baur.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Watering.

The benches being far from filled with roots, be careful not to overwater at this time of year. Water early in the morning, and having all the air on possible through the day, the foliage will be dry by night. I do not believe in syringing unless it be to dislodge red spider, but on bright mornings, with every promise of a pleasant day, a gentle shower all over the plants is of great benefit. With a little practice you can do this without wetting a bloom.

You will probably notice some places in a bench which seem to persist in drying out. Examine the soil to the depth of three inches to ascertain if water is really needed. Sometimes it is a difference in the mechanical condition of the soil. Other times it is owing to careless watering or from the soil not being level on the benches.

These may seem trivial matters or very unlikely to occur at the present time when so much has been written, but only a year ago I saw the soil in a bench which had been planted, when the soil was rounded to the center so that its depth raised two inches between center and sides.

Fumigation.

Assuming that in time of peace you have prepared for war, strike the first blow. We use Aphis Punk, giving each house a heavy smoke directly all plants are housed, then lightly every week. The best time to fumigate is on a still, rainy or damp night, but should one not occur at the proper time, dampen the walks slightly after having closed the ventilators. This charges the air with moisture, causing the smoke to descend among the plants where needed.

One great advantage of Punk over tobacco stems is the fact that it is not necessary to keep the house closed over an hour, thus giving the plants the abundant ventilation they need at this time of year day and night. It is imperative that your plants be kept free from insects, for by their means lurking diseases enter, to say nothing of the direct damage done by the pests themselves.

About Coal.

Many eastern growers depend on anthracite coal for fuel and while perhaps provided with full dinner pails, full coal hods and bins are scarce. It will soon be time to turn in a little heat nights, just to keep the air moving through the crack left on at the top. Those having a small lot of coal from last year will hesitate to use it, while those who have none certainly cannot use any, and both will perhaps see no other way but to close down tight some of these cold nights, which of course is a dangerous proceeding.

While not advising this as a remedy for fear some may think it a panacea or coal and wood saver. I should in an extreme case close down and immediately proceed with a bellows to fill the house with Grape Dust.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

FLORAL PILLOW.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a pillow arranged by J. H. Shelton, Rochester, Ind. It is unfortunate that the inscription was allowed to get out of shape, but the general effect is good and the way the pansies are used seems commendable. It will no doubt be interesting to many.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

The season is now at hand when buds will be more plentiful than is desirable, both for the condition of the plants and the market. Disbudding and cutting off those buds which are not wanted at this time will require a deal of time and care.

From past experience we know that during the season of mums, roses are invariably a drug on the market. Disbudding and thinning out should be practiced with a double object in view, viz., to shorten the cut at that season and develop a good cut for the holidays, when the demand and prices are good. With a little calculation and forethought this can be obtained in ordinary weather.

Simply nipping off the buds at this season has a tendency to encourage a lot of small blind wood, as almost every eye will break and consequently will be weak. To disbud with advantage to the future crop, two or three eyes next to the bud should also be cut off; the strength of the plant will thus be directed to the remaining eyes, which will eventually develop into good flower stems.

It must be borne in mind that dark weather is approaching, when crops will not mature so quickly, and ample time should be allowed for the development of the holiday crops, five or six weeks being about the usual time at that season, according to the weather. In faking the ordinary cut from Brides and Bridesmaids, to get the best results they should be cut so that at least two eyes with fully developed leaves are left on the plant, and where the stems are of extra strength, as is frequently the case with Golden Gates and Meteors, it is better to leave four or more eyes; this will encourage more eyes to break and while the stems will not be quite so long the blooms will be of a much better quality. Beauties should always have four or more eyes left, and the temptation to get a few more inches of stem on the cut blooms at this season is frequently the cause of scarcity of good and well developed blooms during winter.

The removal of laterals should also be strictly attended to; they should be nipped out while they are small and soft, as if they are allowed to get hard and woody they deprive the bud of its rightful nourishment and spoil the gracefulness of the stem. If this is carefully attended to twice a week the extra quality of bud and stem obtained will amply repay the labor.

Next week I will treat on the care and assortment of the cut previous to shipment.

RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Temperature.

In many sections frost is looked for the last week in September, and some attention must now be paid to the night temperature in the mum houses. The chrysanthemum is a cool grown plant, but when the outside temperature falls to freezing point the ventilators should be lowered down and only an inch or two of air left on.

If the temperature of the house falls below 45 degrees after the air is reduced down, a crack of heat should be permitted to pass through the house.

It is not a wise policy to let the house run much lower than 45 degrees where you are handling crown buds. While an odd cold night may not hurt much, a series of cold nights form conditions that are unsuitable for the proper development of such buds, on account of the fact that they are much more crowded with petals than are terminal buds and require a more genial atmosphere to develop in. Many growers who claim to be unable to handle crown buds would probably find it easier work if they were not so sparing of the coal on frosty nights.

Another reason why it is well to have a little heat when the nights are cold is because the atmosphere on such nights is still, and the moisture will settle down on the expanding florets and cause them to damp. A dry, moving atmosphere is necessary for the best development of the flowers, and on foggy, moisture-laden nights, such as we sometimes get in October, we run a line of steam through the house, no matter how warm the night, for the sole purpose of keeping the moisture off the flowers.

Let not the interested reader get the idea from these notes that the mum is a plant to be "coddled." The conditions I have described are such as to necessitate some precautions, but in bright, cool weather leave the ventilators and doors wide open, night and day, to help ripen up the wood. No advantage is gained by putting on heat and running the plants very warm with the idea of getting flowers early. If the house is kept up to 70 degrees nights it will make no difference in the time necessary for the development of the flowers, but with cool nights and bright days a great difference can be noticed every day.

And how interesting it is to note this daily development. I know of nothing that a man can grow that will reciprocate good care as will the mum. A man grows roses or carnations and he is thinking of and looking out all the time for the flowers that are yet to come but with a mum you begin with a small slip of a plant and gradually work up to a climax. Is it to be wondered at that a man gets to be a mum crank, and continues to devote space to the cultivation of his favorite flower when his better judgment tells him he could make more money by growing something else.

The Chicago Exhibition.

It is to be hoped that everyone who can will contribute to make the show held at Chicago this year under the auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America a splendid success. It will help to boom the society, and there never was an exhibition held yet that did not help to boom the sale of the flowers. Growers of good stock make the mistake of their lives when they don't use every possible endeavor to get their wares prominently before the public. For every person that sees your stock when you have a private exhibition in your own houses a thousand will see it when you exhibit in a public hall. Do then, fellow craftsmen, get to work and make the show this fall a lasting monument to western enterprise and skill. I hope and trust there will be a good competition for the medal offered by our French confreres. Let them see that their generosity is appreciated. Horticulture knows neither country nor religion and is doing as much to bring about the universal brotherhood of man as any of its kindred sciences.

Buds.

To return to our mums, I notice that many buds here and there are showing color. The early ones of course, Glory of the Pacific, Soliel d'Octobre, etc., are quite prominent. The last named, by the way, can be got in quite early in October if the bud can be taken by the second week in August. Among what may be termed the larger flowered section I notice Robinson is showing color on the crown bud. This variety is even finer than usual this year, and it seems almost incomprehensible to me that it comes so weak necked in some sections. Mrs. Coombes is also showing color. It has made a very fine growth, and I haven't much doubt will become a standard pink, particularly among growers, and they are numerous, who can handle V.-Morel with only indifferent success.

Others that are showing color are Sunderbruch, old but excellent for home trade; Bonnaffon, on crown buds; Miss Alice Byron, a white on the style of Weeks; Nellie Pockett and several other new things as yet unclassified. One of the chief charms of the mum in my eyes is its "Infinite variety." Every spring one can start up with a batch of new varieties with a breast full of the hope that springs ever eternal, etc., and in the fall possibly out of all the prize packages that you thought you had you may get one or two varieties only that are improvements on the type. But what of it. Next year you can try again with the same amount of hope and possibly better luck. As an aid to optimism, if nothing else the mum is worthy of a kind regard in the minds of all of us.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: October 4, 11, 18, 25, November 1, 8, 15, 22, 29, 1902.

Boston, Mass.—E. A. Wood, chairman, care Boston Flower Market, No. 1 Park street; James Wheeler, William Nicholson.

New York, N. Y.—E. Dailledouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 26th street and Sixth avenue; James W. Withers, William H. Duckham.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut street; Wm. K. Harris, John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue; George Stollery, E. Wienhoeber.

Cincinnati, O.—Albert Sunderbruch, chairman, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., 437 and 439 Main street; James B. Allan, E. G. Gillett.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Any one having a variety in season before or after dates fixed can have the same passed upon by specially notifying the chairman of committees.

Edwin Lonsdale, Secretary.
Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa.

The following is the scale of points for the judging of the several classes of exhibits by the Chrysanthemum Society of America:

Scale A.—Scale of points for bush plants and standards, single specimen or any number up to six in an exhibition where the class under consideration does not form the chief feature in the exhibition hall:

Equality of size and form of plants.	40
Excellence of bloom	35
Foliage	25
	100

Scale B.—Scale of points for bush plants; exhibits of more than six or for any number of specimen plants in an exhibition where the class under consideration forms the chief feature in the exhibition hall:

Excellence of bloom	40
Equality of size and form of plants.	35
Foliage	25
	100

Scale C.—Scale of points for plants grown to single stem and one bloom. A height of not over three feet is recommended for plants in this class and pots not over 6 inches in diameter:

Excellence of bloom	40
Compact and sturdy growth	35
Foliage	25
	100

Scale D.—Scale of points on specimen blooms for commercial purposes:

Color	25
Form	25
Fullness	15
Size	15
Stem and foliage	10
Substance	10
	100

Scale E.—Scale of points on specimen blooms for exhibition purposes:

WHOLESALE CUT FLOWERS.

In the past we have refrained from publishing full lists of cut flower prices in the wholesale markets, feeling that these quotations, as usually printed, are misleading and do more harm than good.

We have now, however, devised a system that we think will convey a more accurate idea as to the actual conditions in the market and we begin the publication of such quotations in this week's issue.

Please note the qualifying comments below the Chicago quotations this week. And bear in mind that "specials" are the very cream of select stock. The proportion of "specials" in the cut from even the best growers is very small. Of "firsts" there is a goodly proportion in the stock of the best growers—anywhere from one-fourth to one-half, but rarely as many as the latter figure. "Seconds" and "culls" comprise the rest of the stock. And there are some growers who rarely send to market anything except "seconds" and "culls" and sometimes all "culls" and what the dealer euphoniously terms "punk," which is stock that won't sell and is difficult to burn.

The old saying, "There is always room at the top," is never truer than when applied to the cut flower market. We have time and again seen the first selection of roses sold readily at say $8 per 100, while the firsts went fairly well at $6, the seconds very slowly at $3, while the culls dragged at $1. And during seasons of glut the specials would still command $8, the firsts would go slowly at $4 and the seconds and culls could be sold only in job lots at unmentionable prices to street men if at all.

There is always an abundance of poor stock in the market. If the grower who produces only seconds and culls would quit building and devote all his energies to raising the quality of stock from what glass he already has, it would be money in his pocket and better for the market and all concerned.

And don't imagine that if the seconds and culls were cut out prices would decline on good stock. The man or woman who buys from the retailer is the one who makes the demand for high grade stock. The retailer finds he can sell such stock at sometimes double the price of the next lower grade, and he buys it of the wholesaler, because he has this demand from his customers. The retailer merely endeavors to meet the demands of his customers, who are ready to pay a good price for something first class, rather than a lower price for something not so good.

"But," says the grower of this stock, "it used to sell." Very true, but conditions are continually changing and you must change with them or be left stranded. What was the best a few years ago now classes in the seconds. And further very few flowers are now worked up into designs compared to the number so used in the past. Instead of being worked up into baskets in which cripples could be used to fill in between and under a few good flowers elevated above the rest, the bulk of the sales are by the dozen and the buyer usually insists upon picking out each flower individually. The retailer grades his stock accordingly. He says: "These are $3 a dozen, these are $2 and those are $1." The buyer sees the difference in value—it is often very marked—and when the retailer finds he sells the best stock easiest, even at the higher price, he goes into the wholesale market and hunts for more of that grade. And the grower who has it gets a swelling in his bank account, while the one who hasn't soon faces a deficit.

Just at present, for instance, the grower who will send in to the Chicago market 500 first class Bridesmaids, with stout stems, 15 to 18 inches long and plump, well colored heads, 2 to 2½ inches long, and good sized, clean and abundant foliage, can get $25 for them easily and quickly, while the one who sends in 1,000 seconds and culls, 6 to 10 inch stems, many weak, and heads only 1¼ to 1½ inches long, foliage weak and sometimes mildewed, will find that 500 may sell for $15, and the rest be jobbed off for $5. He gets less for his thousand than the other does for his 500. And probably much less, as the first class stock always sells, while the other is frequently dumped in whole or in part.

We doubt if any grower could produce all "specials," but there is a considerable number that either produce no "culls," or else never allow them to reach the market. And there are some who rarely send in any "seconds." Their stock is looked for in the commission houses and sells quickly, always at top figures. Get into this class if you are not already in. It is the only one that it pays to be in.

HEATING IN THE SOUTH.

I enclose a plan of my greenhouse plant, for which I wish to install a steam heating apparatus. Please tell me the best arrangement of pipes and how many for each house to keep the necessary heat when outside temperature drops to 12 degrees above zero. It has never gone that low here, but I want to be on the safe side. We seldom get more than 8 degrees of frost. What size pipe would you advise for flows and returns? Would it be best to run the flows overhead and the returns under the side benches?

Would it be best to get one large sectional boiler or two smaller ones, so one can be used in case of accident to the other?

Would you advise putting in a coal burning boiler? Wood is most largely used for heating purposes here and is cheaper than coal.

What capacity of boiler is necessary to heat the plant? C. D. M.

Replying to C. D. M., for the heating of the range of houses shown on the sketch accompanying this inquiry, one steam boiler of about 20-horse power would be ample for the work, but it would be more economical, in his southern latitude, to install two small cast iron boilers, each having a capacity of about 800 feet of steam radiation, as during much of the winter season such a boiler would give all the heat required.

The system of mains best suited for this work would be as follows:

Start from the boiler with a 3-inch main north and extending west under the ridge of the smilax house into the palm house, here branch south with 1-inch to the even-span house and north 1¼-inch to the even-span house, continue west with 2½-inch under the ridge of the palm house to the potting shed, branch south with 1-inch to the even-span, north with 1¼-inch to even-span house and continue west with 1¼-inch, turning into the southwest even-span house, the return starting from the southwest even-span house, 1-inch to the eastern end of the potting shed, there increasing to 2-inch and taking in the 1-inch return from each of the two even-span houses, at the center of the palm house, 1-inch return will enter from the southern even-span propagating house; when reaching the east end of the palm house increase to 2½-inch, taking in the 1-inch return from each of the south and north even-span houses at this point, then continue 2½-inch all the way back to the boiler.

For the heating of the asparagus house, take a 1½-inch steam main from the boiler and 1-inch return back to the boiler. For the rose and carnation houses at the extreme east, take a separate 2½-inch steam main from the boiler, branching 1¼-inch into the rose house and 2-inch into the carnation house; the return from the rose house would be 1-inch and from the carnation house 1½-inch, connecting into 2-inch main returning back to the boiler, thus three sets of mains, both flows and returns, are run from the boiler.

The amount of radiation required for the several houses, starting at the southwest of the range from west to east, would be: Even-span house 60 ft. by 12 ft., 366 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; even-span house, 57 by 9 ft. 6 in., 270 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; even-span propagating house, 57 by 8 ft. 8 in., 270 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe, 60 by 11 ft. 6 in., 315 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; rose house, 56 by 20 ft., 570 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; then starting at the northwest house from west to east, even-span house, 58 by 20 ft., 666 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; even-span house, 58 ft. 6 in. by 11 ft. 6 in., 351 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; carnation house, 70 by 24 ft., 780 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; smilax house, 590 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe; palm house, 357 lineal feet of 1-inch pipe.

The steam main leading through the smilax and palm houses should be covered with asbestos to prevent radiation.

In installing the apparatus, carry the steam mains to their highest point as soon as possible after leaving the boiler, then have everything grade downward back to the boiler. The circulating pipes should be placed under the benches, distributing them as evenly as possible throughout each house.

In selecting a boiler, a coal burning boiler would be the most desirable, as in such boilers where ample combustion space is provided wood can be burned for short time firing, but for regular firing coal would be found most desirable, especially with steam heat, where steady pressure is required.

FLORAL FLOAT.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of the floral float entered by Mrs. Edgar Hall of Austin, Tex., in the labor day parade in that city and which was awarded second prize for best decorated float or vehicle. The building in the background is the state capitol.

NEW YORK.

Various Items.

Fleischman has added several plate glass extension windows to his fine store on Broadway, giving ample room for decorative work, and manifesting the necessity for as much attractiveness and novelty as possible to gather the attention of the fickle public. These great Broadway stores are the pulses of the retail market and they set the pace for the retailers of the whole city. A wreath of purple asters with sago leaves was a beautiful illustration of what can be accomplished by artistic work with cheap materials in Fleischman's last week.

At Small's a fine window of water lilies in the basin of the fountain, banked with autumn flowers, cosmos, goldenrod, hydrangeas and brilliant coloring still charms the sight-seers, and with open air blossoms the other window tells with no uncertain sound the floral story of "the last days of summer."

Thorley's window still leans to Bostoniensis, with some fine vases of Beauties, and orchids in the foreground. Across the way McIntosh is mirroring his cozy store, and with the addition of a handsome new wagon seems "in the swim" with the best of them. Warendorff's window is always brilliant and artistic, and Scallen's with the added room and store capacity on the other side begins to look like business again. These Broadway windows are an unerring barometer and tell the story clearly of renewed life and the opening season.

The Rosary, on Fifth avenue, reports business good and an early opening trade. Two new wagons attest the expected boom, and an automobile on November 1st will give this house all the facilities of the best. Some fine bamboo stock is on exhibition, and an abundance of Japan maples and evergreens. Mr. Troy, the manager, always looked ministerial, as his old friends on the road will remember, and last week his brother was called to the ministry of the leading Baptist Church in Brooklyn, which "accounts for the milk in the cocoanut."

Miss Alice MacLeod, stenographer for Siebrecht & Son, has returned from a five weeks' vacation at Montauk Point, in greatly improved health.

Mr. Hugo Schroeter, of Detroit, who has been in the service of Siebrecht & Son, at Newport, during the summer, returned to Detroit September 25th, via Philadelphia and Washington. He has had a lively time at Newport, beheld lords and ladies in abundance, and will show the Detroit florists this winter some illustrations of his acquired artistic ability in the decorative line.

Mr. Parsons, Sr., suffered a very severe attack of apoplexy last week at Flushing, but possessed of remarkable vitality for his advanced years, has again rallied and hopes are now entertained that he may completely recover. He is a remarkable illustration of the recuperative power and reserve strength of a man whose life has been always right, and his friends all wish him to "reach the century."

A trip in the suburbs of New York, Brooklyn, or in the adjacent cities, reveals as never before the glories of the Clematis paniculata as a decorative and charming autumn flower. Everywhere its beauty is in evidence and few are the tasteful country homes without it. At the Elizabeth Nursery Co.'s grounds nearly half a million plants are ready for the trade. The new greenhouse plant of this firm is nearly completed. The new office, moved from the city to the nursery grounds, is finished, and the grounds themselves are being handsomely planted with the finest evergreens and ornamentals.

October 1st is the 5th anniversary of the formation of Stumpp & Walter Co., of 50 Barclay street. It will be celebrated with proper ceremonies and felicitations. The firm consists of Messrs. Stumpp, Walter and Eicke, three young men of tireless energy and thorough knowledge of the business acquired by many years of practical experience, and unbounded ambition. They have established a fine and growing business, have added a branch store to their responsibilities and are enjoying this year the best season of the firm's existence.

The Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan Building has invented a very interesting and cleansing system for the benefit of the "bores" and the unwashed strata of horticultural plebeians who have nothing to do. By the exercise of stratagem these gentry are induced to enter an alley where "surplus flowers" can be had for the gathering, and are suddenly overwhelmed with a deluge of pure water from the windows of the Exchange, the number of buckets used depending on the number of wholesalers left in the building. The surprise and moist condition of the victim carries one back to the time of Noah and gives him a slight realization of what the flood meant.

Charles Millang has been handling an average of 10,000 asters daily during the past week, and realizing 50 cents to $1 per 100 for them. The boys have been calling him "Mr. Aster," and asking him when he is "going to England, to visit John Jacob?" His lilies have not been in demand as much as usual, but the "supply" is always on hand and the lily king still holds his title. A musical friend of his has written a march in his honor called "The Lily King."

The autumn exhibition of flowers, ornamental plants, fruits, garden vegetables, field crops and latest horticultural novelties has opened at the American Institute with a splendid variety of exhibits, and an excellent attendance.

Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz and Nash, was at Edgely last week looking over the great plant there of 125,000 square feet, where the Queen of Edgely come from that he sells in the Coogan building. He reports a grand stock of Edgely and Beauties, and the new rose "Helen Gould," which is seen there at its best, is being grown extensively.

Mr. F. Sander, Jr., of the house of Sander & Co., of England, arrived Saturday for his first visit to this country and will make a brief call on some of his American customers. Mr. Dimmock, the representative of the firm, accompanied him.

John Scott's auction has been postponed to the 20th of October.

At Elliott's rooms auction prices were fair, ficus, 6-inch, bringing 30 cents; Kentia Belmoreana, 5 to 6-inch, 75 cents to $1.25; Kentia Forsteriana, 4 to 5 feet, 8 to 10-inch pots, $6 to $7 each. At Cleary's similar rates prevailed, but at both establishments it was realized that the first of October is about early enough to begin the fall sales.

Robert Bottomley, of Asheville, N. C., is intending to send some fine decorative stock to Elliott's shortly, to be sold at auction. Among the lot are many kentias in 12 to 16-inch pots, 6 to 8 feet, and areeas, 12-inch pots to 22-inch tubs, 12 to 15 feet high. Those who attended the convention and took the trip to Biltmore will remember the stock.

The cut fronds of Peter Crowe's new adiantum may be found at John I. Raynor's. They are very handsome and sell readily.

The Dreyer auction at Woodside on Monday was well attended and good prices were realized. Cleary conducted the sale.

Samuel Parsons & Co., who have entire charge of all the parks of Greater New York, are doing some extensive landscape work in Kentucky, Utica and New Rochelle, and have in prospect the laying out and furnishing of a large park in Porto Rico. They have had an exceedingly busy season.

The Rustic Construction Co. is one of the old landmarks of Fulton street, New York, having been established since 1875, and within a block of its present location, number 19. The company manufactures rustic work exclusively, and are builders of odd, artistic, and handsome creations that have made their business a popular and prosperous one during all these years. Their specialty of late has been summer houses of all sizes and styles, but among their stock are plant tubs, hanging baskets, bird houses, chairs, settees, tables and many things of special value to florists everywhere. The company is one of experts in their line, and its experience insures satisfaction.

The business relations existing between L. J. Kreshover and H. A. Bunyard have been discontinued.

Dr. Vreeland, of Paterson, N. J., was in town Saturday and reports excellent prospects for a fine crop of roses and carnations. He has over 12,000 square feet of glass and from an experiment for recreation has developed a nice commercial business. All his stock is handled by Moore, Hentz & Nash at the Cut Flower Exchange headquarters.

McHutchison & Co. have opened an office at 218 Fulton street, New York, in the wholesale nursery and florist business, and are the American representatives of Arthur De Meyer, Ghent, Belgium; Ernst Reimschneider, Altona-Hamburg, Germany; H. W. Van Der Bom & Co., Oudenbosch, Holland. Both Mr. McHutchison and Mr. Wittpenn are young men of considerable experience, having been with Mr. August Rhotert for years. They have the confidence and good wishes of the trade. Mr. McHutchison will make an extensive trip among his old friends in December.

Miss B. Cohen, who was in the florist business in San Francisco, and later with A. Warendorff on Broadway, opened on Saturday a handsome store on Fifty-ninth street, near Madison avenue.

Edwin Marole, of Summit, N. J., was in the city Saturday. His roses are handled by Mr. A. Guttman, of Twenty-ninth street.

Ford Bros. are enlarging their wholesale establishment on Thirtieth street and making it one of the best equipped and most convenient in the city. About double the old space will be at their disposal.

A fine display of Madame Gastalier chrysanthemums in John Young's window is very attractive, but the demand has not yet materialized for anything "out of season," nor in season, unfortunately.

The International Plant Breeding Conference will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum, 19 to 21 West Forty-fourth street, September 30 and October 1 and 2.

With the advent of cold weather the growers are feeling anything but encouraged over the coal situation. All sorts of fuel is being used to tide over, but these makeshifts will soon be exhausted. Even soft coal cannot be obtained by many and cord wood and old lumber is being burned.

J. Austin Shaw.

CHICAGO.

The usual market report will be found adjacent to the Chicago wholesale cut flower quotations elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. A. J. Clarke, of Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore., accompanied by his sister, Miss Edith Clarke, was a visitor last week. They went from here to Richmond, Ind., and Springfield, O. (Mr. Clarke's old home), and will later visit New York and Philadelphia. Miss Clarke will remain in New York for the winter to study under the best masters of vocal music, and Mr. Clarke will return home after a few weeks' stay in the East.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth and Miss Annie Kreitling have returned from a fifteen-day absence in the East. In addition to attending the Redmen's Great Council at Norfolk, Va., they visited New York and other eastern points.

August Jurgens has been sending some remarkably fine lily of the valley to market. The spikes are rarely less than a foot in length and on one we counted as many as eighteen bells. He is now cutting a thousand a day regularly. Mr. Jurgens is a nephew of Carl Jurgens, of Newport, R. I., and acquired his experience as a valley grower in his uncle's famous establishment.

Fritz Bahr, celebrated the third anniversary of his wedding last Saturday night. A number of Chicago florists went out to Highland Park to assist in the celebration and were Bahr-ed in over Sunday, after having been introduced to a wedding bell beverage that is ringing yet. Toot-toot!

Anton Then is also in the celebrating line. His 25th wedding anniversary is imminent and he will observe it by taking his wife East to visit his son, who is in charge of a section of rose houses at John N. May's, Summit, N. J. Anton will bake his own cake and grow some fancy carnations on top.

Wietor Bros. are cutting some excellent blooms of the new rose, Ivory, and are very much taken with the variety. It is not only very productive, but the blooms are fine and they sell well in the market.

At Peter Reinberg's establishment in Summerdale the many houses of roses are in fine condition and the plants promise a splendid cut this season. Quite a large proportion of the plants are old ones that have been carried over from last season, having been merely pruned and replanted in fresh soil. Some of these have been bent over to make them break better from the bottom. Beauties, White Fish Bay Resort, Milwaukee, the Convention City next year.

Brides, Maids and Liberties are the leaders, with Perles, Kaiserins and Chatenay in smaller quantities. Sunrise has been planted very largely for a novelty and five or six houses are devoted to it. The young growths of this rose are so very red that the plants are quite attractive even without any flowers. The bloom is not large, but the peculiar combination of colors makes it very attractive. The variety seems to be a very free bloomer.

The carnations here show the effect of the unfavorable season in this vicinity, but are very good under the circumstances, and look as though they would soon catch up.

A team of florists composed of F. Stollery, C. Balluff, E. F. Winterson, P. J. Hauswirth and Geo. Asmus, played three games last Monday night at Anson's in the Illinois Bowling League and made totals of 817, 778 and 775. But the other fellows made totals of 966, 905 and 894, and there you are.

Alex Newett is celebrating the arrival of a son, who made his advent last Tuesday morning.

A vase of the new light pink carnation, Enchantress, has been on display at McKellar & Winterson's this week and the flowers have attracted much attention. Blooms sent for sale have sold readily at $8 per 100.

Weil & Price have opened a floral store at 506 West 63d street.

"The Lincoln Florist" has opened a store at 407 Center street, not far from Lincoln Park.

S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill., was a visitor last Saturday.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of J. Edwin Hauswirth, son of P. J. Hauswirth, and Miss Pearl Brown.

The Chicago Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are Robt. J. Bieg, James W. Taylor and John F. Power.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is in town and reports business as unusually good in his line. He believes that trade will break all past records this season.

H. S. Harman is again at his post (or ribbon) at Hunt's.

The ladies in Bassett & Washburn's store are getting heavier, but would gain more rapidly in avoirdupois if Louis would let their malt marrow alone.

Mr. Edgar Sanders has made splendid progress during the past week. He has been sitting up in a chair an hour or more each day for the past three days and is very cheerful.

Are you preparing to exhibit at the fall show in the Art Institute Nov. 11 to 15? Remember that there will be many out of town visitors this year, on account of the meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and that for the credit of Chicago every local grower should be represented in the show by his best.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is fair, just good enough to keep good stock from accumulating. Roses and carnations are improving. Dahlias are fine and plentiful. Asters are moving fairly well. There are a few orchids to be had. Exceptionally good value is offered in nearly all kinds of stock.

The Wholesale Flower Market.

This week marked progress in the work of starting the market. The directors signed the lease for the third floor of 1224 Cherry street from November 1. The secretary issued the call for $5 a share on the company's stock, to be paid in by October 1. The attorney cried the bans for the second time, once more and we can go to the governor for the charter. Last, but not least, the by-laws were thoroughly threshed out all ready for the stockholders to consider at the annual meeting next month.

A New Rose Place.

A new rose place has sprung up in Germantown, on East Washington Lane. It is only four years old, yet already as large as George Anderson's. This place is owned and conducted by F. and H. Mergenthaler, whose enterprise and hard work are shown by seventeen houses filled with vigorous young roses. They have six houses of Maids, four each of Brides and Kaiserins and one propagating house. Their Maids, one house in particular, were in extra fine condition. All the roses looked well. Kaiserins are run up to Christmas. They are in the older houses, those built when the place was started. A fine house was added this summer. Building, glazing, painting and steam fitting are all done by the regular employes on the place.

The Coal Situation.

The continuance of the strike in the anthracite coal regions has at last forced all our growers into buying some substitute for hard coal. Nearly all are buying the hardest and least smoky grades of bituminous coal they can find to tide over the present famine. The dealers say it is a matter of record that the large factories who have taken up soft coal in the past have never returned to the use of hard coal. It is doubtful whether greenhouses will like it so well. It will be hard on the man who does his own firing, to say nothing of the smoke and dirt.

Notes.

Charles E. Meehan has just returned with his family from Ocean City, N. J.

George Farrell, lately with Joseph Heacock, is now with Edward Reid.

It is rumored that a great Beauty grower, who shipped to New York last season, will be seen here once more this season.

George M. Moss is handling some fine smilax.

Edward Reid is out of town this week.

Julius Wolff, Jr., is making a specialty of commercial orchids in his houses at Twenty-ninth and Sedgeley streets.

W. P. Peacock, Atco, N. J., is sending in many superb dahlias. PHIL.

BOSTON.

The usual market report will be found adjacent to the Boston cut flower quotations elsewhere in this issue.

Talk of a second co-operative market seems to be on the decrease, although it is stated that all that is needed is one or two heavy financial followers, whose names are desired to go upon the lease of suitable quarters.

The Milk Street Cut Flower Co., F. E. Waters, manager, is the name of a new concern at the corner of Milk and Arch streets, which according to the nature of the mixture of water and milk should be "The Emulsion Floral Co." It is now known that this place will carry on all the functions of a first class wholesale dealer in flowers, plants and supplies, and will also let small counter spaces to growers who desire to handle their own products. The quarters obtained are particularly fitted for the business, an immense amount of vault space under the sidewalks being one of its features. Such places vary in their "keeping" qualities for storage of cut flowers, but it is hoped this will prove to be of the best, as it is well partitioned off and particularly well shaded.

Another new venture is the fitting up of a small store near Galvin's, on Tremont street, by the well known firm of street men, Hambo & Gomperts, who generally know pretty well what they are doing and what they are doing it for.

The item concerning J. M. Tuohy, in last week's issue, was an error to slight extent, since Mr. Tuohy is to continue his East Boston store also. And now M. E. Tuohy, the South Boston florist, is establishing a branch in Charlestown, near Thompson square.

The next time you cut any glass with one of those "wheel glass cutters," try dipping the tool in kerosene oil. If it does not work, charge all damages to B. F. Washington, because I heard him recommending the action.

George W. Ayer replenished his exchequer and tickled his bump of vanity by sending some of his asters to the Canadian Horticultural Exhibition and taking several prizes.

The REVIEW starts this week to give more complete schedule of prices than ever before, which will be found upon another page. In its perusal you must remember it is mailed nearly a week before the receipt of the paper, but will at times be corrected by telegraph to meet sudden changes. Prices given will be those paid during the preceding week by inconstant buyers and will sometimes differ from proper prices between a grower and his regular customers, which need not change so often.

ST. LOUIS.

Trade has improved greatly the past week, and from the way the buyers hustled about the wholesale houses each morning for stock, it looked as though everybody had something to do. There was quite a lot of funeral work, and from the reports of some of the large dealers, the regular store business has proved very good, and the amount of stuff sold at our three wholesale houses shows that we are about to enter into a very busy season. In my rounds of some of the leading retail stores a great deal of activity was noticed and a large stock of flowers is being carried.

The usual market report will be found adjacent to the St. Louis wholesale cut flower quotations elsewhere in this issue.

Mrs. Ayers, George Waldbart, Mary Ostertag and Ellison & Tesson, on Grand avenue, are all in splendid shape for a good season's business. The choicest plants of all kinds fill their places and they say that prospects were never better.

Ostertag Bros. will furnish the decorations for President Roosevelt's reception at the Mercantile Club next week. American Beauties and orchids are the principal flowers they will use.

Riessen Floral Co. will again have charge of the decorations for the Veiled Prophet's ball, which will be held on Tuesday night, October 8, at the Merchants' Exchange Hall.

Michel Plant and Bulb Co. held their annual auction sale of plants the past week at their place on Magnolia and Tower Grove avenues. Quite a number of plants were sold, but at very low prices.

We are glad to note in the last issue of the REVIEW that our much beloved friend, Edgar Sanders, is improving, and we all hope to see him, as usual, at the next convention.

Alex Waldbart, Hamilton avenue, has a fine lot of gladioli, which are being bought up by the store men.

Ellison & Tesson have moved their store from Grand and Franklin to Grand and Finney, under the Odean building, which is patronized by the best class of people in the West End. This is, no doubt, a good move for them. The place is much larger than the one they just vacated.

The North Floral Co., at 915 Olive street, has repainted its store and made other improvements, which make the place more attractive.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was in town last week with his daughter on their way to St. Charles, Mo., where Miss Guy attends college this season. Everitt has joined the Belleville All-Star bowling team and expects to bowl at the next convention with our club.

BALTIMORE.

Trade is picking up gradually and there is at times a shortage of roses and carnations. Outside Cochets are abundant and generally good, though usually with short stems. Shipments are heavy of dahlias but they do not seem to catch on to popular favor, though they are used more largely than a few years back, and where massed are handsome and imposing materials for showy decorations. Some fine Kaiserins are coming into this market from West Virginia, and there are others from nearer growers. Not many American Beauties are to be had and the quality of those offering is not of the best.

The event of last week was the assemblying of the Gardeners' Club and the trade in general at Richard Vincent, Jr., & Son's, at White Marsh, in Baltimore county. That enterprising firm had provided a special train for their visitors and something like a hundred spent the day in their greenhouses and dahlia and canna fields. An ample dinner was prepared for the guests and they, in turn, adopted resolutions thanking their hosts for the pleasant outing, commending their enterprise and skill and expressing appreciation of the advanced methods of culture here in evidence.

Among those present were Messrs. A. and Wm. F. Gude, of Washington.

The Messrs. Vincent continue to extend their buildings and enlarge their farm. Several new greenhouses are in process of erection for the accommodation of their immense quantities of cabbage, cauliflower and other vegetable plants and of bedding plants, the growing of which they make their specialty.

This afternoon and evening (Sept. 22) the Gardeners' Club holds a dahlia show. Great quantities of these effective flowers are shown, the largest exhibitors being the Vincents, Fredk. A. Bauer, Henry Fiseher and Jno. G. Rider. The hall is handsomely decorated and no admission fee being charged the attendanee is very large.

Charles L. Siebold, the superintendent of Patterson Park, has returned with Mr. Siebold from a trip to Germany and other parts of Europe. The reception accorded him by his friends testified to the popularity of this efficient official.

C. E. Smith has sold his florist store in South Charles street to Albert Fiedler, an active and enterprising young man, well posted in the trade. B.

CINCINNATI.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

A meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held last Friday afternoon and evening at the residence and farm of Mr. William Murphy, back of Price Hill, and in spite of the fact that it had been raining and was very disagreeable, there were over forty persons present. Mr. Murphy met the party at the end of the Elberon avenue line at 2 p. m., as arranged, and drove them to his plant. The bad weather did not seem to have any effect on the party, as every one was in the best of spirits. At Mr. Murphy's one can see Murphy's White in all its glory. They are in A1 shape and an enormous crop of buds are in sight. All of those in the party were very well pleased with what they saw. Besides this variety Mr. Murphy grows many other varieties, headed by Estelle, which are looking very good.

After going through the houses, the party assembled at Mr. Murphy's residence, where a meeting of the society was held. The principal business of the meeting was adopting a schedule for the fall and winter shows, given by the society and held in their club rooms. These shows are free to the public, and are very popular. This year there will be three shows, the first to be held in November and devoted to chrysanthemums. The schedule, as presented by the committee, was finally adopted with but few changes. Some very good money prizes are offered, and they will bear looking into by out-of-town florists, looking for good things. If you want a schedule address the secretary of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, F. W. Ball.

The society has been greatly honored by the S. A. F. O. H. in that it has been authorized to award a silver and bronze medal of the national society for new and meritorious plants or flowers of American origin, to be exhibited before the Cincinnati society.

A very enjoyable event was the reading of a paper by Mr. J. W. Rodgers, on the trip to Asheville. The paper was very entertaining and highly instructive to those who were unable to attend the convention. A vote of thanks was given him for his trouble.

After the meeting those present were given a most enjoyable repast, and then a social session was held and some songs and piano playing were indulged in to a late hour. After three rousing cheers for Mr. Murphy and family the party was driven back to the car line. All present had a most enjoyable time and will remember it long.

Various Items.

In the civic parade, given by the management of the Fall Festival, there were a number of fire engines and wagons decorated with natural flowers. R. A. Betz did some fine work on two engines, using great quantities of Beauties, besides other roses, and thousands of asters. In the floral contest, which took place on Thursday last, the T. W. Hardesty Co. won the prize for the best decorated table suitable for a banquet for President Roosevelt. The other entry was by the Clifton Rose Houses. For the best bridal bouquet and the best arranged box of cut flowers the T. W. Hardesty Co. took first prize in each and the Clifton Rose Houses second.

I regret to report the death of Mr. Philip Foster, which occurred on Sept. 16. Mr. Foster has for the past 10 years or more been connected with A. Sunderbruch Sons, and was a very reliable man, being an expert flower worker.

The Fall Festival is bringing many visitors to our city, and among them many florists. From Lexington, Ky., came two ladies, who for some years past have been conducting a very profitable flower business there. They are the Misses Anderson and White, and they certainly deserve the success they have obtained.

Other visitors were: Harry Altick, H. W. Ritter, J. B. Heiss and wife and Mr. Tiehlman, of Dayton, O.; Mr. C. A. Rieman, Louisville, Ky.; John Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; James Frost, Greenville, O.; John Adams, Middletown, O.; W. F. Law, Shelbyville, Ind.; J. T. Herdigen, Aurora, Ind.,; Paul Berkowitz, Philadelphia.

ST. PAUL.

Trade has received a decided impetus by the early frosts and the return of the social season. Stock is not very plentiful, though it is improving daily in quantity and quality.

Cool nights and warm days the first of the month caused considerable mildew and rendered night firing imperative. Old roses which were carried over are now coming into crop, though all the flowers are not first class. Beauties are in good demand. From present indications there will not be half enough grown here to go around. Carnations are looking fine and coming into bloom slowly. The first blooms of Enchantress from J. D. Thompson were received the past week. They are a most pleasing flower, large, of good substance and good keepers. They have all the qualities for a good carnation except color, which is rather lighter than the Daybreak. The advent of the Lawson and Prosperity turned the buyers from their former idol, the Daybreak, and light pink is no longer a general favorite. The introduction of so good a carnation in all other essentials may, however, turn the buyers' fancies again to the Daybreak shade.

A few good asters are still being cut, like the last gift of departing summer. L. L. May & Co. displayed some Fitzwygram mums grown by them and cut Sept. 18th. There is no call for mums yet, but this advance guard is sure to create the demand soon.

A few sweet peas, dahlias, nasturtiums, etc., are brought in from outside, but are the sad reminders of "happy days gone by," and only encourage buyers to select choice inside grown stock when they can secure it.

The Donaldson greenhouses in Minneapolis, under the management of James Souden, are in fine shape and a worthy pattern for all in the trade. Two new sash houses have been added this summer in which smilax and asparagus are planted. Their large houses, devoted to roses, are the finest in the state, and the stock in them very hard to beat. Liberty, Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid are grown to perfection. Carnations and mums are in fine condition and everything in or about the houses is spick and span, neatness being one of the cardinal principles of the business.

The general observance of McKinley Sunday, created quite a demand for pink carnations a week ago.

S. D. Dysinger made a flying trip to Iowa last week for rest and recreation.

E. O. Lovell, of Grand Forks, passed through the city recently. He reports business very good and improving all the time.

W. W. Seekins, of Duluth, and Jos. Heinl, of Jacksonville, Ill., were both recent callers.

Seed Trade News.

NEW YORK.

Seed shipments for the fall planting are about over and the seed firms of the metropolis report "a good average season" as compared with other years, the demand constantly increasing.

Bulb shipments are now going out in enormous quantities, and all bulbs this year are exceptionally good in quality, larger than usual, and the demand encouraging. October being the bulb month for outdoor planting, no "let up" in the drain is anticipated, and with the settlement of the coal question an exceedingly busy month is assured. The sales of hyacinths, tulips and narcissus seem to constitute one-half of the entire bulb business of the country.

The demand for Harrisii seems to be below other years to date, for which two causes are given by the experts. First, the supply of bulbs is enormous. Second, the waiting for the settlement of the fuel question is universal. Until the fuel question is decided, there can be no positive basis on which to build.

Cool and wet weather in Japan indicates a short crop of Lilium auratum and speciosum.

On exhibition at Peter Henderson & Co.'s I saw Dr. Van Fleet's wonderful new gladiolus "Princeps," one of the largest and most perfect flowers of this family, a good propagator, pure scarlet in color, with an average of twenty to twenty-five flowers on every stalk. A decided acquisition and of sufficient value in the eyes of its originator to command a prohibitive price for its control.

August Rhotert, the importer, has returned to New York, after a ten weeks' trip in Europe, in excellent health and very optimistic as to the future development of the nursery trade in this country. He contemplates an early call upon his "constituents" in America.

Mr. Jas. McHutchison, the genial representative of Mr. Rhotert for some years, has decided "this is a big country with room for everybody," and has opened an office on Fulton street here, formed a partnership and branched out on his own account in similar lines of the trade, representing several European houses.

ST. PAUL.

J. B. Comont, representing James Carter, Dunnett & Beale, of London, Eng., and S. B. Dicks, accompanied by his son, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., of London, were recent callers on the trade.

Northrup King & Co., of Minneapolis, will soon open a branch retail store. It will be fitted up in modern style and the finest in its line west of Chicago.

Indications for a profitable season's trade are most encouraging. Salesmen have more difficulty in offering the proper varieties than in soliciting trade, and cautious buyers are placing their orders early to obtain the benefit of lower prices.

Onion sets in this immediate vicinity are a very good crop and were all taken care of during the dry weather. Potatoes are a very heavy crop with some indications of rot. Corn has been damaged by frost and will not average more than half a crop. Oats and wheat yielded abundantly. All of these articles, while not strictly belonging to the seed trade, are handled in large quantities by the seedsmen.

L. L. May & Co. have received a patent on their revolving tin seed cabinet, which is being sold in large numbers throughout the country.

WICHITA, KANS.—Ralph Earnest, representing the Albert Dickinson Co., of Chicago, recently spent several days here investigating as to the wisdom of starting a branch house here.

GREENE, N. Y.—The Page Seed Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000. The directors are E. L. Page, Albert Page and C. W. Gray.

MR. S. B. DICK, representing Cooper, Taber & Co., London, Eng., called on Chicago seedsmen this week.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

President Newbold and ex-president Dorrance were in New York City last week and discussed Society matters with Secretary Barron. It was decided to call a meeting of the Executive Committee to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., on the second day of the Penna. Society's fall show. This will be November 12th.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—A children's flower show was recently held under the auspices of the Elmira Horticultural Society and forty-six prizes were awarded. Much interest was developed.

O ye! our buyers here in gay Manhattan,
And you, our shippers true, whose purse we fatten!
Remember, Lilies;—South, North, East and West—
Seem all to know the man who sells them best;
And still this song the Lilies sing—Long live Millang, the "Lily King."

All Kinds of Flowers and plenty of them.

Reasonable Prices. Square Dealing. Out-of-town florists promptly attended to.
